LONDON (SEPT. 20) - The British government on Thursday gave the green light for Fujitsu of Japan's 700 million pound (132 million dollars) acquisition of an 80 per cent stake in British computer company International Computers Ltd. (ICL).

Trade and Industry Secretary Peter Lilley had decided not to refer the deal to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission, the ministry said.

Fujitsu's acquisition of ICL, a subsidiary of the STC group, makes the Japanese company the world's second largest computer concern after International Business Machines (IBM) of the United States.

EINDHOVEN, NETHERLANDS (SEPT. 20) - Troubled Dutch electronics group Philips said Thursday that it was transferring to AT&T its 15 percent stake in a joint venture with the U.S. company.

The Philips stake in AT&T Network Systems International (AT&T-NSI) would be transferred to AT&T with effect from September 20.

AT&T had agreed that the Spanish telephone company Telefonica should take six percent of AT&T-NSI so that the equity would be held 74 percent by AT&T, 20 percent by the Italian Italtel holding company, and six percent by Telefonica, Philips said.

LONDON (SEPT. 20) - New bank credit in Britain in August totalled 4.8 billion pounds (nine billion dollars), according to provisional seasonally-adjusted figures issued Thursday by the Bank of England.

This was up from 3.9 billion pounds (7.3 billion dollars) in July but below market forecasts of an August figure of five billion pounds (9.4 billion dollars).

The Bank also said that MO money supply increased 0.9 per cent in August over the July level, giving a year on year rise of 4.9 per cent, taking the figure back in line with a government target of between one and five per cent growth for the first time since September last year.

The year on year increase in July stood at 5.5 per cent.

Turnover was higher than in the same period of last year, however, at 1.3 billion pounds (2.4 billion dollars) against 1.2 billion (2.2 billion dollars).

The figures were below market forecasts of profit of between 115 million and 130 million pounds.

Interim dividend was up nine percent at 6.4 pence from 5.8, while earnings per share fell to 28.4 pence from 32.

JOHANNESBURG (SEPT. 20) - Three people were killed and 22 hurt Thursday in a blast that rocked an explosives factory at Potchefstroom, 90 kilometres south west of here, state-run Armaments Corporation (Armscor) said in a statement.

Five of those injured are in a serious condition, the statement said.

The "industrial accident" occurred at 8.40 am (0640 GMT) at one of the production buildings at Naschem factory, a subsidiary of Armscor.

The statement gave no details of what caused the explosion.

LONDON (SEPT. 20) - The government on Thursday blocked the takeover by British sugar group Tate and Lyle of its leading rival British Sugar because of concern over its effect on competition on the sugar market.

Trade and Industry Secretary Peter Lilley decided to refer the bid to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission on the recommendation of the Office of Fair Trading because of fears that the deal would infringe rules on competition.

The Commission is due to deliver its report by Jan. 18.

The British authorities had already blocked an attempt by Tate and Lyle in 1987 to acquire Berisford International, which owns British Sugar.

The move would have given Tate and Lyle control of more than 90 percent of the British sugar market.

OSLO (SEPT. 20) - Greenpeace activists tried on Thursday to prevent the British aircraft carrier "Ark Royal" from docking in Oslo harbour, claiming the ship had nuclear weapons on board and was thereby violating Norwegian law.

The activists were removed by the police who confiscated three rubber boats.

Two Greenpeace members tried to stop the British carrier as the ship came into port by jumping into the sea in front of the bow. They were picked up by a police boat.

In a statement Greenpeace strongly protested against the Ark Royal's call, saying the ship carried nuclear bombs which exposed the population of Oslo to an uacceptable risk.

Norway does not allow nuclear arms on its territory in peacetime and the official position is that visiting ships are presumed to respect this policy.

However, Norwegian experts have never inspected foreign naval vessels to make sure they comply with the rules.

In another development a Greenpeace ship left Tromsoe in Northern Norway Thursday for the Soviet island of Novaya Zemlya in the Barents Sea to protest against plans to resume nuclear testing in the area.

Public protests at the main Soviet test site in Kazakhstan have prompted the government's renewed interest in Novaya Zemlya. This island was the main testing ground from 1958 through 1963. Since 1980 only seven test have taken place on the island, Greenpeace said.

On board the ship will be a member of a Soviet group opposing the nuclear testing in Kazakhstan and a local politician from the Soviet autonomous region that includes Novaya Zemlya.

PRETORIA (SEPT. 20) - The South African cabinet has accepted recommendations by unions and employers on changes to controversial labor laws, Manpower Minister Eli Louw said here Thursday.

The decision is likely to bring to an end a 14-month campaign against the Labour Relations Act (LRA) by the million-strong Congress of South African Trade Unions (COSATU), which has used protests, boycotts, mass strikes, pickets and factory floor demonstrations to back its demands that the act be changed.

As part of its ongoing campaign, COSATU had called a one-day national strike on October 8 followed by two days of industrial protest, but Mr. Louw said the trade union federation had now agreed to drop the call.

COSATU and its main trade union rival, the National Council of Trade Unions (NACTU), claim the LRA is anti-unionist -- a view shared by the main employers' body, the South African Consultative Council on Labour Affairs (SACCOLA).

Mr. Louw told a press conference here that changes to the act were agreed by himself and representatives of COSATU, NACTU and SACCOLA last week and represented a "milestone on the road to internationally accepted labor laws".

The main change to the LRA would be on the definition of an unfair labor practice, he said.

"In future a strike or lock-out will no longer be judged by the industrial court on the basis of fair or unfair but on the basis of whether it was legal or illegal according to rules prescribed by the law."

COSATU had targetted in particular a clause which restricts workers' rights to strike and another which enables companies to sue unions for litigation damages.

Under the agreement, which is to be translated into legislation for submission to parliament when it sits again in February, damages can be claimed in the event of illegal strikes and lock-outs.

"This decision by the cabinet is the confirmation of a real effort to draw employers, employees and the state together in order to create a labor system mainly based on agreement and international acceptance," Mr. Louw said.

TOKYO (SEPT. 20) - The Foreign Ministry said Thursday that budget requests for the fiscal 1991 Official Development Assistance (ODA) program would call for a 4.6 percent rise from the current fiscal year to 1,155.8 billion yen (about 11.06 billion dollars).

Of the total sum, sought by 18 government agencies concerned with ODA, grants will amount to 791.8 billion yen (5.779 billion dollars), up 2.4 percent and loans 890.4 billion yen (some 6.5 billion dollars), up 7.8 percent, it said.

TOKYO (SEPT. 20) - Australian Prime Minister Bob Hawke on Thursday criticised food security reasons cited by Japan to protect its rice market as blocking success in Uruguay Round trade talks, government officials said.

The Japanese people "can, at any time, buy goods not domestically made as the world has entered a cooperative era," Mr. Hawke was quoted as saying in talks with Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries Minister Tomio Yamamoto.

While agreeing with Mr. Hawke that the Uruguay Round of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade should end in success, Mr. Yamamoto reiterated Japan's longstanding target of producing its own rice in light of Japan's low grain self-sufficiency of about 30 per cent.

Japan's protectionist rice policy is said to be one of the key obstacles to the successful conclusion of the multilateral talks due to end in December.

Earlier in the day, Mr. Hawke delivered a speech to the Japan Chamber of Commerce and Industry, in which he also demanded that Japan liberalize rice imports.

"Let me say bluntly that the self-sufficiency argument made by Japan in defense of its agricultural protection stands very awkwardly indeed with your tremendous successes as an international trader in nonfood goods," he said.

KUALA LUMPUR (SEPT. 20) - Malaysia's crude palm oil production rose 10 percent in the first eight months of this year to 3.98 million tons from 3.61 million tons in the same period last year, Bernama news agency said Thursday.

Crude palm oil stocks rose by five percent to 536,669 tons at the end of August while processed palm oil stocks were marginally higher at 322,952 tons, Bernama quoted the Department of Statistics as saying.

Malaysia's processed palm oil exports rose 18 percent to 3.34 million tons in the first seven months, the department said.

The main buyers were Pakistan (469,526 tons), Singapore (432,062 tons), China (392,055 tons), India (304,142 tons) and Egypt (175,269 tons).

SYDNEY (SEPT. 20) - International telecommunications giant OTC Ltd. announced on Thursday a 24 percent leap in annual net profit to 234.6 million Australian dollars (194 million U.S.) for the year ended March 31.

The government-owned OTC tipped a record dividend of 104 million dollars (86 million U.S.) into the government's coffers.

Canberra recently decided to merge OTC with domestic telephone network Telecom and allow foreign competition to compete against the merged giant dubbed Megacom.

Managing Director Stephen Burdon said OTC was ready to tackle the forthcoming competition since it was one of the world's most efficient telecommunications carriers.

"We have a proud record of providing amongst the lowest tariffs of all international carriers, plus solid financial returns," he told reporters.

OTC's total revenue soared 18.5 percent to 1.52 billion dollars (1.26 billion U.S.) with telephone traffic into and out of Australia jumping 24.4 per cent over the year.

A special national conference of the ruling Australian Labor Party on Monday will consider "in principle" a decision by the Australian government to establish a second telephone company to compete against the merged Telecom and OTC.

The second carrier would buy Canberra's satellite company Aussat to compete for domestic and international traffic.

BANGKOK (SEPT. 20) - The Securities Exchange of Thailand (SET) has passed new regulations to prevent brokers from speculating with intent to manipulate share prices on the volatile bourse, a bourse spokesman said.

The spokesman said that as of the beginning of the month brokers were not allowed to alter their sales slips without written permission before five p.m. local time.

The amending of sales slips has resulted in widespread cheating during hectic trading, the spokesman said.

The move followed a four-month police investigation into the activities of a sub-brokerage firm and the filing of charges against 17 of its employees for allegedly masterminding a scheme that sent share prices plummeting in the last 10 minutes of trading on January 9.

The Chao Thai Securities Co. employees allegedly spread rumours that Prime Minister Chatichai Choonhavan was resigning in the face of opposition to his shaky coalition government.

The SET index has advanced gradually toward recovery since August when it hit an all-time low.

The spokesman added that the bourse would change its name in January to the Stock Exchange of Thailand to ''reflect its growing international recognition.''

He added that trading floors in most countries were stock exchanges rather than securities exchanges.

About 17 other people were injured in the accident.

LOYOLA, SPAIN (SEPT. 20) - Jesuit superiors from around the world opened an unprecedented "summit" here Thursday, the first of its kind in the order's 450 years of existence, and were urged by Pope John Paul II to step up the battle against atheism.

The 99 priests from 52 countries, speaking a score of languages ranging from English and Spanish to Croat and Japanese, have a 174-point agenda covering mostly internal organisation but also taking in the changes in eastern Europe, poverty, the media and the place of lay people in church life, a spokesman said.

The pope sent a message urging the Society of Jesus to remember the special mandate given it by his predecessor Paul VI "valiantly to counter atheism with all their strength", terming atheism "a fearful danger threatening human society".

Pope John Paul commented the mission required "especial commitment in the new situations thrown up by the collapse of atheistic ideologies."

In a week's time the Jesuits will declare an Ignatian Year to mark the 500th anniversary of the birth of their founder St. Ignatius of Loyola in 1491. The year will run until next July 31, his feast day in the Catholic Church.

HONG KONG (SEPT. 20) - Britain may call for an end to international sanctions against China imposed after the June 4 Beijing massacre last year, a British Foreign Office official indicated here Thursday.

China's "internal and external behaviour" have improved over the past year, said Lord Caithness, the visiting Foreign Office minister in charge of Hong Kong affairs.

Lord Caithness was replying to a question on whether London considered it time to halt international sanctions against Beijing, after he said British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd and his Chinese counterpart Qian Qichen were planning to exchange visits to each other's country.

Britain saw as "positive" China's attitude towards the Gulf crisis and the Cambodian question, the British official said.

At home, "China has shown a willingness to reform," he said without elaborating but in apparent reference to China's release of dissidents arrested since June last year.

"We will seek to improve relations with China," Lord Caithness told a press conference at the end of his six-day visit to the British colony.

He said Britain might ask China for more democracy for the colony before it reverts to Chinese sovereignty in 1997.

The colony is scheduled to have its first direct elections to 18 seats of its 60-member legislature next year, with the number increasing to 20 in 1997.

Britain would look at the showing of the 1991 elections, "and if everybody considers it to be successful we will talk to the Chinese" in a bid to increase the number of directly elected seats, Lord Caitness said.

Lord Caithness acknowledged two other thorny Hong Kong issues with regard to China: the colony's giant new airport project which Chinese officials have tagged a British "conspiracy" to hand over a bankrupt Hong Kong in 1997, and London's plan to issue full British passports to 50,000 key local personnel to help "anchor" them here -- with China threatening not to recognise the passports thus obtained.

Bilateral dialogues would be conducted in a bid to persuade China to drop its reservations over the two schemes, Lord Caithness said, adding that in the passport case, "I am confident they will."

JAMMU, INDIA (SEPT. 20) - Striking women employees of the state and federal government clashed with riot police in Kashmir's summer capital of Srinagar Thursday, leaving some 30 injured, witnesses said.

The women, backed by the Moslem militant Dukhtarani Millet organization, were among some 170,000 government employees on the fifth day of an indefinite strike that has paralysed government offices in the Kashmir Valley.

The strikers are demanding the reinstatement of five senior state government employees dismissed last week for their role in a previous strike protesting alleged atrocities by Indian troops against civilians in the valley.

The witnesses said riot police in several parts of the city, using sticks and batons, beat back the women demonstrators who were shouting slogans against Kashmir Governor Girish Saxena and the Indian government.

The troops and paramilitary were called into Kashmir late last year in an attempt to put down a violent militant-led independence drive in India's only Moslem-majority state.

The strikers also demanded that no retaliatory action be taken against 137 state government officials who had presented a memorandum to world humanitarian organisations appealing for help in halting alleged security forces excesses.

The federally administered government in Kashmir, which borders Pakistan, has so far refused to concede the demands and has threatened more dismissals if the strikers failed to resume work.

Meanwhile, three federal Border Security Force (BSF) soldiers were killed Thursday in a shootout with Moslem militants in Sopore, 50 kilometers (33 miles) from Srinagar, a spokesman said here.

Two others were injured when militants ambushed an army truck ferrying troops from the northern town of Bandipora to Sopore early Thursday, he added.

KAMPALA (SEPT. 20) - Nigerian leader Ibrahim Babangida arrived in Uganda Thursday on a three-day state visit at the invitation of Ugandan President Yoweri Museveni.

General Babangida was accompanied by a 21-member delegation of cabinet ministers and other top government officials.

He will hold private talks with Museveni, current chairman of the Organisation of African Unity (Oau), and tour industrial complexes on the outskirts of Kampala and in Jinja, Uganda's second-largest city.

The last Nigerian leader to visit Uganda was General Yakubu Gowon. He was attending the Oau's annual summit in Kampala in 1975 when news reached him that he had been toppled in a military coup.

RIYADH (SEPT. 20) - Saudi Arabian forces are capable of withstanding an Iraqi attack carried out with chemical weapons, the Saudi Press Agency reported here Thursday.

''The troops are equipped and trained to confront any attack carried out with chemical arms,'' it said.

Saudi Arabia deployed thousands of soldiers along its border with Kuwait when the emirate was invaded by Iraq on August 2.

Unconfirmed reports said Iraq can fire chemical bombs with the help of short-range grenade and missile launchers as well as with Soviet-made Scud rockets, which have a range of 500 kilometres.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 20) - The Front for a Democratic China (FDC), one of China's two leading exiled dissident groups, opens a three-day congress in suburban San Francisco this week to elect a new leadership and plan a new strategy to keep the flames of democracy alive in China.

Some 150 delegates and 100 guests will gather Saturday in a hotel in Foster City, just south of San Francisco, exactly a year after the FDC was formed in Paris.

The first day of the FDC congress will coincide with the opening in Beijing of the Asian Games -- Asia's premier sporting event.

Chinese communist rulers hope the games will raise China's international prestige.

Chinese dissident sources said the FDC congress should help refocus world attention on the Chinese army's massacre of pro-democracy demonstrators in Beijing's Tiananmen Square on June 3 and 4, 1989.

Observers noted that 16 months after the military operation which claimed hundreds of lives, Beijing appears to be slowly regaining respectability thanks to its cooperation in U.N. efforts to resolve the Gulf crisis and the Cambodian conflict.

In a telephone interview Thursday, Victor Huang, an organizer of the FDC congress, said San Francisco was chosen as the venue because it boasts one of the world's largest overseas Chinese communities.

Representatives of the other major Chinese exile dissident group -- the U.S.-based Independent Federation of Chinese Students and Scholars -- will be among the delegates at the congress.

Mr. Huang said delegates would elect a successor to Yan Jiaqi, who is stepping down as the federation's president.

Mr. Yan was an adviser to former reformist Chinese Communist Party Chief Zhao Ziyang.

According to an advance copy of his opening address to the congress, Mr. Yan will review the dissident movement's activities over the past year and will focus on its successes and failures.

Mr. Yan also will tell the delegates that, despite "many difficulties and frustration, we have brought our message to China through a thousand speeches, publications and announcements.

"We made a tremendous effort in promoting China's democratization and continue to put pressure on China's autocrats through international public opinion," the text of the speech said.

His address also highlights the formal links established in East Berlin in April between the FDC and East European democratic movements.

But the FDC's outgoing president also notes that "the road to democracy is a bumpy one."

"Because we lack experience in promoting a democratic movement..., there is still a wide gap between our work and public expectations," the text of Mr. Yan's address said.

In his speech, he also expresses gratitude to the French and U.S. governments and people, as well as to Taiwanese and Hong Kong pro-democracy groups for their support.

Yan Jiaqi, who arrived in San Francisco September 16, has said he would relinquish his post to devote more time to his political science studies.

Lu Keng, a San Francisco-based Chinese journalist and friend of Mr. Yan, said the outgoing FDC president would soon begin work on a book about what he views as the impending collapse of communism in China.

Mr. Lu, who edits Bai Xing, a leading Hong Kong-based, Chinese-language magazine, also said businessman Wan Runnan -- the federation's current secretary general -- was widely expected to be elected president.

The Paris-based FDC has 2,160 members scattered in 11 branches in France, Britain, West Germany, Sweden, Denmark, Switzerland, the Netherlands, Japan, Australia, the United States and Canada.

It also has offices in Belgium, Italy, Austria, Finland, Thailand, Brazil and Ecuador.

The FDC's yearly budget of around one million dollars comes from donations made by overseas Chinese around the world and foreign friends, as well as from members' contributions.

LONDON (SEPT. 20) - The price of North Sea Brent crude oil rose to 33.60 dollars a barrel for November delivery on the London market Thursday.

On Wednesday the barrel price had fallen to 33.25 dollars on profit taking, said dealers.

At the beginning of the week Brent prices crossed the 33 dollar threshhold for the first time since 1982 due to fears of war in the Gulf.

BRUSSELS (SEPT. 20) - A world-renowned chemical arms expert is to advise Saudi leaders on how to detect chemical weapons and decontaminate and treat victims of chemical warfare, informed sources said here Thursday.

Professor Aubin Heyndrickx left for Saudi Arabia Wednesday following an "urgent request" by Saudi officials, an aide told Agence France-Presse.

The Saudi Embassy here would not confirm the report.

Prof. Heyndrickx of Ghent University will give Saudi officials "scientific information on how to detect those terrible gases, as well as on how to decontaminate and treat those poisoned", sources added.

He repeatedly visited Iran during the 1980-88 war between Iran and Iraq and was the first to detect chemicals used by Iraq in 1984 to break the Iranian resistance.

Iraq reportedly changed the poison mix in 1985 to enhance its deadly effects.

Prof. Hendryckx has said that he developed efficient antidotes against toxins used by Iraq.

Several Iranian poison gas victims were treated in Belgium at the time.

TOKYO (SEPT. 20) - Strong domestic demand helped Japan's economy grow by 0.9 percent in the April-June quarter over the previous quarter and by 7.5 percent from a year ago, the Economic Planning Agency (EPA) said Thursday.

The quarterly rise in the country's GNP was higher than most private sector and government forecasts and, EPA officials said, translated to an annual growth rate of 3.6 percent.

Second quarter growth is often weaker because of seasonal factors.

"We expected 0.6 percent (GNP growth). Those figures are quite strong and better than the market expected," said an economist from overseas-owned securities house W.I. Carr.

However, he added that he was concerned about inflation.

Last year the Japanese economy grew by 4.9 percent, but contracted by 0.8 percent in the April-June quarter over the previous quarter and by 3.1 percent calculated annually.

A consumption tax was introduced during the second quarter.

The EPA said consistently strong domestic demand helped produce the higher than expected quarterly figure.

The good results also came after a first quarter affected by political uncertainty and by an unprecedented financial crisis in which the Tokyo bourse fell almost 30 percent and the yen suffered a substantial drop in value.

Business investment grew by 3.8 percent in the three months to June compared to the January-March quarter, while household spending grew by 1.4 percent, the government body said.

Construction expenditure grew by 1.8 percent despite a surge in interest rates it added.

Of the 0.9 percent second quarter growth, the EPA said domestic factors contributed 2.4 percentage points, while external influences took off 1.5 points.

An economist from Nomura Research Institute, a subsidiary of Nomura Securities said he was surprised by the economy's strength and added that growth forecasts for the year would have to be revised upwards.

Although a general economic slowdown caused largely by the Gulf crisis is expected later in the year, most economists said they expected economic growth to match last year's level of almost five percent.

The Bank of Japan said it expected the growth in household spending to be sustained and added that recent indications of confidence among business chiefs were very positive.

Recent studies published by private forecasters on the economic consequences of the Gulf crisis did not expect a disastrous outcome while authorities continue to give reassuring statements.

The Japanese economy has grown consistently for 46 months.

CAIRO (SEPT. 20) - Egyptian authorities have confiscated thousands of gold coins from the Mameluke and Ottoman periods which were discovered by construction workers, press reports said here Thursday.

Workers found at least 3,378 coins in the wall of an old house in Cairo's historic Islamic quarter and tried to sell them, the reports added. But a gold trader informed police after one of the workers approached him.

Archeologists said the coins could sell for millions of dollars.

PARIS (SEPT. 20) - The political committee of the parliamentary assembly of the Western European Union (Weu) Thursday called for the destruction of Iraqi chemical weapons under international auspices.

The committee meeting here also said Iraq had to be compelled to pay damages for taking hostages and for violation of foreign diplomatic missions in Kuwait.

The United Nations was urged, after the restoration of international law in Kuwait, to press for a settlement of the Palestinian question and the Israeli occupation of Arab territory at an international Middle East peace conference.

The Weu defence committee called in a report here for the creation of a joint command structure for Weu forces. It also favoured the setting up of a Weu liaison office in Washington.

The Weu comprises the members of the 12-nation European Community (E.C.) with the exception of Denmark, Greece and Ireland.

JOHANNESBURG (SEPT. 20) - African National Congress (Anc) Vice President Nelson Mandela Thursday blamed the recent bloodbath in black South African townships on the country's security forces.

Mandela, speaking at a funeral of 12 victims of the latest unrest in Soweto near Johannesburg, the largest South African township, warned the government not to abuse the Anc's desire for peace.

''If the government is taking advantage of our desire to have peace, we are going to have war,'' he said.

Mandela rejected the view that the violence in black townships around Johannesburg, which left more than 800 people dead, was the result of a conflict between rival black factions.

''There is a third force operating in this country, backed especially by the security forces... These are the people who are killing our people,'' Mandela told the more than 20,000 mourners who chanted slogans like, ''The Boers are murdering us in Soweto.''

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 20) - A U.S. soldier died Thursday and two others were injured then their jeep overturned during a training exercise in the Saudi Arabian desert, the Pentagon announced.

It was the fourth fatal accident involving troops sent to Saudi Arabia as part of Operation Desert Shield, launched last month to prevent a possible Iraqi invasion of Saudi Arabia.

The Pentagon said the soldiers, who were not identified, were part of the 505th Infantry Regiment of the 82nd Airborne Division.

The three were carried by helicopter from the site of the accident to a field hospital, where one was declared dead from head injuries. The other two, one with head injuries and one with a dislocated knee, were described in stable condition.

On August 12 an Air Force maintenance worker was hit and killed by a truck on a darkened runway. Other fatalities involved a soldier killed in a road collision and a sailor electrocuted aboard the destroyer USS O'Brien in the Gulf.

BANGKOK (SEPT. 20) - Phnom Penh Prime Minister Hun Sen has asked the leading world powers to invite Cambodia's new interim authority to take over the country's U.N. seat, the official Cambodian news agency said Thursday.

Mr. Hun Sen wrote letters to U.N. Security Council permanent members, U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and his French counterpart Roland Dumas, the SPK news agency said in a broadcast monitored here.

The letters requested invitations for members of the Supreme National Council (SNC) -- an interim authority comprising Cambodia's four warring factions -- to attend the current U.N. General Assembly in New York, it said.

Talks here between the Vietnam-installed Phnom Penh government and its guerrilla adversaries collapsed Wednesday over how to bring resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk into the SNC.

(China Thursday blamed Hun Sen for the failure of the first meeting of Cambodia's interim ruling authority.

"Due to the fact that Hun Sen refused to consent to the suggestion of choosing Prince Sihanouk as chairman of the Supreme Council, and his raising a series of bargaining conditions, the first meeting of the Cambodian Supreme National Council failed to lead to any result," a foreign ministry spokeswoman said in Beijing.)

The council is to take over Cambodia's U.N. seat, held until now by a guerrilla coalition joining the Beijing-backed Khmer Rouge with two non-communist factions headed by the prince and former prime minister Son Sann.

Mr. Hun Sen is one of 12 members of the SNC, which is divided equally with six Phnom Penh representatives and two each for the three guerrilla factions.

KHARTOUM (SEPT. 20) - Palestine Liberation Organisation (Plo) chairman Yassir Arafat and Sudanese leader Omer Beshir met here Thursday to discuss the Gulf crisis.

General Beshir told the Sudanese news agency Suna their talks had centred efforts to work out an Arab solution to the conflict.

Their proposal linked the settlement of the Gulf crisis to simulaneous solutions of the problems of Palestine, Syria and Lebanon, he said without giving details.

Arafat told reporters prior to his departure the U.S forces in the Gulf were there to harm rather than to protect Arab interests.

In related development, Beshir received a message from King Hussein of Jordan.

The content of the message was not disclosed, but it was said to contain the latest developments in the Arab peace initiative.

The peace plan topped the agenda of a mini Arab summit in Rabat attended by King Hussein, King Hassan Ii of Morocco and Algerian President Chadli Benjedid.

NEW YORK, United Nations (SEPT. 20) - The U.N. Security Council was expected to adopt resolutions Thursday pressing peace efforts in Cambodia and urging aid donations for refugees from Iraq and Kuwait in Jordan, diplomats said.

The 15 council members, due to meet later in the day, were also expected to ask U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar to reexamine the size and mandate of the U.N. peacekeeping forces in Lebanon, they said.

On Cambodia, the diplomats said, the full council would adopt a resolution welcoming an agreement reached last month by the five permanent council members -- Britian, China, France, the United States and the Soviet Union -- on a framework for a cease-fire and a U.N.-administered transition program ending in free elections.

The council was also expected to call for reconvening the so-called Paris Conference -- a gathering of the warring Cambodian factions, the Security Council permament members and interested Asian nations -- to move ahead on the peace plan.

Concerning Jordan, the council was expected to adopt a resolution based on recommendations put forward by the U.N. sanctions committee -- responsible for overseeing the U.N.-mandated embargo of Iraq -- which will call on U.N. member states to provide humanitarian aid for refugees from Kuwait and Iraq.

Following Iraq's August 2 invasion of Kuwait, tens of thousands of people, mostly Asians, fled those two countries and were stranded in camps along the Iraq-Jordan border.

At one time some 120,000 people were stuck in the camps, but the figure has fallen to about 30,000, according to U.N. figures.

Governments in the Gulf and elsewhere have already pledged about 100 million dollars in humanitarian relief for Jordan to help deal with the flood of refugees.

BRUSSELS (SEPT 20) - The European Economic Community (EEC) has decided to use six million ecus (eight million dollars) in subsidies earmarked for the fight against apartheid in South Africa to help refugees stranded in the Gulf crisis European deputies said here Thursday.

The sum, set down in the EEC's 1990 budget, was to be used to help blacks in South Africa and independent Namibia, as well as countries of the Southern Africa Development Coordination Conference.

Manuel Marin, European commissioner for development, was among those backing the transfer of credits. In a letter to the European Parliament development committee, he said it was a "purely temporary measure" prompted by the "urgency of the situation" in the Gulf.

The EEC has already released 25 million ecus (33 million dollars) since Iraq's invasion and annexation of Kuwait last month to help refugees fleeing both countries.

A further amount 30 million ecus (40 million dllars) was decided on Monday.

Portuguese deputy Joaquim Miranda da Silva, speaking for the European Parliament's communist Left Coalition group, condemned the switch as "unacceptable" and said that it must "in no way work to the detriment of victims of apartheid".

PARIS (SEPT 20) - The French textile and communications group Chargeurs said Thursday its net profit was up 67 percent over last year's but activities had been slowing down in the first half of 1990.

Profits stood at 1.539 billion francs (292 million dollars) following net gains of 1.549 billion francs (293.6 million dollars) in the transfer to Air France of 54.6 percent of Chargeurs' capital in the French UTA airline.

But net turnover tumbled by 41.7 percent to 6.1 billion francs (1.16 billion dollars) from 10.4 billion francs (1.9 billion dollars) last year due to the pullout from UTA and the decline of the textile sector.

Turnover of Chargeurs' textile sector was down 18 percent to 5.1 billion francs (966 million dollars) in the first half of 1990 from 6.2 billion dollars (1.18 billion dollars) last year.

PARIS (SEPT 20) - Air France is about to sign an agreement with USAir aimed at coordinating schedules and services by the two airlines and easing transfers between their aircraft, informed sources said here Thursday.

Air France would not comment on the report.

USAir and Air France have a turnover of between 30 and 35 billion francs (5.69 billion to 6.63 billion dollars) each but the U.S. carrier transported 61 million passengers last year, as compared to 16 million by Air France.

SAARBRUECKEN, West Germany (SEPT 20) - West German porcelain manufacturer Villeroy und Boch on Thursday announced it has taken over its former plant in Torgau, East Germany.

The takeover became effective following agreement by the East German holding Treuhandanstalt tasked to privatize all state-run enterprises in soon-to-vanish East Germany.

The deal provides for the West German company to pay for liabilities of the Torgau plant which employs 550 people, while Treuhandanstalt will keep its assets.

Villeroy und Boch plans to cut 150 jobs but says it will invest 20 million Deutsche marks (12.7 million dollars) to modernize workshops in Torgau, which the company says were Europe's most modern when they opened in 1926.

Villeroy und Boch was expropriated without compensation by the communist authorities 42 years ago in what was then the Soviet-occupied zone of Germany.

The company is the number three in the world porcelain market and posted a consolidated turnover of 1.45 billion marks (924 million dollars) and a consolidated net profit of 35.7 million marks (22.8 million dollars) last year.

PARIS (SEPT 20) - Representatives of the nine countries in the Western European Union (WEU) Thursday called for a "joint command structure" of member forces in the Gulf region.

In a report adopted by the defence committee, the WEU Assembly urged "immediate government-level consultations aimed at creating a joint structure of command and operations" in the Gulf.

"We all wish to rapidly set up an integrated European command", Belgian legislator Armand de Decker, the defence committee's deputy chairman, said.

Dutch Deputy Jaap Hoop Scheffer said that a lot had to be done before "the final stage" of a joint command could be reached.

The report is to be submitted to the Council of the WEU which consists of the foreign ministers of the member states.

A report on the political aspects of the Gulf crisis called on the council to speed up plans for creating an "effective European defence organization".

"We have done more in 40 days than in 40 years", French Senator Robert Pontillon said, referring to two special council meetings here on August 21 and last Tuesday.

France has been pressing for the WEU to be reactivated as Europe's only defence organisation, while WEU Secretary-General Willem van Eekelen has said that NATO was not the right forum for "joint action" in a theatre outside the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation zone, running to the eastern Mediterranean.

WEU countries have 32 ships in the Gulf. France and Britain are also to deploy land forces and fighter aircraft shortly, and Italy and the Netherlands will send aircraft to the region.

The WEU which comprises all EEC countries except Greece, Denmark and Ireland

Tuesday called on the U.N. Security Council to extend the international embargo against Iraq to air traffic and agreed to coordinate their own ground and air forces.

A 10-point statement issued by foreign and defence ministers after a two-hour meeting here said the nine countries would themselves "take all further measures necessary, as soon as possible for the full and effective enforcement of the embargo, with particular attention to air traffic."

LONDON (SEPT 20) - Crisis-hit industrial conglomerate Polly Peck International saw its shares suspended here Thursday after they lost more than half their value in the wake of a series of rumours about the company which swept the market.

The stock exchange suspended the shares "pending an announcement", and later the Serious Fraud Office searched the London office of a fund management company connected with Polly Peck chairman Asil Nadir's family.

Polly Peck's market capitalisation was cut by around 580 million pounds in the slide.

The suspension news contributed to a fall on the London stock market which was down 2.6 per cent. Polly Peck is a significant-sized company, turning over almost 900 million pounds in first half 1990.

It has interests in activities ranging from fresh fruit (Del Monte Foods) to electronics (Sansui).

But the company is also highly leveraged, and there are concerns that Mr. Nadir will be unable to pay for some of the 28 per cent stake he has built up recently when the payment deadline for the current trading account arrives next Monday.

The shares fell 135 pence to 108 pence ahead of the suspension, as a series of rumours about the company, including one report that Turkish-born Mr. Nadir had been assasinated, swept through the market.

Thursday's debacle followed an extraordinary sequence of events which hit the company's share price down from over 400 pence in early August.

On August 11, chairman Asil Nadir announced a plan to buy back the 74 per cent of the company's capital not already under his control. Five days later he withdrew the proposition.

The stock exchange authorities criticised Mr. Nadir for not following proper stock market procedures, and sent copies of its report to the Department of Trade and Industry and the Serious Fraud Office.

TOKYO (SEPT 20) - Typhoon Flo has left 29 people dead, 84 injured and nine missing since it struck Japan, police said in announcing a new toll Thursday.

Damage was reported in 43 prefectures in southern Japan, where at least 12 people were killed in mudslides Tuesday, with Kagoshima the most severely affected.

The typhoon, which reached here Monday, is the worst to hit Japan in 29 years. On Thursday afternoon it was moving toward the Pacific Ocean after sweeping across central Japan overnight, with rain lashing the Tokyo region.

Mudslides were reported in nearly 500 places, while 288 roads were cut off and more than 22,000 homes flooded, police said.

In several prefectures in central Japan, some 720,000 homes were without electricity Thursday.

AMMAN (SEPT. 20) - Saudi authorities, at odds with Jordan over the Gulf crisis, have begun to expel and harass members of the 300,000-strong Jordanian community in the kingdom, witnesses and travellers have reported.

Saudi Arabia has also imposed restrictions on Jordanian imports and has caused disruption in the transport sector by making it difficult for trucks registered here to receive entry permits, transportation officials said.

"Under the pretext of looking for drugs, (Saudi) border officials wrecked my truck," said one driver, an experience several other travellers wishing to enter Saudi Arabia said they had also suffered.

Travellers have also complained of being forbidden to bring supplies bought in Saudi Arabia into Jordan.

"They emptied the bottle of (cooking) oil I was carrying and stamped on the cookies and chocolates," recalled one traveller.

Witnesses have reported expulsions of Jordanians and unjustified dismissals of others who have worked in Saudi Arabia for years.

Jordanian Prime Minister Moudar Badran, acknowledging that Jordanians are under pressure in Saudi Arabia, told journalists here the government "is determined to resolve the problems on the basis of mutual understanding.

"We hope that the differences in our approaches to the (Gulf) situation will not jeopardize Jordanians and will not affect the interests of our people, for that would unjustifiably complicate things," he added.

Saudi Arabia was quick to condemn the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait August 2 while Jordan has shown some sympathy for Baghdad, notably at an Arab summit August 10 where it abstained on a resolution denouncing the seizure of the Gulf emirate.

Saudi Arabia on Wednesday announced that it was restricting the entry and stay of certain foreigners in the country, a measure regional sources said was aimed at Yemen, another Arab state that has shown support for Iraq.

ATHENS (SEPT. 20) - Conservative Prime Minister Constantin Mitsotakis returns Thursday to a country paralyzed for the second day by a general strike, angry at not having been chosen for the 1996 Olympics, short of cash because of a long bank strike and beset by endless power cuts.

Mr. Mitsotakis, who had flown to Tokyo accompanied by a star-studded 200-member delegation aimed at impressing the 86-member International Olympic Committee with Athens' resolve and sophistication, returned a day earlier than expected, officially to avoid a typhoon.

"Out of the typhoon, into the tempest," headlined one Athens paper.

The two-day general strike was called to protest plans for broad cutbacks in salaries, benefits and pensions in the public sector, which amounts to 70 per cent of the economy.

The plans are to be submitted on Tuesday to the parliament, where the conservatives have a majority of one. The government has refused to negotiate with the two labor confederations that called the strike, saying the plan will be discussed only in parliament.

The strike is the fifth since the conservative government took office, but the first to last two days since World War II.

Athens, where four million of the 10 million Greeks live, had been planning celebrations to celebrate its being chosen as a venue for the 1992 Olympics, which will be held 100 years after the first modern Olympics were held here.

Although the pollution level soared to 50 per cent above the alert level to 332 milligrams of carbon dioxide per cubic meter, Athenians had prepared a multitude of functions to celebrate the "right" choice, including a parade of sportsmen and several concerts. Even the stock exchange average rose 6.8 per cent on Tuesday in anticipation of a favourable decision.

A crowd, many holding balloons in Greece's colors of white and blue, had gathered on Constitution Square to watch on a giant television screen the live announcement of the choice.

When the word "Atlanta" was pronounced, a stunned silence fell over the crowd. Cannons did not boom, balloons went unrealeased and hopes for a four-billion dollar urban renewal plan linked to the Olympics, half of it funded by the European Economic Community, evaporated.

The plan would have included a new subway system, a new airport, many new stadiums and a new telephone system.

"It's the victory of Coca Cola (headquartered in Atlanta) over the Olympic spirit," said one disgruntled bystander, echoing a widely-held view.

The disappointment was all the more infuriating for the many Greeks who believe, as President Constantin Caramanlis has often argued, that the Olympics, begun in Greece in the 7th century BC, should be permanently sited here.

On Thursday, Athens faced traffic problems of gridlock proportions. Power cuts intermittent over the past 10 days, increased dramatically, and firefighters were called hundreds of times to free people caught in stalled elevators.

Greek-owned banks were closed for the 14th consecutive day, creating huge cash problems for both individuals and companies. The bank employees, who have their own pension and benefits plan, are seeking to prevent the government from placing them under the general regimen for civil servants.

The government has asked Greeks to support it through two years of austerity aimed at curbing 22 per cent inflation, four times the West European average, and at cutting a public debt that has topped 100 billion dollars.

But when he requested an "Olympic truce" for the days before the Games venue decision, Mr. Mitsotakis found the unions entirely unsympathetic.

The president of the chamber of commerce, Andreas Kyriasis, said: "Industry is paralyzed by the chaos of an unproductive, parasitic public sector."

Government spokesman Byron Polydoras didn't help matters when he answered a query on the extent of the strike by saying: "Two civil servants in eight are working, which is about normal."

PRETORIA (SEPT. 20) - South African President Frederik de Klerk will spend two full working days in Washington next week, during which he will meet President George Bush, according to his itinerary released Thursday by the foreign ministry Thursday.

The last South African leader to be invited to the United States was South African Prime Minister Jan Smuts in 1946.

Mr. De Klerk, who arrives at Washington's Andrews Airforce base early Sunday, will Monday meet U.S. Secretary of State James Baker before seeing President Bush.

Mr. Baker will meet Mr. De Klerk and South African Foreign Affairs Minister Pik Botha for a second time during the two-day visit.

The South Afrian president will later meet secretary of the treasury Nicholas Brady. They will be joined by South African Finance Minister Barend du Plessis who is currently attending a meeting of the International Monetary Fund in Washington.

Among other engagements Tuesday he will go both to the Senate and to the House of Representatives where he will have a closed-door meeting with the speaker Thomas Foley and members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

MANILA (SEPT. 20) - An anti-riot policeman was shot dead in a commercial district in the Philippine capital Thursday after three days of leftist protest rallies, police said.

The killing followed a pattern of assassinations by communist insurgent death squads, who have killed about 200 policemen, soldiers and civilians in Manila in the last three years.

The dead police corporal's unit had been active at protest demonstrations by leftist groups who have been protesting continuing talks on the presence of U.S. military bases in the Philippines.

KINSHASA (SEPT 20) - Zairean authorities have assured the U.S. ambassador here that the trial of those responsible for a bloody crackdown on students in Lubumbashi will take place "soon and in public", the ambassador said here Thursday.

William Harrop, speaking to Zairean journalists, added that Washington viewed the May 11 incident on the campus in the southern copper town, as "very serious, though it has not been possible to establish a toll of the victims".

The official version of events is that Shaba Province governor Koyagialo Ngbaba, currently under house arrest here, sent a commando squad on to the campus to deal with politically motivated student trouble, and one student was killed and 13 seriously injured.

A Zairean parliamentary commission found that at least two people had been killed and 29 hurt, saying that there had been a "massacre" but adding that it was not possible accurately to determine the number of victims.

Amnesty International and Belgian press reports have said that between 100 and 150 students were massacred. The incident soured already difficult relations between Kinshasa and Brussels.

Lubumbashi is the main town in Shaba Province, which tried to secede when the former Belgian Congo became independent.

Mr. Harrop also said Thursday that the Zairean press had a major "contribution to make to the development of democracy in Zaire", where President Mobutu Sese Seko has this year begun opening the way to a multi-party system.

PRETORIA (SEPT 20) - The million-strong Congress of South African Trade Unions (COSATU) Thursday welcomed the South African cabinet's acceptance of recommendations by unions and employers on changes to controversial labor laws.

The Cabinet decision, announced earlier Thursday by Manpower Minister Eli Louw is likely to end a 14-month campaign against the Labour Relations Act (LRA) by COSATU which has used protests, boycotts, mass strikes, pickets and factory floor demonstrations to back its demands that the act be changed.

As part of its campaign, COSATU had called a one-day national strike on October 8 followed by two days of industrial protest, but Mr. Louw said the trade union federation had agreed to drop the call.

The Cabinet decision, COSATU said in a statement, was a "victory for workers" but should be "tempered with some caution".

"Should the parliamentary standing committee tamper with the proposed legislative changes in any way then the whole process may revert back to square one," COSATU said.

COSATU and its main trade union rival, the National Council of Trade Unions (NACTU), claim the LRA is anti-unionist -- a view shared by the main employers' body, the South African Consultative Council on Labour Affairs (SACCOLA).

Mr. Louw told a press conference here that changes to the act were agreed upon by himself and representatives of COSATU, NACTU and SACCOLA last week and represented a "milestone on the road to internationally accepted labour laws".

The main change to the LRA would be on the definition of an unfair labour practice, he said.

AMRITSAR, India (SEPT. 20) - A total of 299 Bangladesh nationals had arrived in India by Thursday on their way home from Kuwait by road through Iran, Afghanistan and Pakistan, witnesses said.

The latest batch of some 120 refugees were greeted by Bangladesh diplomats based in India when they entered the Wagha border checkpost in the northern Indian state of Punjab from Pakistan Thursday.

The group travelled to the Indian border in some 35 vehicles after fleeing Kuwait following the August 2 Iraqi invasion, the witnesses said.

Bangladesh diplomats said that some 179 Banglashis had arrived in India in the same way in the last two days, adding that the high commission (embassy) in New Delhi would be arranging their onward juourney to Dhaka.

The diplomats said they expected those already in India to reach Dhaka in a week's time.

More of Bangladesh nationals from Kuwait were expected to return through the same land route in the coming weeks.

BEIJING (SEPT 20) - The Chinese government Thursday warned countries with which it has diplomatic relations against allowing anti-Beijing activities by overseas Chinese dissidents.

"We are resolutely opposed to any country (which) has established diplomatic relations with China to let those criminals lead activities in their territory " Foreign Affairs Ministry spokeswoman Li Jinhua told a weekly press briefing here.

Referring to the opening this week in the United States of the Federation for Democracy in China (FDC), Ms. Li said: "The purpose of that organization is to overthrow the Chinese government."

"Some of the leaders are criminals wanted by Chinese public security departments for staging the counter-revolutionary rebellion in Beijing," she added.

The FDC, one of the main Chinese dissident organizations abroad since the pro-democracy movement was crushed in June last year, is to begin a three-day congress in the suburbs of San Francisco on September 22.

The purpose of the meeting, whose opening coincides with that of the Beijing Asian Games, is to elect leaders and define a new strategy to fight for democracy in China.

HONG KONG (SEPT 21) - Chinese Premier Li Peng told former Japanese prime minister Noboru Takeshita during a meeting in Beijing Thursday that he appreciated efforts that have improved bilateral relations.

"It has not been easy for Sino-Japanese relations to reach the present level, therefore the two sides should treasure the accomplishment," the official New China News Agency (NCNA) quoted Mr. Li as saying.

He thanked Mr. Takeshita for his efforts in developing bilateral relations and said he was "optimistic" they would continue to improve.

Mr. Takeshita told Mr. Li he believed the 11th Asian Games, which open in the Chinese capital Saturday, would strengthen China's ties with Japan and contribute to peace in Asia, NCNA said in a dispatch monitored here.

The former Japanese prime minister, who resigned in last year on the heels of a financial scandal, conveyed greetings from the current premier, Toshiki Kaifu, and handed Mr. Li a letter from Mr. Kaifu, the news agency said.

Japanese politicians and businessmen are working actively to restore links 15 months after international sanctions were imposed on China following the crackdown on the pro-democracy movement here, observers said.

Education Minister Kosuke Hori was due in Beijing Friday for a three-day visit while a 40-member delegation of Japanese business leaders has been here since Sunday working on renewing a trade agreement, Japanese sources said.

Although Mr. Hori has said he will have no contact with Chinese leaders during his stay, he would be the first cabinet minister from the Group of Seven (G-7) leading industrialized democracies to visit China since the crackdown last June.

Mr. Takeshita and Mr. Hori, who is also sports minister, were due to attend the Asian Games opening ceremony on Saturday.

The Japan-China Association on the Economy and Trade, which arrived Sunday for a five-day visit, was being led by Eishiro Saito, president of Keidanren, the powerful association of Japanese industrial employers.

The delegation held talks with Mr. Li on Tuesday and met President Yang Shangkun on Wednesday.

Tokyo has been the G-7 country most inclined to restoring economic relations with China and announced in July that it was unblocking a 5.4 billion dollar loan to Beijing after gaining approval for the move from the United States.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 20) - Kuwait's ambassador to the United Nations has accused Iraq of evicting some 1,600 handicapped persons, orphans and elderly from health centers in Kuwait City.

In a letter to U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar dated September 19 and made public Thursday, Ambassador Mohammad Abulhasan said 28 of those cast into the streets had died from lack of medical care.

He said Iraqi troops had carried out the operation Sunday.

Since Iraqi troops invaded Kuwait August 2, Mr. Abulhasan has repeatedly denounced reported Iraqi abuses.

The U.N. Security Council has already adopted seven resolutions condemning Iraqi actions, and is preparing to adopt an eighth which would extend a land and sea embargo to air traffic.

WASHINGTON (SEPT 20) - The United States said Thursday it was not seeking a permanent presence in Saudi Arabia, but was concerned about the long-time security arrangements in the region.

Defense Department spokesman Pete Williams denied press reports that some Pentagon officials were considering a permanent military presence in the Gulf once the current crisis has been resolved.

The Wall Street Journal, citing high-level U.S. military officers who spoke on condition of anonymity, reported that this plan included the permanent deployment of 10,000 U.S. troops in Saudi Arabia, guaranteed access to air bases throughout the Gulf and the stockpiling of arms and equipment in the region.

"No one has been given the task of doing that kind of long-term planning," Mr. Williams said.

He pointed out that Defense Secretary Dick Cheney had repeatedly indicated that U.S. troops would remain in Saudi Arabia as long as the Saudi government wanted them there.

WASHINGTON (SEPT 20) - Iraq wants to hook up its oil pipeline network with Iran's in order to sell oil through a U.N.-mandated trade embargo, but Teheran has not yet responded to the request, U.S. officials said Thursday.

They said such a link could be completed in a month, and would allow Iraq to export up to 500,000 barrels a day in exchange for badly needed cash, food and medical supplies.

One of Iraq's major pipelines, which runs along the Shatt-al-Arab waterway, at one point is just eight kilometers (five miles) from a major Iranian pipeline that goes into Iran's refinery at Abadan, said U.S. intelligence experts who asked not to be named.

Iraq had been exporting some 2.7 million barrels of crude oil daily before its August 2 invasion of Kuwait brought on a worldwide commercial embargo.

Iran has agreed to abide by that embargo.

But U.S. official note that warming relations between Iran and Iraq could be in Teheran's interests.

Iraq has already returned thousands of Iranian prisoners of war and withdrawn troops from territory taken during the 1980-88 Gulf war.

WASHINGTON (SEPT 20) - The U.S. Defense Department Thursday ordered a 50 percent increase in the number of reserves for active duty in the U.S military buildup in the Gulf.

The latest call-up of 7,106 soldiers and airmen brings to 21,000 the number of reserves activated for Operation Desert Shield, which was prompted by Iraq's invasion of Kuwait August 2.

In addition, sources said Defense Secretary Dick Cheney might order up some 30,000 more reservists by the end of next week.

Meanwhile Thursday, the Pentagon reaffirmed its confidence in the F-117, or stealth bomber, which can avoid radar detection, despite reports that the plane had been detected while flying over Saudi Arabia.

"The F-117 flies in a slightly different configuration when it's trying to avoid radar detection," said Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams. "It's not surprising someone is able to track it when it's flying training missions."

The French magazine Express, citing sources close to the Saudi military, said the F-17s had been detected by French radar 17 kilometers (11 miles) away.

"The F-117 has been tested against numerous radar systems and we have full confidence in its capabilities," an official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, told Express.

NEW YORK (SEPT 21) - The U.N. Security Council appealed to rival Khmer factions Thursday to reach prompt agreement on picking a chairman for the newly formed Supreme National Council to oversee Cambodia's transition to peace.

In a unanimous resolution, the 15 council members urge ''all parties to the conflict to exercise maximum self-restraint so as to create the peaceful climate required to facilitate the achievement and the implementation of a comprehensive political settlement.''

Going into the council meeting, delegations from the United States and Vietnam

WASHINGTON (SEPT 20) - The U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations Thursday told Congress the United States should pay its 500 million dollars in back U.N. dues because of the U.N. role in the Gulf crisis.

Although several other member-states are in arrears, the United States owes the most, Thomas Pickering told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee here.

"I am disturbed and chagrined by the fact that we are now the largest debtor. Our relationship in the (U.N.) Security Council in recent weeks has not been made any easier by our particular posture," he said.

Other large U.N. debtors include the Soviet Union, which owes the world body 170 million dollars, and South Africa, which owes some 37 million dollars, he said.

WASHINGTON (SEPT 21) - American forces are in for an indefinite deployment in Saudi Arabia, according to reports Thursday.

Pentagon sources quoted by CBS news said the Pentagon sees no contradiction in planning for a longterm troop presence in the Gulf and President George Bush's assurances that U.S. forces will only remain there until Iraqi President Saddam Hussein withdraws his occupation forces from Kuwait.

The troop buildup is now essentially completed, Cbs news said, quoting Pentagon sources, now that the 1st Armoured Cavalry Divison has departed Texas for bases in Saudi Arabia.

The Pentagon is said to be planning to maintain a military presence in Saudi Arabia for as long as Iraq poses a threat. Cbs news said the Pentagon was planning a six-month troop rotation in keeping with the president's promise not to keep men over there indefinitely.

Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said such considerations had not been authorized at top administration levels or by Joint Chiefs of Staff General

Colin Powell.

WASHINGTON (SEPT 20) - President George Bush has thanked his Argentine counterpart Carlos Menem pledging to send Argentine forces and warships to the Gulf as part of a U.S.-led multinational force to deter Iraqi invasion troops in Kuwait from further military action, the White House said Thursday.

"The United States welcomes the announcement by Argentina that it is sending two ships to join the international effort in the Gulf," said presidential spokesman Roman Popadiuk.

"Last night the president sent a personal message to President Menem...thanking him for this strong and courageous action," he said.

Tuesday, Argentine Foreign Minister Domingo Cavallo said Buenos Aires was deploying the warships, a transport aircraft, and a battalion of paratroopers to the Gulf in an effort to avoid "total war" between Iraq and the international force opposing its August 2 invasion of Kuwait.

Thursday, an Argentine Navy spokesman said the Argentine forces would depart for the Gulf September 25.

Mr. Menem's decision to participate in the multinational military force in the Middle East "shows Argentina's support for the world community efforts to uphold international law and bring about an Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait," Mr. Popadiuk said.

"Argentina is the first country of Latin America or the Caribbean to dispatch forces to cooperate in this effort," he added.

LONDON (SEPT. 20) - Westerners fleeing Kuwait who arrived at Gatwick airport late Wednesday from Baghdad told of deteriorating conditions in the occupied country and warned of an outbreak of epidemics.

The 416 Westerners, who arrived aboard an Iraqi Airways Boeing 747 chartered by the U.S. embassy in Baghdad, were mostly women and children and included some 100 Americans, 37 Britons and a few men, according to an airport spokesman.

Medicine and food staples have become rare, according to witnesses, and the streets of Kuwait are strewn with garbage and overrun by hundreds of rats.

"There is almost nothing. We have got water, but that is about all," said a passenger from the state of Utah, who asked to remain anonymous.

"Some people think Kuwait City has been heavily damaged, but it is not. It is dirty. Sickness will probably spread very quickly if nobody cleans the town," he said.

Heidi Storey, an American married to a Kuwaiti, said that 11 members of her family were being held prisoner.

"They have stolen and burnt everything. There is nothing in Kuwait now. I could not take my child safely to the doctor anymore. And you can't get medecine," she said.

"Many of the soldiers are children. Ssome of these men have been two years away from their families. They have raped young Kuwaiti girls as young as 14, 15, 16," asserted Mrs. Storey.

She also said that Iraqi troops had killed 12 doctors while taking away medical equipment and had destroyed 25 homes after one Iraqi soldier was found dead.

Several hundred Iraqis, including several among the 31 expelled on Monday by the British government, were waiting early Thursday at Gatwick to return home, aiport sources said.

Another flight carrying Westerners from Kuwait is scheduled for early next week.

WELLINGTON (SEPT. 20) - Asian companies have bought management rights on several forests from the New Zealand government, Forestry Minister Jim Sutton has said.

In a statement late Wednesday night he said a Hong Kong Chinese company, Wenita, has bought two forests in the South Island for 115 million New Zealand dollars (71 million dollars U.S.). Wenita comprises the Hong Kong based Togen Ltd. and China trading corporation Wide Shine Developments Ltd.

Planted in exotic timbers, the forests cover 20,579 hectares (50,830 acres).

A Japanese venture has paid 40.55 million dollars (25.14 million dollars) for a 10,803 ha (26,683 acre) forest in the Wairarapa province 100 kilometres (60 miles) east of here, Mr. Sutton said.

The companies in the deal are Juken Sangyo, a forestry processing company controlling 75 percent of the venture, and Nissho Iwai, Japan's sixth largest trading company.

As a result of previous purcheses, both from the state and from private interests, Nissho Iwai now has a total of 200,000 hectares (500,000 acres) of pine plantations in New Zealand.

A spokesman for Nissho Iwai in New Zealand said the joint venture was committed to further processing of timber in this country.

Juken Sangyo is a major producer of secondary processed plywoods, especially in fittings, flooring, and doors, as well as laminated veneer timber.

The New Zealand government has now sold management rights to 198,000 ha (495,000) acres) of forests, reaping 862 million dollars (534 million dollars) in revenue. About the same area remains to be sold.

TOKYO (SEPT. 20) - Hitachi Ltd., Japan's largest computer equipment maker, said Thursday it has discovered a new superconducting material which functions at the highest critical temperature yet known of 130 degrees Kelvin (minus 143 degrees Celsius).

Hitachi researchers said, while many copper oxide-system high temperature superconductors had already been discovered, the new material was a non-copper system superconductor and its main component was vanadium.

The vanadium oxide-based composite material also includes thallium and strontium, the researchers said.

The new material is expected to contribute considerably to superconductivity research and could be used in coils of superconductive electric magnets, they said, adding that Hitachi had filed six patents in Japan.

The previous highest known critical temperature for a copper oxide-based superconductor was 122 Kelvin (minus 151 degrees Celsius), they said.

Superconductors conduct electricity with zero resistance, but have so far been found to operate only at extremely low temperatures, requiring expensive cooling equipment.

TOKYO (SEPT. 20) - Average land prices in Japan have soared 13.7 percent in the past year, registering the first double-digit year-to-year increase on record, the National Land Agency reported Thursday.

The report was based on some 25,300 real estate prices registered July 1.

Land prices rose 7.2 percent in the same period the previous year.

Prices in residential areas jumped 13.2 percent while business district prices went up 13.4 percent on average, the report said.

The highest price was recorded in Tokyo's Ginza shopping district at 38 million yen (277,000 dollars) per square meter.

The most expensive residential plot was located in the Sanbancho district in Tokyo's Chiyoda ward, fetching 12.5 million yen (91,000 dollars) per square meter.

LUSAKA (SEPT. 20) - Zambia Consolidated Copper Mines (ZCCM) said Thursday its net profit rose 44 percent in the year to March 31, to 2.6 billion kwacha (81 million dollars) from 1.8 billion (56 million dollars).

Pre-tax profit more than doubled to 5.6 billion kwacha (175 million dollars) against 2.7 billion kwacha (84 million dollars) the previous year.

The company said the improved results were largely due to favourable exchange rates and cost containment.

"There was a considerable improvement in the performance of ZCCM profit during the financial year under review due to the depreciation of the kwacha against the U.S. dollar and also the firmness in metal prices," ZCCM chief executive Francis Kaunda said in a statement.

Finished copper on company account, at 448,468 tonnes, was eight percent higher than that achieved the previous year, Mr. Kaunda said.

Production of finished cobalt was 424 tonnes lower at 4,447 tonnes, while zinc production continued to decline, although this trend "is expected to be halted later this year," he added.

Copper is Zambia's major foreign exchange earner and there has been growing concern over the depletion of ore reserves, but the company said many copper-bearing ores were being evaluated to determine their potential for economic exploitation.

JAKARTA (SEPT. 20) - A leading Indonesian finance expert has called on the government to make judicious use of the country's windfall profit resulting from high oil prices, press reports said here Thursday.

The use of the profit, some 500 million dollars for every one dollar per barrel rise in price, should be used so as not to add to the inflation rate, Presidential Advisor Ali Wardhana was quoted by the Kompas daily as saying.

Jakarta, dependent on oil and gas exports for almost half its revenue, based its budget for the current fiscal year, ending March 1991, on an oil price of 16.50 dollars a barrel.

But prices this week have reached 33 dollars a barrel on Western markets, the highest since 1982, as a result of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Mr. Wardhana, former coordinating minister for economic affairs, did not make any specify proposal, saying that it was up to the present coordinating minister for economic affairs and the finance minister to decide on the use of the money.

But he warned that gains from high oil prices could also be reduced substantially as a result of recession in industrial countries and the subsequent fall in the purchasing power of the dollar.

He said that the repayment of the country's foreign debts, expecially those incurred on commercial terms, should be given high priority.

Indonesia's foreign debts stand at around 50 billion dollars.

What was left over should be used to finance public projects with high import content which Mr. Wardhana said would not have an inflationary impact.

He said the current inflation rate stood at around seven per cent, adding that "this high inflation rate should be pressured down so as to prevent the country's development from being overheated."

KUALA LUMPUR (SEPT. 20) - Malaysia expects foreign exchange earnings from a booming tourism industry to soar to four billion dollars (1.48 billion U.S.) this year, almost double earlier projections, press reports said Thursday.

"The tourism industry is Malaysia's gold mine," Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad said in northern Penang state Wednesday.

He said future earnings could soar "if we treat visitors well and make hospitality and efficiency part of Malaysian culture."

Tourism officials said results so far of Visit Malaysia Year had exceeded their most optimistic expectations with visitor arrivals soaring to 4.6 million during the first eight months of this year, 68 per cent up on the same period last year.

Malaysia's foreign exchange earnings from visitors during that time totalled 2.74 billion dollars (one billion U.S.), Dr. Mahathir said.

"At the rate tourists are comming I think we can top the five million mark this year," Sabbaruddin Chik, the Culture and Tourism Minister, said recently.

He said hotels were full and tour operators were finding it difficult to get accommodation, particularly in Kuala Lumpur, widely regarded as the cheapest of major cities in the Asia-Pacific region.

Some 70 per cent of the tourists come from Malaysia's immediate neighbours, particularly Singapore, Indonesia and Thailand, officials said.

The government drew up an elaborate calendar for Visit Malaysia Year focusing on more than 100 festivities that sought to exploit the country's diversity of races, religions and cultures.

A wide rage of tax incentives were offered hotel and tour operators for overseas promotions, training of personnel and imports of tour buses, among other things, officials said.

Analysts say that at its current pace of expansion, foreign exchange earnings from tourism could soon match those of Malaysia's major commodity exports such as natural rubber which netted 4.3 billion dollars (1.6 billion U.S.) last year.

JOHANNESBURG (SEPT. 20) - White gunmen were among the assailants who mowed down 11 black pedestrians, three of whom died, in the city center here on September 12, according to the South African police.

Police CID chief Lieutenant-General Alwyn Conradie said on Wednesday both white and black gunmen were occupants of a white minibus which drove through the streets of Johannesburg, randomly firing at black pedestrians.

Gen. Conradie said police established the link after investigating the death on Saturday of a white woman critically injured in the shootings.

The city-center massacre is believed to be a spillover from South Africa's worst-ever wave of violence in which more than 700 people have been killed since August 13.

Throughout the conflict, witnesses claimed whites were assisting vigilantes loyal to the conservative Zulu Inkatha Party in attacking township residents, mostly supporters of the black nationalist African National Congress (ANC).

ANC spokeswoman Barbara Hogan told Agence France-Presse on Thursday the organisation had received numerous reports of white involvement in shootings and attacks on residents.

This is the first time that police have indicated that whites could be involved in fuelling the conflict, though President Frederik de Klerk has acknowledged that gangs or small groups of individuals are "organising themselves to kill people, who are innocent bystanders, at random".

LONDON (SEPT. 20) - British pharmaceutical group Glaxo Holdings said Thursday its taxable profit rose 13 percent in the year to June 30, to 1.14 billion pounds (2.1 billion dollars) from 1.01 billion (1.9 billion dollars).

Turnover was up 11 percent from the previous year at 2.85 billion pounds (5.3 billion dollars) against 2.57 billion (4.8 billion dollars).

The result was slightly better than market forecasts of profit of around 1.13 billion pounds, and Glaxo shares were boosted 13 pence to 734 pence in London on the news.

Earnings per share were up 15 percent at 53.1 pence from 46.2 and final dividend was set at 15 pence, taking the annual total to 22 pence, up from 17.5 pence the previous year.

The improved figures were largely due to continued growth in sales of Glaxo's main medical products, including the world's leading ulcer treatment Zantac, and came despite the negative effect of the falling dollar and rising pound.

At constant exchange rates, operating profit would have been up 20 percent instead of the 14 percent actually realised, the group said.

Zantac sales soared nine percent and those of treatments for breathing problems were up 17 percent, but the best performance came in the antibiotics division, with sales up 21 percent to represent 17 percent of total turnover.

LONDON (SEPT. 20) - The British government on Thursday blocked the planned merger of the guided missile activities of British Aerospace and French state-owned company Thomson-CSF, the Trade and Industry Ministry said.

The Monopolies and Mergers Commission has been asked to conduct an enquiry into the planned Eurodynamics joint venture between the two companies and to give its report by December 31.

The decision was taken on the grounds that the French group was nationalized and that the merger threatened fair competition, the trade and industry ministry said.

OSLO (SEPT. 20) - A mystery object inside Norway's territorial waters, believed to be a submarine, is thought to have slipped out to sea after being hunted by Norwegian warships and a navy surveillance plane throughout the night, a navy spokesman said here Thursday.

On Wednesday a frigate fired three missiles close to the suspect object after it was detected on sonar by a Norwegian ship taking part in the NATO exercise "Teamwork 90" currently running in Mid-Norway.

The frigate KNM "Stavanger" issued international warning signals by dropping hand granades in the sea at fixed intervals. But the object, officially termed a "possible submarine", did not surface.

Three anti-submarine missiles were then fired in an attempt to force the object to the surface rather than causing damage, said Defense Command spokesman Per Boethun.

Most likely the "possible submarine" has now taken refuge in international waters, said Mr. Boethun.

The incident Wednesday was the first in Norway where missiles have been fired since a "possible submarine" penetrated the Hardanger fjord on the west coast in 1983.

The Defense Command has not yet decided when to call off the search off the west coast town of Molde.

MANILA (SEPT. 20) - San Miguel Corporation (SMC), the Philippines' largest private firm, has applied to set up a food cannery, sources in the company said here Thursday.

The beer-based food giant, which has diversified into dairy products, processed meat, prawn exports and soft drinks, is applying for tax incentives prior to setting up the cannery, which will initially focus on meat with sauces, the sources said.

The sources would not say how much SMC was expecting to put into the project but Trade Department sources said it would be around 83 million pesos (3.22 million dollars.)

CANBERRA (SEPT. 20) - The opposition has moved to censure Treasurer Paul Keating after he admitted Thursday that he had been wrong to tell parliament that Australia's second largest bank was insolvent in 1986.

In a fresh statement to parliament, Mr. Keating said he had accepted assurances from Nobby Clark, managing director of the National Australia Bank (NAB), that the NAB's savings bank "was not technically insolvent."

Introducing a motion of censure, acting opposition leader Peter Reith said the treasurer had misled parliament.

"Your action has the potential to lead to an erosion of public confidence in our financial institutions," he added.

The row began after Mr. Keating accused banks last month of hurting small businesses by failing to cut interest rates.

Mr. Clark riposted that if he ran his bank the way the treasurer ran the national economy, "then I'd be out selling pencils and shoelaces" in the street.

Mr. Keating hit back Wednesday, saying that "in 1986 the (NAB's savings bank) was technically insolvent and it was rescued by the commonwealth (federal government) of Australia."

He added: "Had it not been for cross-subsidies from the trading bank and subsidies from the commonwealth government, Nobby's board would certainly have had him selling shoelaces and pencils."

Mr. Clark counter-attacked, saying that Mr. Keating had confused profitability with insolvency.

In Thursday's retraction, Mr. Keating told parliament: "If we're getting technical, I'm prepared to accept Nobby Clark's assurance that his savings bank in 1986 was not technically insolvent."

But, he went on: "Obviously, his savings bank was losing money, a point he now concedes himself."

Mr. Keating said that he had alleged that the NAB's savings bank was losing money at the time because it had an excessively high proportion of housing loans fixed at the government-imposed ceiling of 13.5 percent when prevailing interest rates were higher.

The NAB had been saved by the government's housing assistance package in 1986 which boosted the interest rate ceiling for new home loans and provided cash subsidies to banks to help fund loans at 13.5 percent, he said.

PARIS (SEPT. 20) - French luxury goods and champagne group Moet Hennessy Louis Vuitton (LVMH) said Thursday its net profit rose 23 percent in the first half of this year to 1.24 billion francs (233 million dollars).

Consolidated sales were up two percent over the first half of last year at 8.82 billion francs (1.66 billion dollars) against 8.62 billion (1.62 billion dollars), and the group said it was standing by an earlier forecast of a net profit rise of 15 percent for the full year.

The first half net profit improvement was partly due to lower financial costs, a policy to cover exchange rate fluctuations and the favorable impact of its stake in Guinness.

Well-sustained growth in the Far East, particularly Japan, had compensated for a slowdown in U.S. growth, the group said.

But operating profit fell to 2.33 billion francs to 2.35 billion, largely due to a sharp fall in foreign currencies against the franc which had only been partly offset by exchange rate fluctuation cover operations.

BERN (SEPT. 20) - British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher arrived Thursday in Bern to start a two-day official visit to Switzerland with the Gulf crisis and European issues expected to dominate bilateral talks.

Switzerland has joined in United Nations sanctions against Iraq.

Thatcher, who has been to Czechoslovakia and Hungary on her current tour, is also expected to discuss the state of negotiations in Brussels on setting up

"a European Economic Sphere" in which Switzerland is particularly interested.

Switzerland is a member of the European Free Trade Association (EFTA) which is eager to join in a partnership with the European Economic Community. Talks on the project were due to resume Thursday in Brussels.

After meeting Swiss President Arnold Koller and other officials Thursday, Thatcher will go to Basel on Friday for a visit to the Ciba-Geigy pharmaceutical concern then on to Zurich for a meeting with private businessmen.

SEOUL (SEPT. 20) - The South Korean cabinet approved here Thursday an expansionary 38 billion dollar budget draft for 1991, 19.8 percent higher than the current budget, the highest yearly increase since 1983.

At the same time, the cabinet approved a special budgetary supplement for the current year of 3.9 billion dollars.

The 1991 budget draft will be submitted to parliament in October for approval.

Under the draft, defence spending is to reach some 9.6 billion dollars, a rise of 13 percent over 1990 defense outlays and making up some four percent of the South Korean gross national product.

The military spending target represents a victory for the Defense Ministry over the Economic Planning Agency, which had been aiming to keep the defense expenditure rise to below ten percent.

Economic development project spending is targeted for a 33.5 percent increase in 1991, while social welfare outlays are to increase 27.9 percent.

Some critics of the draft in Seoul fear that, together with South Korea's expected GNP growth of 12.9 percent in 1991, the budget could fuel inflation.

RIO DE JANEIRO (SEPT 20) EFE - Malaria and malnutrition have killed off 50 members of the extinction-threatened Amazonian Yanomami Indians so far this year, Brazil's National Indian Foundation (FUNAI) reported Thursday.

Malaria has developed into an uncontrollable disease and many more of the indigenous group will die unless aid and assistance is received urgently, said the report by the government organization.

The document was drawn up by Joao Nicolli Soares, FUNAI's representative for the northern Roraima region where 60 percent of the 10,000-member Yanomami tribe live.

The Yanomami, one of the most primitive tribes on Earth, has been seriously threatened with extinction by the influx into their territory since 1987 of some 40,000 wildcat gold prospectors who have spread disease among the Indians.

Officials estimate that diseases such as malaria and tuberculosis have killed off some 15 percent of the tribe over the past three years.

The Health Ministry calculates that 70 percent of the 6,000 Indians who live in Roraima suffer from malaria, and that even if all goldminers left immediately, the disease would not be controlled for three years.

The FUNAI report came a day after Brazilian President Fernando Collor de Mello authorized the release of dlrs 1.6 million to be used to combat disease among the Yanomamis.

Also Wednesday, Brazil announced it would resurrect its so-called "law of genocide" to try the suspected murderers of two dozen Yanomami Indians since 1987.

The never-used 1956 "law of genocide" carries with it sentences of between 10 and 30 years in prison for those convicted of killing members of ethnic or religious minorities.

Meanwhile, FUNAI, the Army, Air Force, Federal Police and Brazilian Environmental Institut were Thursday to launch a massive operation to destroy more than 100 clandestine runways used by the illegal prospectors.

BUENOS AIRES (SEPT 20) EFE - Argentina registered a dlrs 4.1 billion trade surplus for the first six months of the year, a 66.5 per cent increase over the same period last year, according to government statistics released

Thursday.

Exports for January-June rose 25.7 per cent to reach dlrs 5.86 billion while imports fell 20.1 per cent to dlrs 1.76 billion compared to the same period in 1989, according to the National Institute of Statistics and Census.

The increase in exports was largely due to increased foreign sales of Argentine agricultural produce that farmers were unable to sell on the domestic market, which has shrunk considerably as result of a series of government economic austerity plans.

Earlier this month, the government of President Carlos Menem launched its fifth economic austerity plan in as many months in a bid to stiffle inflation and cut the state's huge fiscal deficit.

The company also announced that further changes might lie ahead.

WHAT'S AHEAD:

FDIC CHAIRMAN WILLIAM SEIDMAN is scheduled to testify today before the Senate Banking Committee on 1988 government thrift deals. ... The Senate is scheduled to vote on car mileage standards today. ... The IMF/WORLD BANK has numerous meetings scheduled throughout the day

FROM THE BULLS:

JAMES BROCK of "Triad Research" says that he is sticking with his prediction of "new all-time highs for the DJIA" and some other stock averages "by Dec. 13, 1990." He notes that all his indicators are pointing straight up. He has changed his very bearish outlook for bonds and is now very bullish there as well. After Sept. 17-20, 1990. he is calling for "one of the biggest rallies in T-bond trading history." (FNN "Marketwrap", 9/19)

"To us, our near-term data is positive, and we could see the Dow rising to 2680 to 2700," says MICHAEL BURKE, editor of "Investors Intelligence." "Our high-low index is showing a shift in momentum from the downside, and there is a lot of cash on the sidelines. Also, the Dow had been showing an ability to come back from morning sell-offs. That's good." ("Investor's Daily", 9/20)

FROM THE BEARS:

"The good news is that the August low should produce another phase of recovery. Those kind of climaxes usually give you a decent market for a couple of months, even though there will be some tests first," says PHILLIP ROTH, technical analyst for DEAN WITTER. The bad news? "I still think it's an interim low within a bear market that has more to run and could stretch out into the early part of next year." Roth says the majority of stocks entered a bear market one year ago and are not in a position to have more than a temporary recovery. But he doesn't think the ultimate low will be much worse than August: "Something under 2400 -- twenty to twenty-five percent off the top is the worst case and we're already off about eighteen percent." (CNBC "Marketwatch", 9/19)

"The Dow is still in the process of testing its recent lows," says ROBERT WIBBELSMAN, portfolio strategist at KAYNE ANDERSON & CO. in Los Angeles. "The market feels like it wants to do some more work on the downside. One sign of that is the way it was ruthless in cutting down a favorite stock like Merck." He does however think "we are getting close to a washed-out bottom." ("Investor's Daily", 9/20)

STOCK MARKET:

"Friendless, trendless, directionless, featureless and stuck" is the way HUGH JOHNSON, chief strategist for the FIRST ALBANY CORPORATION, describes the market. "There isn't any event, or expectation of any that'll stir a sense of urgency to move investors off the fence." He argues that investors are "still gun-shy -- very comfortable with substantial cash positions -- sitting this one out." (NYT, 9/20)

"On a short-term basis, we think the Dow is going to hold in this area above 2520," says JIM STANTON this morning at NEW LONDON TRADING PARTNERS. With so much short-term, bearish sentiment, the market could rally 80 to 100 points from current or slightly lower levels. Stanton then sees the market taking out the August lows with a minimum target of 2400 or possibly the mid-2200s. "Trying to bottom fish in here with the weak stocks is suicide ... stay with stocks that look strong." (FNN "World Business Update", 9/20)

"The market was down on Greenspan's comments. He didn't say anything positive " says S.G. WARBURG trader KEN DUCEY. ("USA Today", 9/20)

Though the market still is focused on oil prices, Mr. Greenspan called the tune yesterday, says JACK CONLON, head of equities at ROTHSCHILD INC. "The market didn't get what it expected. It was looking for more significant easing. Instead, the Fed seems to be locked in neutral. That's disappointing." (WSJ, 9/20)

Over the next week the market will be in the critical process of retesting its August lows, says PETER GRENNAN, head of futures trading at SHEARSON LEHMAN. "If it's successful, the market will turn around and we will experience a good rally during October -- which I suppose most traders don't expect to happen, but it could very well happen." Grennan cautions that the Jewish holiday could reduce volume today and tomorrow, thus increasing volatility from options expirations. (FNN "World Business Update", 9/20)

"I don't believe the ingredients have come together for any sustained rally at this particular point," says MONTE GORDON, director of research at DREYFUS CORP. "I think rather what you would expect and would look for is for the market to kind of find itself a bottom, and that's what it is still trying to do." He says the market "would do well to just hold its ground rather than to worry about if you can start moving up" at this point. He adds, "The market is literally in a sense swimming with values at this point," now may be the time to start considering what you want to buy. (FNN "Marketwrap", 9/19)

STOCK TIPS:

Yesterday CHASE MANHATTAN fell 7 1/2% to a 12 year low. Buy it, says ROBERT ALBERTSON, banking industry analyst at GOLDMAN SACHS. Despite uncertainties about the dividend, the stock's overall yield wouldn't be affected that much if the dividend were reduced, says Albertson. "They are taking a very, very serious cut in expenses which is going to come right to the bottom line. I think people are going to be surprised." His favorite bank stock is WELLS FARGO: "California has an economy that's as good as you're going to get." There he also likes SECURITY PACIFIC, FIRST INTERSTATE and BANK OF AMERICA. (CNN "Business Morning", 9/20)

MERCK & CO. stock slumped 3 1/8 to 76 7/8 yesterday over concerns about its prostate drug Proscar. VECTOR SECURITIES analyst PATRICIA LEA scaled back her projections for Merck's annual earnings growth to 15% from 18% - 20%. She also downgraded the stock to a hold. BOB HANSS at EDWARD D. JONES & CO. says Wall Street's harsh reaction reflects shifts in how investors look at Merck. Still Hanss maintains a buy rating on the stock and downplays the problems of weak Proscar sales. "It wasn't my impression that it was going to be Merck's bread and butter for the future. Merck still has more products over $100 million [a year] in sales than any other drug company." ("USA Today", 9/20)

DELL COMPUTER has emerged as a leading price and quality competitor to IBM and COMPAQ in the PC market. With earnings increasing 200% in the first six months of the year, GORDON ANDERSON, senior editor at "Individual Investor," projects their P/E for the year at only 9, well below the industry. He also likes THE SCOREBOARD INC., a rapidly growing reseller of sports memorabilia. (FNN "World Business Update", 9/20)

MARK STAHLMAN, an analyst with ALEX. BROWN & SONS, raised his rating of MIPS COMPUTER SYSTEMS INC. from a hold to a buy. The recommendation was based on the company's expansion in Asia, where an unspecified Japanese computer manufacturer may begin using MIPS' microprocessors. He also believes Sony DAT tape machines as well as Cannon and Rico postscript laser printers may begin using the company's products. ("Investor's Daily", 9/20)

"The energy stocks I think can go up during this bear market," says DEAN WITTER's PHILLIP ROTH, who believes many investors have been reticent about the group because they worried that crude prices would come right back down. Roth likes COLUMBIA GAS and TEXACO. Aluminum stocks also interest Roth who mentions ALCOA and AMAX. Into weakness, he would buy stable growth stocks like PHILIP MORRIS and COCA-COLA: "I don't think they have a lot of downside risk." He says the worst looking areas are consumer spending and financial stocks. (CNBC "Marketwatch", 9/20)

KIDDER, PEABODY reduced its 1991 forecast on ARMSTRONG WORLD INDUSTRIES by 90 cents a share, to $3, and downgraded the issue to "underperformer" from a "hold." Analyst BARBARA ALLEN says the company faces "a period of turmoil" in the flooring industry stemming from new products introduced earlier this week by a competitor, MANNINGTON MILLS. (WSJ, 9/20)

FALLS CHURCH, VA (SEPT. 20) MCS - A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

MONEY & CREDIT:

"The weaker dollar adds upward pressure to U.S. import prices and hence raises further concern about inflation and instability," says FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD CHAIRMAN ALAN GREENSPAN. ERIK LEHTIS, a New York dealer with France's CREDIT AGRICOLE, says "Greenspan's suggestion that there's a downside to the dollar's decline gave the market ideas that he won't let the dollar fall any further." (WSJ, 9/20)

"I think you will see the gradual appreciation of the yen continuing," says JILL CORE, assistant manager of corporate foreign exchange at FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF CHICAGO in London. "You might see a correction after September 30, but I don't see why the yen should collapse automatically after the end of the half year." (Reuters, 9/20)

"The sentiment has improved [toward the dollar], but the fundamentals really haven't," says MARC CHANDLER, senior strategist at the consulting firm IDEA. He notes that the currency market's initial reaction to Mr. Greenspan's comments "was favorable [for the dollar] because it seemed to downplay the likelihood of a near-term easing." ("Investor's Daily", 9/20)

"No Fed chairman's going to say, 'Hey, the economy's in trouble but I'm not going to do anything about is,'" says ROBERT BRUSCA, chief economist at NIKKO SECURITIES CO. INTERNATIONAL. Brusca adds that Greenspan won't do anything. The Fed, he says, doesn't want to risk sending inflation, now running at a 6.2% annual rate, even higher by jump-starting the economy with lower interest rates. ("USA Today", 9/20)

"It's a tribute to [Greenspan's] ability to keep everybody off balance," says CHARLES COMER, strategist at CL GLOBAL PARTNERS. "The [New York] Times this morning says he was cool to lowering rates, the [Wall Street] Journal said he was going to lower rates. So pay your money and take your choice." (CNBC "World Business", 9/20)

"It is almost academic as to whether you are in a recession or not continues to grow," says MONTE GORDON, director of research at DREYFUS CORP. "It is a very slight growth, certainly nothing of the nature we saw. And what they don't want to do is ease or put more liquidity into the economy at a time when you're really not going to 1 slip over into what would be defined as a recession." He notes that housing, autos, banking and other sectors in the country are in a recession. "What you don't want to do is to begin to inject large amounts of money into the economy or to lower interest rates significantly and then generate an additional inflation pressure which manifests itself further on down the road." (FNN "Marketwrap", 9/19)

Despite widespread concerns about the inflationary impact of higher oil prices the fundamentals still suggest the long term trend in interest rates is down, says ROBERT GOODMAN, senior economic advisor to THE PUTNAM COMPANIES. "Quite frankly, when everybody is panicking is the time you want to act. A nine percent yield, given the kind of economic environment we're looking for, is incredibly attractive." Even if the doom and gloomers were right about the economy, the result would be deflation like the 1930s, not inflation as in the 1970s, says Goodman. "The only way you get that kind of inflation is if the Fed is the engine ... and the markets will not let this Fed inflate." (CNBC "Marketwatch", 9/19)

"If it weren't for the Middle East, the beige book and the housing starts numbers would be met with all kinds of calls for a further easing in Fed policy," says JERRY JORDAN, a senior vice president at FIRST INTERSTATE BANCORP in Los Angeles. "But the Fed is sitting there bound and gagged." (FNN's "Marketwrap", 9/20)

THE ECONOMY:

"Mr. Greenspan now seems to be more willing to run the risk of recession than before," says ROBERT DEDERICK, executive vice president and chief economist at the NORTHERN TRUST COMPANY in Chicago. "The message that comes through here is that if there is a recession, so be it." (NYT, 9/20)

The NATIONAL FEDERATION OF INDEPENDENT BUSINESS' Optimism Index is at its lowest level since November 1986 and AMERICAN EXPRESS' Small Business Climate Index has been falling consistently since the first quarter of 1987. Neither index is expected to improve soon. Uncertainty over the economy is the key concern. "If you're on a high like we've been for the past six or seven years the next day is tough when reality sets in and things begin to slow down," says WILLIAM DUNKELBERG, chief economist for the National Federation of Independent Business. "People are being cautious. They understand that euphoria doesn't last forever." ("USA Today", 9/20)

Housing starts fell 1.7% in August to the lowest level since the last recession eight years ago. "Although we're not technically at a recessionary level, I would describe the [housing] industry as in a recession," says MARTIN REGALIA, an economist with the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF SAVINGS INSTITUTIONS. "Recession is a very technical term that gives very little solace to an individual who has to live and breathe in a particular market." (NYT, 9/20)

"It's hard to find any good news" in the August housing starts figures, says CYNTHIA LATTA, an economist at DRI/McGRAW HILL INC. "There's no reason to see that we're at the end of this housing slump, with mortgage rates high and more news of layoff." ("Investor's Daily", 9/20)

LONDON (SEPT. 20) PR NEWSWIRE - British Gas (NYSE: BRG) has assembled a "dedicated team" to mount a significant exploration and production effort in the United States.

As a start it is expected to be involved in drilling about 20 wells in 1990/91 at a cost of about $80 million. Initially the plan is to concentrate on the Gulf of Mexico and Gulf Coast area.

This is what Robert Evans, chairman and chief executive of British Gas, told the American Business Association in Houston. Evans said his objective was that exploration and production overall should provide at least 20 percent of the company's earnings by the mid-1990s with a further increase by the end of the decade.

Corporate acquisitions would play a role in the expansion of the E and P business and in the past three years the company has spent $1.9 billion in four separate purchases. A particularly important step had been the purchase of Tenneco's International Division. This not only gave British Gas acreage in eight countries but gave the company a base and an experienced international exploration team in Houston.

The team had been built up and integrated into the E and P business. The Houston exploration and production office was responsible for all British Gas' exploration and production activities in the United States, South America and Africa. These included oil production operations in Gabon and Tunisia and exploration in Angola, Argentina, Ecuador, Egypt and Somalia. Total expenditure by Houston in the financial year would be about $250 million including over $140 million on exploration. Most of the wells in America would be drilled as part of joint ventures with Arco and Broken Hill Proprietary. The deal with Arco covered an exploration program on and offshore Louisiana and Alabama and the BHP deal covered areas on and offshore Texas and Louisiana. As part of the Arco deal some shallow discoveries offshore Alabama were being developed. "We hope to have our first US gas production by the end of this year."

Within the next five years the aim was to build up U.S. gas reserves to at least 500 Bcf.

ATLANTA (SEPT. 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Bank South (NASDAQ: BKSO) said today that, in view of current economic conditions, an aggressive internal review of the bank's loan portfolio is being conducted.

"The economy in our market area continues to soften, and the weak real estate industry is now affecting other businesses as well," said Robert P. Guyton, chairman and chief executive officer. "As a result, there is a deterioration in overall asset quality and specific loans in particular.

"We are reviewing the commercial loans in our portfolio and are trying to be very conservative in assessing loss exposure," Guyton said. "We anticipate making a higher-than-normal provision to the reserve for loan losses during the third quarter."

During the second quarter, Bank South made a $34.3 million provision to the loan loss reserve. That second-quarter provision followed a thorough internal review of the bank's commercial real estate portfolio and a targeted commercial real estate examination by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency.

The company said today the current internal loan review is still underway, and the size of the third quarter provision is undetermined at this time. However, the company expects the third quarter reserve provision to be less than the second quarter provision.

"It continues to be our hope that the economy will soon stabilize and we can return to more normal operations," Guyton said. "At this time, however, the economy is continuing to deteriorate, and we believe that the only prudent response is to reserve aggressively."

Due to economic conditions and their impact on asset quality, Bank South said it also expected non-performing loans to increase during the third quarter.

Bank South Corp. is an Atlanta-based, $5.5 billion multi-bank holding company with offices throughout Georgia and the Florida panhandle.

STATE COLLEGE, PA. (SEPT. 20) PR NEWSWIRE - C-COR (NASDAQ: CCBL) Chairman, President and CEO Richard E. Perry announced that C-COR expects first quarter revenues and earnings to be down, resulting in an anticipated loss for the July through September period.

The slowdown in business comes as a direct result of lack of orders caused by the uncertainty in the cable television industry over possible reregulation by Congress and by the current lending practices of financial institutions. The anticipated loss would be the first in over four years for C-COR. Just one month ago, C-COR reported record annual revenues and earnings.

Commenting on the expected results, Perry stated, "If cable legislation is settled quickly and Congress attacks the deficit problem, we expect market conditions to improve dramatically. We are well-positioned for a rapid return to pre-slowdown production levels since our MRP II manufacturing system is running smoothly and our new 40,000-square-foot, state-of-the-art production facility in Tipton, Pa., is up and running."

Perry added, "We anticipate that fiber optic product shipments from our newest acquisition, C-COR/COMLUX Inc., will be at a record high this first quarter."

C-COR, founded over 35 years ago, designs and manufactures high quality electronic equipment used in cable television and data communication systems. C-COR's headquarters is in State College, Pa., with production facilities in Tipton and State College, Pa. C-COR Electronics Canada Inc., a subsidiary of C-COR Electronics Inc., is located in Ontario, Canada. C-COR/COMLUX Inc., C-COR's newest subsidiary manufacturing digital fiber optic products, is located in Mountain View, Calif. FORT WAYNE, IND. (SEPT. 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Thomas C. Griffith, chairman and chief executive officer of Lincoln Foodservice Products, Inc. (NASDAQ: LINN) announced today that Bowles Hollowell Conner & Co., the investment banking firm retained by a special committee of Lincoln's board of directors, had completed its evaluation of strategic financial alternatives to maximize stockholder values, including the possible sale of the company.

Based on their findings, Lincoln's board of directors has discontinued active efforts to find a buyer for the company. "The proposals we reviewed were not in the best interest of Lincoln's stockholders. The board remains confident and optimistic about the company's future," said Griffith.

Griffith noted that customer response to the company's new Countertop Impinger(R) oven has been extremely positive. The Countertop Impinger will be available for broad distribution in January 1991. Griffith also said that customer acceptance of the new, high capacity, Low Profile Impinger oven model unveiled at a major trade show in August, has been positive.

Lincoln Foodservice Products, Inc. designs, manufactures, and markets commercial and institutional foodservice cooking equipment and utensils. PASADENA, CALIF. (SEPT. 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Jacobs Engineering Group Inc. (NYSE: JEC) today announced that it has been awarded two engineering projects by Eli Lilly and Co.

Both projects are located at Lilly's Clinton (Indiana) Laboratories, one of the pharmaceutical company's major manufacturing plants. The projects have a combined constructed value of more than $150 million.

The first project involves an expansion of the chemical manufacturing capacity for pharmaceutical and animal health products. It calls for the addition of a 42,000-square-foot facility at a cost of approximately $90 million. This project is scheduled for completion in early 1992.

The second project involves removing all of the plant's underground chemical storage tanks and replacing them with aboveground tanks set in enclosed concrete containment basins. The change-out will allow visual inspection for integrity, and capturing and containing any possible leaks. Cost of this phase is approximately $60 million. Completion is scheduled for the end of 1992.

Addition of the 42,000-square-foot building will provide Lilly with the increased manufacturing capacity necessary for the production of a number of important products, the company announced. Design of the facility includes environmental measures to reduce the escape of vapors. This will be done through the use of condensers, specially sealed pumps and valves, improved vacuum systems, and reduction in the number of pipe flanges and joints.

Jacobs Engineering Group Inc. provides single-source environmental and hazardous waste management, consulting, engineering, design, architectural, construction, construction management, contract maintenance, and operations services to government and industry worldwide.

The agreement provides for additional payments to HARD of up to $4 million over the next five years based on sales of products using its technology. In connection with the transaction, Doug Hard and Greg Tucker, founders and principal shareholders of HARD, will each enter into non-competitive agreements with Tekelec for which they could receive payments of up to a total of $750,000 over the next five years. Upon the closing of the transaction, Doug Hard, 53, president of Hard, will be named Tekelec vice president, Hard operations and Greg Tucker, 39, Hard's vice president, will be appointed director, sales and marketing, Field Service Products.

The closing of the acquisition is subject to certain conditions and is scheduled to be completed in early October 1990.

HARD, a developer and manufacturer of telecommunications field service protocol test equipment, is based in Huntsville, Alabama. HARD'S products address all the major industry protocols of X.25, ISDN, SNA, and SS7, as they relate to field service applications. HARD's customer profile is similar to that of Tekelec's - the RBOC's long distance carriers, and equipment manufacturers. Tekelec plans to market HARD's products through HARD's existing network of domestic sales representatives, and Tekelec's international distributors and its Japanese subsidiary.

We believe HARD's expertise in field service testing, combined with Tekelec's leading position in the R & D and manufacturing markets for ISDN, SS7 and transmission technologies, will provide Tekelec with a complete competitive range in the telecommunications test systems marketplace."

WALTHAM, MASS. (SEPT. 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Thermo Instrument Systems Inc. (AMEX: THI) today announced that a subsidiary in the Netherlands has received two orders with a combined value of $2.4 million for air-pollution monitors and a process-monitoring system.

Thermo Instrument Systems B.V. is providing more than 60 instruments, primarily oxides-of-nitrogen analyzers, to upgrade and expand the Dutch air-quality monitoring network. The national network detects and monitors emissions of "criteria pollutants" from industrial operations in Holland and neighboring nations. Jac Hamers, managing director of the subsidiary based in Breda, Holland, said, "Over the past five years, we have provided virtually all of the instruments for the 90-station air-quality monitoring network in the Netherlands. Many regard this network as a model for other European countries that are becoming more concerned about pollution and are seeking uniform methods of collecting and analyzing emissions data."

The Dutch subsidiary also received an order to provide a process monitoring and data acquisition system to N.V. Nederlandse Gasunie for its six-station natural-gas exporting network. The network provides fuel to Belgium, France, Germany, and Italy.

"These orders illustrate our expanding capabilities in Europe," said Arvin H. Smith, president and chief executive officer of Thermo Instrument. "We believe that international business will continue to provide substantial opportunities for growth over the next few years."

Thermo Instrument Systems develops, manufactures, and markets analytical instruments used to detect and monitor air pollution, radioactivity, complex chemical compounds, and toxic metals and other elements in a broad range of liquids and solids. The company also provides environmental science and engineering services, laboratory-based testing, and nuclear health physics services. HOUSTON (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - NaTec Resources, Inc. (NASDAQ: NATC) today announced it has made a proposal to acquire Advance Ross Corporation (NASDAQ: AROS) in a stock-for-stock merger. It is expected that, pursuant to the proposed transaction, Advance Ross shareholders would receive, in a tax-free exchange, sufficient shares of NaTec to represent a substantial premium to the recent trading price of Advance Ross. Advance Ross is NaTec's second largest shareholder, holding approximately 13.7 percent of NaTec's outstanding shares. NaTec has offered to construct a floating exchange rate to assure a premium to Advance Ross shareholders at various stock prices of NaTec. NaTec initially proposed an exchange ratio subject to due diligence which could be expected to represent over a 20 percent premium over the recent trading levels of Advance Ross common stock. In its most recent letter, NaTec has indicated that if given the opportunity to evaluate Advance Ross businesses, it would consider a higher valuation to reflect any additional source of value.

The proposal is subject to due diligence, negotiation of the terms of the transaction and definitive documentation, approval by the respective boards of directors and shareholders of both companies, and the absence of any material change in the financial condition or the cash and temporary investments position of Advance Ross. Merrill Lynch Capital Markets is representing NaTec and its major shareholder, CRSS Inc., in connection with this proposal.

Socrates S. Christopher, chairman of NaTec, said in connection with the proposal, "We believe that this represents an attractive transaction for Advance Ross shareholders, given their current indirect investment in NaTec. In addition, it enables NaTec to obtain funds for the development of its technologies and services on a cost-effective basis, given Advance Ross' cash position and 13.7 percent stake in NaTec. This transaction seems consistent with the recent announcement by Advance Ross that it has hired a financial advisor to explore ways to develop and enhance shareholder value. In this respect, NaTec operates in the specific areas in which Advance Ross indicated it is considering expanding its operations."

NaTec is committed to the control of pollutants commonly associated with acid rain. The company provides consulting engineering, injection system installation, operations and maintenance services, and processed sorbent supply. Primary markets are utility, industrial power generation, pulp and paper, refining and municipal solid waste.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 20) PR NEWSWIRE - R. Richard Ablon, president and chief executive officer of Ogden Corporation (NYSE: OG), announced today that the board of directors of Ogden has decided to retain its 85 percent ownership of Ogden Projects, Inc. (NYSE: OPI). "After several months of consideration and analysis, it is the unanimous conclusion of our board that, for the present and foreseeable future, the retention of Ogden Projects as a major division of Ogden Corporation is in the best interest of Ogden stockholders," said Richard Ablon.

"Ogden's complementary capabilities in environmental and energy services, recycling and resource recovery are well-placed to grow successfully in whatever economic climate we encounter in the years ahead. This excellent business foundation, with a recession-resistant growth profile, will enable Ogden to continue its strong dividend philosophy, which is currently providing a yield in excess of 6 percent."

Ablon also announced that the board of directors of Ogden today adopted a Share Purchase Rights Plan and approved the distribution to stockholders of a dividend of one right for each outstanding share of Ogden's common stock. The rights are primarily designed to assure that all Ogden stockholders receive fair and equal treatment in the event of any acquisition of control of the company and to guard the interests of the stockholders against partial or two-tiered tender offers, inadequate offers, open market accumulations and other abusive or coercive takeover tactics. The rights plan was not adopted in response to any effort to acquire Ogden, and Ogden is not aware of any such effort.

STOCKTON, CALIF. (SEPT. 20) PR NEWSWIRE - The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has strongly reiterated its opinion that Ragu Foods' use of the term "fresh" on the label of Ragu Fresh Italian pasta sauces is "false and misleading," according to the California Tomato Fresh Packers Coalition.

The federal agency said it took this position because the Ragu Foods' product is made from heat-processed, remanufactured tomatoes, and the FDA's Compliance Policy guide "clearly covers heat-processed foods as not being fresh."

In a related development, the coalition stated that Rep. Leon E. Panetta, D-Calif., who is Chairman of the House Budget Committee, has asked the FDA for an explanation of what future action the agency will take on the matter of Ragu Foods' labeling practices.

The FDA on April 3 issued a regulatory letter declaring the Ragu label illegal. The company is continuing to use the false claim in its labeling and advertising.

Bob Ilse, a member of the California Tomato Fresh Packers Coalition, said, "We are very pleased that the FDA has said it will not allow Ragu Foods and others to deceptively use the term 'fresh' on labels when their product is made from heat-processed, remanufactured tomatoes."

The California Tomato Fresh Packers Coalition, a group of growing and packing firms whose products are made entirely from fresh tomatoes, was formed to promot e fairness to consumers in its major product areas.

Early in 1990, Reps. Henry A. Waxman, D-Calif., and Edward R. Madigan, R-Ill., as well as several national consumer organizations including the Consumer Federation of America, the National Consumers League and Public Voice protested Ragu Foods' use of the term 'fresh' to describe a heat-processed, remanufactured product. In addition, regulatory agencies in New York and Texas have told Ragu Foods that its labeling practices violate the states' laws and have threatened the company with product seizures.

In its April regulatory letter, the FDA cited Ragu Foods' labeling practices with several violations of the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act. The company replied by saying it was "willing to revise the labeling of Ragu Fresh Italian institutional packs to indicate in an appropriate way...that the product is made from remanufactured tomatoes."

Ragu Foods, which is a unit of Chesebrough-Pond's Inc., also said it was "willing to add the word 'brand' after the trade name Ragu Fresh Italian."

In a Sept. 4 response to Ragu Foods, the FDA said "the proposed revision by the addition of the word 'brand'...will not correct the labeling violations, detailed in the April 3 regulatory letter. The word 'brand' does not sufficiently explain or qualify the false and misleading term -- 'fresh'."

BOSTON (SEPT. 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Eaton Vance Prime Rate Reserves, a $2 billion continuously offered closed-end fund, announced today the establishment of a $300 million commercial paper program. According to Moody's Investor Service this is the first commercial paper program established by a mutual fund investing in bank loan interests. The fund's commercial paper has been assigned the highest possible ratings, A-1+ by Standard & Poor's and Prime-1 by Moody's.

The fund's commercial paper is insured by Capital Markets Assurance Corporation (CapMAC) with a liquidity facility provided by Citibank, N.A. Merrill Lynch will serve as placement agent for the program. According to Moody's "The Prime-1 rating is based on the strength of the bank loan assets and the transaction structure -- the claims paying ability of CapMAC, rated triple A, and the liquidity facility furnished by Citibank."

In announcing the program, James B. Hawkes, fund president, noted that, "The commercial paper program will benefit Prime Rate Reserves by providing low-cost funds which can be used to efficiently manage the unpredictable cash flows associated with a portfolio of bank loan interests. Furthermore, direct access to the commercial paper market as a high-quality borrower ensures that Prime Rate Reserves will have access to funds on favorable terms in an uncertain environment in the banking industry."

Prime Rate Reserves whose goal is an effective yield approximately equal to the average prime rate of leading U.S. banks, invests primarily in senior, fully secured, floating-rate bank loan interests. Eaton Vance Management, the fund's investment advisor, has assets under management of over $7 billion.

ALBANY, NY (SEPT. 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Rates for water service provided by the Spring Valley Water Company, an affiliate of United Water Resources (NYSE: UWR), will increase by 3.6 percent starting today, but customers of the utility will not foot the bill for the rate hike for about two years, according to an agreement reached by the company and the New York State Public Service Commission (PSC).

As a result of the agreement, Spring Valley is permitted to increase its revenues by 3.6 percent, or $1.17 million annually as of today, and by an additional 3.6 percent or $1.19 million annually as of Dec. 1, 1991.

Spring Valley will apply its deferred federal income tax benefits resulting from the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (TRA-86) to offset these rate increases. Customer bills will show an entry indicating a 3.6 percent credit to reflect the TRA-86 tax benefit offset, until the tax benefits are depleted or until the PSC directs otherwise.

TRA-86 lowered the federal corporate tax rate from 46 percent to 34 percent. Spring Valley Water, by directive of the PSC, set up deferred accounting procedures to accumulate and preserve the benefits derived from TRA-86 until the PSC approved a method of distributing the benefits to customers.

Spring Valley filed its first rate increase application in five years in December 1989. The application requested a 10 percent increase to cover increases in operating costs, general tax revenue requirements and depreciation.

In an effort that saved considerable time and expense, Spring Valley reached an agreement with the PSC staff on the issues. According to Haskew, the agreement process benefits the company's customers by reducing the cost of pursuing rate relief.

As a result of the rate agreement, Spring Valley Water will study potential cost-effective conservation initiatives. The company wi ? hire a consultant to determine to what extent a more aggressive conservation program can achieve a reduction in water demand and thus attempt to delay the construction and subsequent rate increases associated with the Ambrey Pond Reservoir.

United Water is a holding company whose principal subsidiaries, Hackensack and Spring Valley water companies, provide water service to about a million residents of northern New Jersey and southern New York. The company has about 16 million shares of common stock outstanding.

STURBRIDGE, MA (SEPT. 20) PR NEWSWIRE - SpecTran Corporation (NASDAQ: SPTR) today announced receipt of an order for approximately $1 million for product intended for use in a variety of multimode optical communication applications.

Delivery will begin in September 1990, with approximately one-half of the shipments scheduled for delivery in calendar year 1991. Sales resulting from this order do not rely on SpecTran's patent licenses and therefore are not subject to the quantity limitations contained therein.

Commenting on the order, SpecTran's president and chief executive officer, Raymond E. Jaeger, said, "This type of business is particularly important because the company then has the potential to grow annual revenues in both 1990 and 1991 beyond the level set by restrictions in one of the company's patent licenses. As a consequence of these and other non-licensed product sales this year, we now expect that 1990 revenues will increase over last year's results of approximately $8 million thus making our goals of positive cash flow for the year and a return to annual profitability more achievable."

PASADENA, CA (SEPT. 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Avery International Corp. (NYSE, PSE: AVY) today reported net income of $13.3 million, or $.30 per share, for the third quarter ended Aug. 31, 1990, compared to $18.9 million, or $.43 per share, in the same quarter last year. Sales increased 6 percent to $449 million from $423 million.

Net income for the first nine months was $54.8 million, or $1.24 per share, compared to $63.3 million, or $1.44 per share, in 1989. Sales increased 5 percent to $1.35 billion from $1.28 billion.

Excluding the impact of legal and other expenses related to the merger of Avery and Dennison Manufacturing Co., quarterly net income was $.38 per share, a decrease of 12 percent. For the nine months, net income was $1.32 per share a decrease of 8 percent.

Charles D. Miller, chairman and chief executive officer, said, "A weak worldwide industrial economy, particularly in the automotive and retail department store markets, as well as significant economic declines in Canada, Australia and the United Kingdom, negatively affected results for the quarter. Additionally, profitability in our European operations continues to be affected by the bankruptcies of three large customers of our specialty diaper tape business and market development costs in our materials businesses. The strong performances of the company's roll papers, roll films and office products businesses in the United States could not offset these major influences."

Miller continued, "I am pleased that our core U.S. office products and roll materials businesses are benefiting from steady market growth and from continued productivity-improvement efforts. Our industrial label businesses in the U.S. and France continue to meet improvement expectations."

Miller said, "Productivity improvement and cost reduction programs are producing desired results at many of our business units. However, we expect weakness in worldwide economies to continue in the period immediately ahead.

Avery also announced today that Avery and Dennison have agreed to give the U.S. Department of Justice until Oct. 12, 1990, to complete its review of their merger. The companies anticipate closing on or shortly after Oct. 12, 1990. The merger was approved by the shareholders of each company on Sept. 11 1990.

CHICAGO (SEPT. 20) PR NEWSWIRE - The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Washington D.C. Circuit today cleared the way for United Airlines' planned Oct. 1 schedule at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport which the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) had approved Sept. 12. American Airlines had requested the Court of Appeals to suspend that approval pending court review of the FAA order.

United Chairman and President Stephen M. Wolf said, "The Court of Appeals ruling is a victory for the traveling public. The FAA's approval of United's new schedule, which the Court of Appeals has allowed to go forward, will benefit all passengers using O'Hare."

American's planned fall operations, with evening arrivals and departures overlapping those of United, would have increased airport congestion. The FAA had ruled that United's new schedule, which separates United's flights from American's, will improve operational efficiency and reduce congestion and delays at O'Hare.

PITTSBURGH (SEPT. 20) PR NEWSWIRE - PPG Industries (NYSE: PPG) will close its Crystal City, Mo., flat glass manufacturing plant by year's end, the company announced today.

Joseph Cafaro, PPG flat glass products vice president, said the large capital expenditure required to modernize the nearly 100-year-old facility to meet current PPG standards is not warranted because of excess capacity in the flat glass industry.

"We regret the effect of this decision on our employees and the community," Cafaro said. "Since the mid-1980s, when we first announced that production likely would end because of industry conditions, we have closely monitored the situation. Economic conditions now require us to implement this decision."

Cafaro said the plant's 273 employees will receive outplacement counseling and other employment-assistance services. Company representatives will meet with officials of the Aluminum, Brick & Glass Workers International Union, which represents the 231 production and maintenance employees and clerical employees to negotiate benefits and other conditions of termination.

Cafaro said no decision has been made regarding disposition of the property.

SAN FRANCISCO (SEPT. 20) PR NEWSWIRE - AT&T today announced that its free fax service enabling family and friends to send messages to American military personnel serving in the Middle East will begin carrying greetings Friday.

Designed as a morale-booster for the troops in Operation Desert Field, the one-way service allows a loved one in the United States to send a single-page greeting from any of the 400 AT&T Phone Centers nationwide, including 40 in the Bay Area.

Messages are carried on special forms available at the Phone Centers. People fill in the forms with the name of a person stationed in the Middle East, the person's APO/FPO address, and that person's military identification number. A designated space for a written message or drawing occupies three-fourths of the form.

After the faxes are sent from the Phone Centers to the Middle East, the Military Postal Service will deliver the messages to troops at regular mail calls. Because the fax messages will be sent electronically, the time required to reach their destinations will be significantly reduced.

Addresses of AT&T Phone Centers can be obtained by calling 800-555-8111, ext. 36, between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, and from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 20) PR NEWSWIRE - The Christian Action Counich -- along with virtually every national American and Canadian pro-life/pro-family organization -- has called for a boycott of corporate supporters of Planned Parenthood, today said that the decision of Dayton Hudson to resume Planned Parenthood funding is "no surprise."

"We expected the reversal," said Douglas R. Scott, director of public policy for the CAC and founder of the project. "We are surprised by what we were once told was a commitment by Dayton Hudson to make Planned Parenthood ineligible for future grants. We were not surprised when the company announced it would resume funding."

Scott said Dayton Hudson, unlike most corporate supporters of Planned Parenthood, has a long history of supporting Planned Parenthood "not just financially but philosophically." He said the Dayton Hudson hierarchy is well known as a supporter of liberal groups. "That's why the reversal was predicted," Scott said. "When you meet with Planned Parenthood officials, you are inclined to support the group's agenda anyway, and you refuse to hear from the other side. It was not hard to figure out what was going to happen." Scott said he was so sure the decision would not last that he left the Dayton Hudson name on the list of corporate supporters of Planned Parenthood.

"It's funny," Scott continued, "Dayton Hudson said it wants to avoid involvement in the abortion debate. But Dayton Hudson has been anything but media shy. We believe that non-involvement means giving money to neither side. Dayton Hudson's idea of neutrality is to give financial support to Planned Parenthood." Scott said that in labor negotiations, the union always asks for more than they expect to get -- even the unreasonable. Management always offers less than they are willing to give -- even the unreasonable. "Maybe our mistake was being reasonable in the first place," Scott said. "We did not demand funding. We simply asked that neither side be funded. So the so-called 'compromise' is to give Planned Parenthood everything it wants.

"We have been in contact with a Dayton Hudson shareholder who intends to seek a legal remedy to this problem," Scott said. Thomas Strobhar is considering suing Dayton Hudson over what Strobhar calls its "submission to Planned Parenthood's extortion-like tactics." Strobhar explains that Dayton Hudson has essentially been told, "'give us money or we'll destroy your business.' Pro-lifers, on the other hand, ask for nothing and gain nothing -- especially financially."

Strobhar said the Dayton Hudson board has "abrogated its fiduciary responsibility to act in the best interest of shareholders. Planned Parenthood is 'shaking down' Dayton Hudson's shareholders. If they (Dayton Hudson) ever stop giving, for whatever reason, Planned Parenthood will do whatever it can to harm the business and, in turn, its shareholders," Strobhar said. "The task of the company is to make money for its shareholders in an upright and legal manner. Caving in to Planned Parenthood's demands does not coincide with this task."

Scott said he believes Dayton Hudson and Planned Parenthood will attempt to use the reversal to impact decisions by other corporations. "What others need to understand is that there is a special relationship here," Scott said. "We believe this has been planned for some time. Dayton Hudson supposedly cancels grants to Planned Parenthood, reverses its decision based on alleged negative reaction to its decision, and then the decision is used to the hilt." Scott emphasized that reports he has received show that most calls to Dayton Hudson supported its decision to stop funding Planned Parenthood. "But that's not what Dayton Hudson or Planned Parenthood would have us believe. They will claim the decision was largely based on an imaginary out-pouring of opposition to the decision."

Scott said the CAC is considering its response. "Dayton Hudson can support any group it wants to support. But they will not be supporting America's No. 1 abortion provider and the world's No. 1 abortion supporter with the money of Christians and other pro-lifers. Therefore, the boycott will not only be continued but intensified. We are considering placing pickets at as many Dayton Hudson stores as possible. Other responses are also under consideration.

"Dayton Hudson's claim that its funds will go into a separate line item category and be used for educational purposes is ludicrous," Scott said. Scott reminds everyone that while Dayton Hudson does not directly support abortions, any restricted funds given to Planned Parenthood releases unrestricted funds for abortion and abortion advocacy. "We have explained this to Dayton Hudson over and over again, and it's like they cannot hear us." Scott also notes that all Planned Parenthood affiliates are required to either perform abortions or refer for them.

TOKYO (SEPT. 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Executives of Acustar, a subsidiary of Chrysler Corporation (NYSE: C) and one of the world's largest manufacturers of automotive components and integrated systems, this week are meeting with Japanese automakers as part of a major campaign to obtain automotive component contracts with Japanese original equipment manufacturers.

According to Acustar Chairman Erick A. Reickert, the company's emphasis and interest in Japan is a result of Acustar's global marketing orientation and the Japanese auto industry's desire to substantially increase component sourcing with U.S. companies.

"The Japanese government's current support of U.S. imports has created a very favorable business environment," Reickert said. "We feel very challenged by the opportunity to enter one of the world's largest yet traditionally most difficult markets."

While in Japan, Acustar executives are meeting with representatives of the Japan Ministry of International Trade and Industry, the U.S. Commerce Department, and Michael H. Armacost, U.S. Ambassador to Japan.

Acustar engineers recently completed an analysis of all major Japanese car lines to evaluate components in use and determine which Acustar components and systems offer enhanced performance, quality and/or price benefits.

These products -- including vapor canisters, automotive vinyl, hard trim, tail lights, automotive wiring, manual transaxles, and electronic engine and transaxle controllers --- are featured in the reception and exhibit used to introduce Acustar to Japanese senior automotive purchasing executives in Tokyo.

Acustar has been pursuing international business. Its international customers include Volkswagen, Volvo, Fiat, Austin Rover, Iveco-Ford, Leyland DAF, Renault and Mitsubishi. Acustar also is a supplier to Diamond-Star Motors, the Chrysler-Mitsubishi U.S. joint venture. Acustar is headquartered in Troy, Mich.

PHILADELPHIA (SEPT. 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Scott Paper Co. (NYSE: SPP) said today it appears earnings for the third quarter and the year may not reach the same levels as the third quarter and full year of 1989, excluding special items in 1989.

Philip E. Lippincott, Scott's chairman and chief executive officer, commented that "the same problems which have persisted over the past several quarters have continued into July and August. I am very disappointed that we have not made greater progress in solving these problems."

Lippincott went on to say that in looking at the different parts of Scott's business, "the company's U.S. tissue operations remain strong. However, significant improvement in some of Scott's other operations is taking longer than expected. S.D.Warren, Scott's printing and publishing papers business, which is undergoing a major capacity expansion, continues to experience high manufacturing and operating costs. Within Europe, the anticipated improvement in performance has not fully materialized due primarily to the weak economy in the United Kingdom and the highly competitive marketplace in France. The results of Scott's foodservice business, despite improvements in a number of areas, continue to be behind plan. And, the company has not yet realized significant benefits from slowly declining pulp prices. Additionally, Scott's performance has been affected by high interest expense because of high capital spending levels necessary to support the aggressive expansion program, increased working capital needs and the decreased cash flow due to lower earnings."

"Despite my disappointment with the difficulties we have been experiencing in implementing our strategies," Lippincott said, "I am confident we can successfully deal with the challenges confronting our business. The market demand for Scott products generally remains strong, and I continue to be convinced that our strategies for growth are sound and will be rewarding."

CINCINNATI (SEPT. 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Eagle-Picher Industries (NYSE: EPI) today announced that sales for the third quarter ended Aug. 31, 1990 were $173.0 million compared with $169.0 million for the third quarter of 1989. Operating income increased to $10.5 million from $4.3 million, while net income was $9.4 million compared with $2.3 million.

Akron Standard Division and the A.D. Weiss Division, which were sold during the second quarter of 1990 and late 1989, respectively, contributed $18.0 million in sales and $1.8 million to operating income in the third quarter of 1989. Net income per share for the quarter was 86 cents compared with 21 cents. Earlier in the year the company discontinued its flight operations and during the quarter, the corporate aircraft were sold. The gain from this transaction contributed 29 cents to net income per share for the quarter.

Although the operating results improved strongly from the weak third quarter of 1989, the Automotive Group remained somewhat soft, particularly at Hillsdale Tool Division and the Plastics Division. Due to the automotive industry's low selling rates and efforts to reduce the inventory of passenger cars, both divisions experienced lower than expected sales volume.

The remaining operations in the Automotive Group experienced reasonably stable levels of business, penetration and experienced above- average growth. Results for operations in the Industrial Group and the Machinery Group were mixed, but generally reflected a lower level of economic activity than experienced earlier in the year.

During the third quarter of 1990, approximately 5,300 new asbestos claims were received compared with 6,000 and 8,000 in the third quarters of 1989 and 1988, respectively. For the nine months, approximately 16,600 new claims were received compared with 17,000 and 17,400 in the first nine months of 1989 and 1988, respectively. During the quarter, approximately 3,400 claims were disposed of compared with 3,500 and 4,100 in the third quarters of 1989 and 1988, respectively, at an average cost, excluding legal and administrative expense, of $6,700 compared with $7,700 and $7,300.

For the nine months, approximately 11,200 claims were disposed of compared with 10,600 and 7,500 in the first nine months of 1989 and 1988, respectively, at an average cost, excluding legal and administrative costs, of $6,100 and $6,300, and $7,200, respectively.

Total settlement, legal and administrative costs for the third quarter were $31 million and for the nine months were $93 million. As of Aug. 31, 1990, there were outstanding agreements to settle approximately 6,000 claims for approximately $41 million with payments scheduled in 1990 and beyond. At the end of the quarter, there were approximately 64,000 claims outstanding. Asbestos costs for the year are expected to be approximately $117 million compared with the $110 million forecasted earlier in the year.

Operating earnings are expected to be under pressure in the fourth quarter and in the early part of 1991, due to projected lower automotive sales. Because of severe limitations on the company's borrowing capacity, its ability to finance both its operational needs and its asbestos costs is dependent on a substantial reduction in annual asbestos costs.

The agreement is the first step in a broader international program to deploy the Graphnet facsimile technology for worldwide access and cost-effective distribution. Czechoslovakia joins the growing number of countries who have signed agreements with Graphnet for electronic messaging technology. Graphnet's joint venture with the German Bundespost's TeleKom network will facilitate direct interconnection for Czechoslovakia, at the desired bandwidth with the Graphnet international wideband gateway.

The advanced facsimile technology soon to be announced by Graphnet will enable subscribers in Eastern Europe to forward facsimile documents at competitively low prices to the United States and Japan, with high resolution and reliability over international links. Graphnet's U.S. subscribers will benefit from the arrangement, as well, with significant cost reductions in forwarding facsimile documents to Eastern Europe -- at a fractional cost of what they now pay through AT&T.

Graphnet, Inc., headquartered in Teaneck, with offices in major metropolitan centers across the U.S. and in Europe, has been a messaging service provider since 1968, and a common carrier providing record and data communications services since 1975.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (SEPT. 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Genus Inc. (NASDAQ: GGNS) is announcing the introduction of its 8720ST system for blanket tungsten deposition. This new entry to the marketplace is a refinement of the Genus 8720 which has been the system of choice for blanket tungsten deposition for tungsten plugs and interconnects in the high volume manufacture of advanced semiconductors since it was introduced in 1988.

Industry standards for system reliability have been raised recently because of the transfer of blanket tungsten to high volume production. At the same time, manufacturers' development efforts toward incorporation of blanket tungsten films into sub-micron devices also demands excellent hole-filling capability while maintaining production throughputs.

The 8720ST is the result of a year-long Genus program to meet the challenge of the new industry standards. The 8720ST provides the semiconductor manufacturer with the capability to fill high aspect holes without voids at an aspect ratio of 3:1 and contact size of 0.4 micron, and at a guaranteed throughput of 30 wafers per hour. The process window has been expanded to a process pressure range of 1 torr to 100 torr and a process temperature range of 350 to 500 degrees Celsius. This very large window allows Genus customers much greater flexibility in the development of their processes to meet their specific needs, than is currently available on the market. The 8720ST also incorporates high reliability wafer handling which has increased system availability for process by 90 percent. Time between system cleaning has been extended to 2,400 wafers which represents an 800 percent increase.

Jim Dodsworth, a Genus marketing manager, in describing the system said, "This new 8720ST provides excellent step coverage required by tighter and tighter geometry needs, while delivering the high throughput and high reliability necessary to keep costs low. The system has been fitted with new software, a more powerful computer which simplifies operation, addresses wafer lot control requirements and provides real- time process monitoring. A patented argon purge eliminates backside deposition over the entire process window, thus eliminating downstream contamination. Shipments of the 8720ST will begin in the fourth quarter of this year," he concluded.

Genus was one of the first companies chosen to be an active participant in the SEMATECH Equipment Improvement Program, and has been working in cooperation with SEMATECH since March of this year to match the 8720 and its critical tungsten CVD processes to SEMATECH's Phase 2 requirements.

Genus Inc. is the leading manufacturer of production equipment for tungsten CVD and high energy ion implantation. Genus products are used in the fabrication of advanced semiconductor integrated circuits by major semiconductor manufacturers around the world.

JERUSALEM (SEPT. 20) UPI - Israeli sources said Defense Minister Moshe Arens secured a U.S. leasing agreement for F-15 jets and Patriot missiles amid the Persian Gulf crisis and a proposed $20 billion U.S. arms sale to Saudi Arabia.

The deal came out of Arens' meetings in Washington this week with U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, during which the Israeli defense minister told U.S. officials his country needed $1 billion in emergency military aid and an additional $750 million in annual defense funds.

Israel sources told The Jerusalem Post newspaper that Cheney and Arens agreed on the leasing of 15 F-15A and F-15B warplanes, two Patriot anti-aircraft and anti-missile batteries and 10 CH-3 cargo helicopters.

Upon his return to Israel Wednesday before the start of the Jewish New Year, Arens said he was generally satisfied with his U.S. trip, but said more work needed to be done. He declined to comment on the specifics of the deal.

Arens said it was not clear when the United States would respond to Israel's request for more military aid, but he hoped the deal was an indication Israel would ultimately receive what it requested.

Israeli officials, awaiting a briefing from Arens, said they believed the deal would be the first such U.S.-Israeli lease agreement.

''It certainly would be considered as a step in the right direction,'' said Avi Pazner, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's media adviser. ''Israel's defense needs have now increased many folds and (the deal) is not a complete answer to all our needs.''

Israel has consistently maintained it must not lose its qualitative military edge in the region and Israeli officials said they have received assurances from Washington. Last week, Saudi Arabia informally notified the U.S. Congress of its intent to purchase about $20 billion in sophisticated aircraft, advanced armored vehicles and missiles.

The Saudi shopping list included 24 F-15s, C and F models, in addition to 24 already ordered by the Saudis in a package sent to Congress Sept. 4, 385 M-1 tanks, and between 20 to 28 Patriot missiles, which can intercept incoming ballistic missiles and aircraft.

''Israel is in need of instruments that are vital for her defense, and she has to receive it not in the frame of the regular defense assistance, meaning in exchange for payment,'' Shamir told Army Radio.

Israel receives $3 billion in U.S. economic and military assistance, of which an estimated $1.8 billion is in military aid.

''The U.S. is committed to maintaining Israel's technological superiority,'' Assistant U.S. Secretary of Defense Henry Rowen told The Jerusalem Post. ''We've had an intense series of meetings the last couple of days. I hope (Arens) feels pretty good about it.''

(SEPT. 20) UPI - The House voted along mostly party lines Wednesday and approved a 283-BILLION-dollar defense authorization bill. The bill includes one- BILLION dollars for Operation Desert Shield items, such as danger pay for military personnel stationed in Saudi Arabia. President Bush may veto the bill because it kills the B-2 stealth bomber and cuts in half the amount Bush sought for the ''Star Wars'' program.

A U-S-chartered Iraqi Airways plane landed at London's Gatwick Airport Wednesday evening, carrying 328 American women and children who were trapped in Kuwait. One more evacuation flight is scheduled to leave Kuwait Saturday. A State Department spokeswoman says the U-S Embassy in Kuwait believes every American who is able to leave and wants to leave will have been taken care of... and there will be NO more evacuation flights.

Colombia's largest newspaper reported Wednesday the son of the paper's publisher was kidnapped and his bodyguard killed. 28- year-old Francisco Santos Calderon, a news editor at the paper, was abducted shortly after leaving work in a bullet-proof vehicle accompanied by his bodyguard-chauffeur.

NASA has brought in an independent team of agency engineers to conduct a thorough search for the source of a hydrogen fuel leak aboard the shuttle Columbia. The crippling leak has indefinitely grounded Columbia. Despite the setback, NASA is pressing forward with plans to launch the shuttle Discovery October 5th to deploy the Ulysses solar probe into space.

(SEPT. 20) UPI - The State Department said most Americans who can leave Iraq and Kuwait have done so, while sources said the United States would send more jet fighters and missiles to Israel as Arab nations seek additional firepower amid the Persian Gulf crisis.

Iraq announced it passed a law allowing it to seize assets of governments and companies that have frozen Iraqi assets abroad and declared that it was no longer responsible for the safety of foreign property in occupied Kuwait and Iraq.

A U.S.-chartered Iraqi Airways plane landed Wednesday at London's Gatwick Airport with 328 American women and children, 35 Britons and an unknown number of other foreign nationals. The Americans spent the night in London and were to fly Thursday to Raleigh, N.C.

One more flight is tentatively scheduled to leave Kuwait Saturday, said State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler. With that flight, she said, the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait believes that every American who is able to leave and wants to leave will have been taken care of and there will be no more evacuation charter flights.

So far, about 1,700 Americans, mainly women and children, have been airlifted out of Kuwait and Iraq since the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait by Iraqi forces.

Tutwiler said that some women who are American citizens have decided to remain in Kuwait with their husbands.

According to State Department estimates, some 1,200 Americans remain in Kuwait and another 120 in Iraq, including diplomatic personnel in the embassies in Kuwait and Baghdad.

''Iraq's barbaric hostage-holding continues. Men from numerous countries are not being allowed to depart and obviously are being held there against their will. We and the rest of the international community will continue to press for the right of departure of all foreigners and for the release of those who the Iraqis detain,'' Tutwiler said.

In Jerusalem, Israeli sources said Defense Minister Moshe Arens secured a U.S. leasing agreement for F-15 jets and Patriot missiles amid the Persian Gulf crisis and a proposed $20 billion U.S. arms sale to Saudi Arabia.

The deal came out of Arens' meetings in Washington this week with Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, during which the Israeli defense minister told U.S. officials his country needed $1 billion in emergency military aid and an additional $750 million in annual defense funds.

Israel sources told The Jerusalem Post newspaper that Cheney and Arens agreed on the leasing of 15 F-15A and F-15B warplanes, two Patriot anti-aircraft and anti-missile batteries and 10 CH-3 cargo helicopters.

Israel has consistently maintained it must not lose its qualitative military edge in the region and Israeli officials said they have received assurances from Washington. Last week, Saudi Arabia informally notified the U.S. Congress of its intent to purchase about $20 billion in sophisticated aircraft, advanced armored vehicles and missiles.

The Saudi shopping list included 24 F-15s, C and F models, in addition to 24 already ordered by the Saudis in a package sent to Congress Sept. 4, 385 M-1 tanks, and between 20 to 28 Patriot missiles, which can intercept incoming ballistic missiles and aircraft.

The Saudis believe they have the support in the administration and Congress to get the whole package in one shot.

The U.N. Security Council prepared to discuss an air embargo against Iraq to tighten enforcement of economic sanctions imposed after the invasion of Kuwait. Yuliy Vorontsov of the Soviet Union, president of the Security Council this month, said the council would take up the issue of a possible air embargo Friday. Nine Western European nations have called for the air embargo to prevent supplies reaching Baghdad by air in violation of the U.N. embargo.

France said two more French civilians were captured in Kuwait this week and taken to unknown destinations. Iraqi President Saddam Hussein has been holding foreign men at vital installations against a possible attack by the U.S.-led multinational force in the Persian Gulf area.

The Iraqi News Agency reported that Iraq passed an eight-part law giving Baghdad the go-ahead to seize assets of governments and companies that have frozen Iraqi assets abroad.

''The seventh article of the law provided for seizing all assets and their revenues belonging to the governments, institutions, companies and banks of the countries that had issued oppressive resolutions against Iraq,'' INA said.

The law stated ''the Iraqi side would not be responsible for any direct or indirect damage'' to their property, equipment and machinery.

It was not immediately clear if the law meant Iraq would immediately seize the assets or whether it was reserving the option to do so.

Diplomats said they could not determine how much foreign assets in Iraq and Kuwait were worth. Oil and other major industries have been state-owned in Iraq and outsiders were allowed to hold few assets there.

Many major companies, especially in the construction and oil industries, did business in the oil-rich emirate and left behind offices and some equipment in the rush to evacuate foreign nationals from the region.

The INA said the ruling council passed the latest law after declaring international freeze on Iraqi assets ''null and void'' and said it ''held banks abroad fully responsible in protecting Iraqi assets deposited with them and their due commercial interests and other profits and rights.''

(SEPT. 20) UPI - Doug Drabek notched No. 20 and Barry Bonds reached 30-30. But the most important number to the Pittsburgh Pirates Wednesday stopped at 6.

Drabek became Pittsburgh's first 20-game winner in 13 years and Barry Bonds joined the exclusive 30-30 club by belting his 30th and 31st home runs to give the Pirates an 8-7 victory over the Chicago Cubs and snap a six-game losing streak.

The victory gives Pittsburgh a one-game lead over the New York Mets in the National League East. The Mets game with Montreal was rained out Wednesday night in New York.

Drabek, 20-6, scattered seven hits over 7 1-3 innings to notch his sixth win in his last seven decisions. John Candelaria was the Pirates' last 20-game winner in 1977, finishing 20-5.

Drabek, a solid Cy Young candidate, raised his record to an impressive 12-3 following a Pirates' loss.

''The main thing is that we put up a 'win' in the win column and right now that's the main thing - keep putting up as many 'W's' as we can until the end of the season,'' Drabek said.

''He's the guy who's stepped in to win when we needed the big one,'' Pirates Manager Jim Leyland said.

Bonds, who has 49 stolen bases, is the first Pirate to reach the 30- 30 club, the eighth player in the National League and 13th in the majors.

He joins his father, Bobby Bonds who was a member of the 30-30 club five times in his major league career. They are the first father-son combination to do so.

''I wanted to reach the (30-30) goal to put my father and myself in a class that I don't think anybody will ever accomplish,'' Barry Bonds said. ''Everyone has asked me 'what's your biggest goal?' and obviously your goal is the Hall of Fame because that's as far as you can go.

Bonds drove a 2-0 pitch from Bill Long with two out and nobody on in the Pittsburgh fifth into the right field bleachers for homer No. 30. He then led off the seventh with a shot into the center field basket off Dave Pavlas for No. 31.

--- AROUND THE NL ---

Elsewhere in the National League, Atlanta topped San Francisco 5-1, Houston downed Cincinnati 5-2, Philadelphia bested St. Louis 8-4 and San Diego beat Los Angeles 9-4.

Braves 5, Giants 1

At Atlanta, Rookie Dave Justice belted his 26th homer and collected three RBI to lead the Braves. Tom Glavine, 9-11, allowed six hits over 7 2-3 innings before giving way to Mark Grant, who pitched out of a bases- loaded threat in the eighth and worked the ninth for his second save. Justice doubled in a run in the first inning off Kelly Downs, 1-2, and added a two-run homer in the seventh.

Astros 5, Reds 2

At Houston, Mark Portugal scattered four hits over 7 1-3 innings to lift the Astros and send Cincinnati to their 10th loss in 16 games. Portugal, 10-10, gained from an early lead to down Danny Jackson, 5-6. Juan Agosto got five outs to earn his fourth save. Ken Caminiti hit his fourth homer of the season, the first homer by a Houston player at the Astrodome since Aug. 8.

Phillies 8, Cardinals 4

At St. Louis, Wes Chamberlain belted his first major-league home run and Dale Murphy hit his 24th to lead the Phillies. Chamberlain hit a solo home run in the second and Murphy delivered a two-run homer in the third to send the Cardinals to their fourth straight loss. Pat Combs, 9- 9, worked five innings for the win while Joe Magrane fell to 9-16.

Dodgers 9, Padres 4

At Los Angeles, Benito Santiago hit a grand slam in the sixth inning to rally San Diego. The Padres recorded their fifth consecutive victory and prevented the Dodgers from gaining on the first-place Reds in the NL West. Los Angeles remained 4 1-2 games behind Cincinnati.

(SEPT. 20) UPI - Joe Morgan either deserves an award for poise, or he's not paying attention.

The Boston Manager watched his Red Sox tumble out of first place in an 8-4 loss to Baltimore Wednesday night, then said there's no need to panic.

''We're not in trouble yet,'' he said. ''We're only one game behind. We don't have to panic, if ever. There are no breaks to be had when you're going lousy.''

The Orioles, with the American League's second-worst offense, banged out 12 hits. The decision, combined with Toronto's 7-6 victory over New York, left the Red Sox behind in the East Division.

''We've got to get our butts going in New York,'' Boston outfielder Mike Greenwell said. ''The day off will help. If we can sweep, we'll go home where we play our best.''

Sam Horn lined a three-run homer in the fifth inning, handing the Red Sox their eighth loss in their last 10 games. Boston's slump has coincided with the absence of ace Roger Clemens, who returns to the starting rotation Sunday against New York after resting a sore right shoulder.

''It will be more than a psychological lift, that's for sure,'' Morgan said.

Horn's 13th home run reached the first row of the right-field seats.

Greg Harris fell to 13-8, his first loss against Baltimore in four outings this year and in his career. Anthony Telford, 3-2, pitched five innings for the win.

''I was just a stupid idiot today to let Sam Horn beat me in a game that means as much as this,'' said Harris. ''I let everybody down.

''It will take a while to live this one down. No way I should be beat by this man. That's a guy I wanted to pitch to, who's never touched me.''

The Red Sox scored a run in the first on singles by Jody Reed and Carlos Quintana and an sacrifice fly by Wade Boggs.

The Orioles jumped ahead 2-1 in the third. Billy Ripken's single scored Chris Hoiles, who had doubled. Brady Anderson singled Ripken to third. Ripken scored on a Harris wild pitch.

Boston tied the score 2-2 in the fourth when Tony Pena singled home Greenwell. Horn's blast made it 5-2 after five innings.

Boston cut the margin to 5-3 in the sixth on Greenwell's 12th home run of the season. It was only Boston's fourth homer in the last 16 games.

--- AROUND THE AL ---

In other AL games, Toronto edged New York 7-6, Cleveland defeated Milwaukee 6-3, Minnesota nipped Kansas City 1-0 in 11 innings, Oakland dropped Chicago 8-4, Texas nipped Seattle 6-5 and Detroit pounded California 12-5.

Blue Jays 7, Yankees 6

At Toronto, Junior Felix highlighted a four-run sixth inning with a three-run homer and Jimmy Key pitched 5 2-3 innings to improve to 11-7. Tom Henke pitched the ninth for his 30th save while Yankee starter Tim Leary, 9-19, took the loss.

Indians 6, Brewers 3

At Cleveland, Jeff Manto homered and collected two RBI and Brook Jacoby added two RBI to lead the Indians. Jaime Navarro, allowed six runs and 11 hits in 7 1-3 innings and fell to 7-6.

Twins 1, Royals 0, 11 innings

At Minneapolis, Shane Mack delivered a bases-loaded single with two out in the 11th inning to lift Minnesota. Mack's single made a loser of Jeff Montgomery, 6-4. Gary Wayne improved to 1-1, going two innings and allowing one hit. George Brett remained tied in the AL batting race with Oakland's Rickey Henderson, going 2 for 5 with a single and double.

Athletics 7, White Sox 3

At Oakland, Calif., Terry Steinbach delivered a bases-loaded two-run double in the first to help Dave Stewart pick up his 21st win. Stewart improved to 21-10. Jack McDowell, 13-8, lasted just 1 1-3 innings, giving up five earned runs and five hits. The A's lowered their magic number to 5.

Rangers 6, Mariners 5

At Seattle, Jeff Kunkel scored the go-ahead run on Seattle reliever Bill Swift's wild pitch in the eighth inning to give Texas the victory. John Barfield, 4-2, the Rangers' third pitcher, pitched one inning to pick up the victory and Kenny Rogers went 1 2-3 innings for his 15th save. Seattle starter Matt Young, 8-16, took the loss.

Tigers 12, Angels 5

At Anaheim, Calif., Mark Salas stroked a three-run homer and Travis Fryman drove in four runs to power Detroit. Walt Terrell, 5-4, worked five innings for the victory. Jerry Don Gleaton pitched two innnings for his 11th save. Rookie Joe Grahe, 2-4, surrendered six runs in taking the loss.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (SEPT. 20) UPI - The European Community executive commission has rejected a proposal by its top agriculture official on farm supports, saying it did not cut subsidies enough.

Agriculture supports are the crucial issue in the current round of trade-liberalization talks in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

EC Agriculture Commissioner Ray MacSharry withdrew his own proposal on Wednesday night, after it failed to win majority support among the 17 EC commissioners.

The proposal would have reduced EC farm subsidies by 30 percent over a 10-year period, beginning with 1986 as the base year.

U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills criticized the proposal during a visit to Brussels on Wednesday, saying it would cut subsidies by only 10 percent from current levels.

The United States this week unveiled its own plan to reduce farm supports by 70 percent or more over the next decade.

The EC will rethink its position at a meeting of Community agriculture ministers in Brussels next Monday.

The current round of GATT talks is known as the Uruguay Round after the country in which it began four years ago. The round is slated to conclude in Brussels in December, but the United States is concerned the entire proceedings could collapse over the agriculture issue.

GATT currently covers only merchandise, and not services or agriculture.

Developing nations which produce farm products cheaply seek an open world market in agriculture, while the West seeks free-trade rules on services and intellectual property, such as copyright.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (SEPT. 20) UPI - Other NATO countries should join Britain and France in sending ground troops to the Persian Gulf to bolster the U.S. deployment, NATO's top official said Thursday.

''Let me very clearly state my personal opinion that some allies could and should do more,'' NATO Secretary-General Manfred Woerner said in an unusually blunt speech to a conference.

He said those steps should include the ''sending of ground troops'' as requested by U.S. Secretary of State James Baker in a Sept. 10 visit to NATO headquarters.

Woerner, a former West German defense minister, did not specify which countries he had in mind in urging further steps.

Acknowledging the ''severe criticism'' of NATO's gulf crisis role from many in the United States, Woerner called for a review - after the gulf crisis ends - of the alliance's restriction on ''out-of-area'' military involvement as outlined in its 1949 charter.

''Can we afford to be limited to consultation where the security of our member states is at risk?'' he asked a conference of officials and academics from throughout Europe and the United States.

The NATO secretary-general said the gulf crisis has forged unprecedented solidarity among NATO's 16 nations, but its charter ''constraints'' had limited its role.

The U.S. ambassador to NATO, William H. Taft IV, also said the alliance needs to review its geographical restrictions. ''The threats may exist 'out of area' but they are to the area,'' he said.

Woerner also said he had some ''concerns'' about NATO's future development that must be addressed.

The 12-nation European Community will develop its own security dimension, he said, so NATO and the EC must coordinate the areas of ''overlap'' to prevent a disruptive ''rivalry'' from developing.

Woerner cautioned against ''euphoria'' in the wake of the Cold War's dramatic end, which could lead to a weakening of the U.S. commitment to Europe's security. Those ''tendencies'' would be furthered, he said, if Europe went it alone and ''gave the United States a fait accompli.''

''For the foreseeable future, North Americans have an indispensable role in ensuring security'' in Europe, Woerner said.

Noting the presence of journalists at the conference, the NATO chief went out of his way to say his ''concerns'' are not yet ''dangers'' for the alliance, and can be overcome.

''I only want to prevent complacency and a false sense of self- confidence,'' he said.

TOKYO (SEPT. 20) UPI - Typhoon Flo churned north into open waters of the Pacific Ocean Thursday, and rescue workers and cleanup crews picked through the debris from the fierce storm that left 29 people dead, 10 missing and thousands homeless.

The typhoon, the most powerful to hit Japan in decades, injured 84 people during its three-day battering of the nation of islands, hurling winds up to 100 mph and dumping up to 2 feet of rain in places, police said.

The storm passed over the city of Miyako, 340 miles north of Tokyo, before heading away from Japan and into the northwest Pacific.

Flo brushed Tokyo overnight Wednesday, spawning two tornadoes in the area that injured nine people but generally doing little damage to the metropolis.

The storm proceeded up the northeast coast of Japan's main island of Honshu, then veered northwest, avoiding the northernmost island of Hokkaido.

Flo struck Japan's southernmost island chain of Okinawa late Monday.

From there it moved up the archipelago and slammed into Shirahama, a small coastal city 275 miles southwest of Tokyo, Wednesday night and headed north on Japan's main island.

The heavily populated Tokyo-Osaka corridor was preparing for the worst, but Flo took a benign turn toward the less populated western side of the main island.

Flo cut a 150-mile-wide path of destruction as it moved rapidly through the rice fields of western Japan.

Most of the 29 dead were killed in the southern regions of Japan by landslides and floods that were touched off by torrential rains accompanying the storm.

Seventy-two houses were destroyed and more than 6,000 were flooded, police said. An equivalent of $1.24 million worth of crop damage was reported.

Flo passed about 180 miles east of Amamioshima, a small island off southern Japan, and triggered several killer landslides.

Deadly landslides also were released in Okayama Prefecture, about 300 miles southwest of Tokyo. About 25,000 homes were flooded at Okayama.

Schools set up temporary shelters to house soaking families, many pulled from the raging waters by rescue crews in rubber rafts.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 20) UPI - The U.S. dollar opened higher Thursday against the major European currencies, continuing its rally after comments the previous day by U.S Federal Reserve Chairman, Allan Greenspan that the trend of U.S inflation had not improved.

Analysts took this to mean that U.S. interest rates will not be cut in the near term.

In London the pound lost further ground after falling heavily Wednesday following comments by the president of the Bundesbank, Karl Otto Poehl, who suggested Britain's 10 percent inflation rate was too high and would put off sterling's entry into the European Exchange Rate Mechanism.

The British unit fell to $1.8795 from $1.8862 at the close Wednesday.

The market is now waiting for U.K. money supply figures and for any further statement from the Bundesbank at its meeting later in the day.

The dollar opened higher in Frankfurt at 1.5730 German marks from 1.5665 at Wednesday's close, and was higher in Zurich at 1.3105 Swiss francs from 1.3060.

The dollar was also up in Paris, Brussels and Milan, at 5.2620 French francs vs. 5.1975, 32.50 Belgian francs vs. 32.03, and at 1,175 Italian lire vs. 1,162.25.

Earlier in Tokyo, the U.S. dollar lost its upward momentum against the yen as investors took profits from its three consecutive gaining sessions.

The dollar closed at 137.05 yen, down 1.00 yen from Wednesday's close of 138.05 yen, the Bank of Japan said.

Market players bought back the yen to make a quick profit from the dollar's rally in the past three sessions, dealers said. The dollar had been rebounding since Monday after its steep decline triggered by anticipation of lower U.S. interest rates.

''The market focused on the U.S. economic outlook, which seems to be heading toward recession,'' said Kimiyoshi Muneishi, chief currency manager at Mitsubishi Bank.

Elsewhere in Asia, the dollar was marginally higher in Singapore, closing at 1.7650 Singapore dollars against Wednesday's close of 1.7645, and in Hong Kong the dollar also closed up at 7.7590 Hong Kong dollars against 7.7588.

Gold closed lower in Hong Kong at $385.45 an ounce from Wednesday's close of $385.95.

Gold opened lower in Zurich at $385.50 an ounce from $386, and also was down in London at $385 an ounce from $386.75.

Silver was unchanged in Zurich at $4.80 an ounce, but was lower in London at $4.80 an ounce from dlrs 4.83.

(SEPT. 20) UPI - Here is a roundup of the latest major events in the Persian Gulf crisis stemming from the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of the oil-rich emirate of Kuwait:

CAIRO, EGYPT - Three Arab leaders met in Rabat, Morocco, Thursday to discuss an Arab peace plan that calls for the withdrawal of Iraqi troops from Kuwait and the establishment of a Kuwaiti government that does not include the ruling al-Sabah family, sources and Arab news reports said. The six-part plan also calls for Iraqi annexation of two strategic islands in the gulf that are considered part of Kuwait. King Hussein of Jordan, King Hassan of Morocco and Algerian President Chedli Benjidid were expected to discuss the Arab peace initiative at the 3-day mini- summit in the Moroccan capital.

The Jordanian newspaper al-Destour said nine Arab countries had already approved the peace initiative, but the report could not be verified. Al-Destour and Arab sources in the region said the plan calls for a complete withdrawal of Iraqi troops from Kuwait at the same time Western forces withdraw from the Persian Gulf.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM - NATO's top official is telling members of the alliance to join Britain and France in sending ground troops to the Persian Gulf to bolster the U.S. deployment. ''Let me very clearly state my personal opinion that some allies could and should do more,'' NATO Secretary-General Manfred Woerner said in an unusually blunt speech to a conference. He said those steps should include the ''sending of ground troops'' as requested by U.S. Secretary of State James Baker in a Sept. 10 visit to NATO headquarters.

A U.S.-chartered Iraqi Airways plane landed Wednesday at London's Gatwick Airport with 328 American women and children, 35 Britons and an unknown number of other foreign nationals. The Americans spent the night in London and were to fly Thursday to Raleigh, N.C. One more flight is tentatively scheduled to leave Kuwait Saturday. With that flight the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait believes that every American who is able to leave and wants to leave will have been taken care of and there will be no more evacuation charter flights.

CAIRO, EGYPT - Syrian President Hafez Assad's first trip to Tehran since the Iranian revolution is expected to set new ground rules for their shaky alliance. Assad is expected to test the waters in Tehran about a permanent Syrian role in the Persian Gulf to replace U.S.-led multinational forces.

WASHINGTON - The Persian Gulf crisis is flooding the Middle East with a multibillion-dollar wave of highly sophisticated arms - the most lethal of them made in the United States. The White House says it will propose selling the Saudis some $20 billion in advanced aircraft and defensive and offensive missiles, and turbine-powered tanks with laser gun sights.

WASHINGTON - Defense Secretary Dick Cheney has approved imminent danger pay for about 150,000 U.S. military personnel in Saudi Arabia and nearby waters. The declaration provides each serviceman and woman with an extra $110 per month.

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. - Twelve Hardee's fast food restaurants in Kuwait have closed. Hardee's spokesman John Merritt says nearly every business enterprise in the Middle East is experiencing financial and production problems after Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on Aug. 2. But Hardees's Food Systems, based in Rocky Mount, North Carolina, reports extraordinary sales at a restaurant near where U.S. troops are stationed in Saudi Arabia.

BUENOS AIRES, ARGENTINA - President Carlos Menem risks a temporary setback in popularity at home by sending ships to join the naval blockade against Iraq. Argentina's move to become the first Latin American nation to send warships to the Persian Gulf to help enforce the blockade is a sharp departure from that nation's historic policy of non- alignment.

NEW YORK - Industry officials say oil stockpiling by wholesalers and consumers especially of jet and industrial fuels, apparently has been taking place as prices have risen. The American Petroleum Institute says the stockpiling appears to date from the increase in oil prices that began in late June rather than the Iraqi invasion.

(SEPT. 20) UPI - A new study says effective family planning methods could reduce the number of infant and child deaths in the Third World by 20 percent. The Population Crisis Committee says infant deaths could be cut by at least one-point-eight-Million... just by increasing the time between births to at least two years. A spokeswoman says it would help break ''the cycle of weak mothers giving birth to weak children.''

South Africa's President Frederik de Klerk announced additional measures yesterday aimed at curbing the black-on-black violence that has killed hundreds of people. De Klerk says the Cabinet ratified measures taken by police during the weekend, but also approved several additional steps. The South African president leaves Saturday for talks with President Bush.

Forecasters say the 11th tropical depression of the Atlantic- Caribbean hurricane season is drifting west with little change in strength. This morning the tropical depression was centered a little more than 700 miles east of the Lesser Antilles in the West Indies, moving west at less than five miles an hour. Maximum sustained winds are near 35 miles-an-hour.

It's NOT very often that prison guards find themselves siding with inmates, but that's the case at a North Georgia youth prison. The guards told state officials they plan to join the inmates in a federal lawsuit over ''insufferable'' conditions at the facility. The lawsuit filed by inmates in 1982 focused on sanitation, under-staffing, violence and idleness at the prison.

TOKYO (SEPT. 20) UPI - Stock prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange fell Thursday for the sixth consecutive session as a semiannual closing of books discouraged buying.

The blue-chip Nikkei Average of 225 selected issues, which dropped 158.65 points Wednesday, lost another 123.19 points to 23,602.98 - its lowest level since Feb. 2, 1988, when the Nikkei ended at 23,595.37.

The broader-based Tokyo Stock Price Index of all major listed shares dipped another 31.75 points to 1,767.97. The index lost 16.61 points Wednesday.

An estimated 400 million shares changed hands, compared with 390 million shares Wednesday.

Declines overpowered advances 754 to 191, while 156 issues remained unchanged.

Analysts said the market was dominated by arbitrage selling and ''cross'' transactions.

Large institutional investors purchased and sold blocks of the same stock in different markets to record paper profits ahead of the closing of books Sept. 30.

''Eighty-five to 90 percent of the Osaka Stock Exchange volume was crossing,'' said broker Paul Migliorato of Jardine Fleming Securities.

With the twin selling pressures of futures arbitrage and book closures, 17 percent of the shares on the Tokyo exchange's main section hit new lows for the year.

Sentiment in the market was actually much worse than the relatively mild drop in the Nikkei indicated, analysts said.

''Investors were very nervous,'' said broker Tatsuo Kishizaki of Cosmo Securities. ''They felt the market was only supported by the manipulation of the big four securities houses.''

Kishizaki predicted the market would test the 23,000 level next week.

On the trading floor, electricals and electronic related stocks were particularly hard hit including Mitsubishi Electric and Sony.

Elsewhere in Asia, stocks closed slightly higher in light trading on the Hong Kong stock exchange as investors capitalized on cheap stocks.

The benchmark Hang Seng Index, which lost 15.71 points Wednesday, rebounded 3.59 points to 2,984.54.

Among the narrower indexes, properties added 4.02, utilities were up 4.71, financials rose 12.90 but industrials eased 3.10 points.

Volume continued at its recent slow pace as an estimated 430 million shares changed hands, compared with 338 million shares Wednesday.

''There was some early bargain hunting which caused the market to rise slightly, but on the whole, it was a steady day,'' said Albert Leung of Chin Tung Investments.

''I expect the trading range for the Hang Seng Index will stay between the 2,900 and 3,000 level for a while,'' Leung said

In Bangkok, stock prices fell more than 5 percent on the Thailand Stock Exchange for the fourth consecutive session amid fears of further increases in world and local petroleum prices.

The Stock Exchange of Thailand Index, which eased 1.30 points Wednesday, plunged 39.28 points or 5.73 percent to 647.35.

Volume amounted to around 1.4 billion shares, compared with 1.5 billion shares changing hands Wednesday.

''Stocks fell on the news that the Thailand government is going to increase the price for oil for a second time,'' explained Phanvit Patanasiri of Phatra Thanakit Co., Ltd.

''The news caused investors to sell stocks from the opening bell until the market closed,'' Patanasiri said.

The Thai government controls domestic oil prices, but it has been forced to raise prices in response to world market prices.

In Singapore, stocks eased lower in quiet trading on the Singapore Stock Exchange.

The Straits Times Industrial Index, which fell 6.53 points Wednesday, lost another 6.20 points to 1,166.28. The broader-based All Singapore Index fell 1.54 points to 335.73.

Volume amounted to 33.2 million shares, compared with 31.2 million shares on Wednesday.

Analysts said investors were ''sitting on the fence taking a wait- and-see attitude'' because of uncertainty in the Gulf and the weak performances in overseas markets.

On the trading floor, Magnum Corp. paced the advancing issues followed by Singapore Land and Kings Hotel.

Lion Corp. led the declining issues followed by UMW Holdings and Far East Shipping.

In Australia, stocks continued to slide in light trading on the Sydney Sharemarket.

The All Ordinaries Index, which tumbled 20.6 points on Wednesday, eased 5.2 points to 1,446.4.

Volume remained sluggish as an estimated 67.4 million shares changed hands compared with 78.5 million shares Wednesday.

Declines outpaced advances 169 to 80, while 236 stocks remained unchanged.

Analysts said selloffs in the Adsteam Group and the banks paced the market lower.

Adsteam slumped 45 cents to $1.83 - its lowest level in seven years - despite a statement from the group it knew of no reason for the decline.

Analysts said the slide reflected a lack of confidence in the group's ability to cope with an estimated $7 billion in debts.

Elsewhere, Adsteam's associated companies were also active. David Jones lost 60 cents to $3.90, Petersville Sleigh eased 5 cents to $1.85 and National Consolidated slipped 15 cents to $1.65.

Adsteam's brewing arm, Tooths, held steady at $8.00.

Banks fell following claims by Federal Treasurer Paul Keating the National Bank's savings branch was in trouble in 1986 and needed government assistance to bail it out.

NAB Bank fell 12 cents to $6.18 on the news while ANZ Bank eased 12 cents to $4.20.

JACKSON, MS (SEPT. 20) UPI - Spiraling gasoline prices triggered by the Middle East crisis are playing havoc with transportation budgets in Mississippi's 151 public school districts.

''We are at a crisis stage like we have never been before with our transportation budgets,'' said Andy Mullins, special assistant to the state Superintendent of Education.

School buses statewide guzzle 44,000 gallons of gasoline daily and districts feel the bite each time Persian Gulf tensions aggravate prices at the pump, Mullins said Thursday.

With a 16-cents-a-gallon jump since Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2, Mullins said districts are paying $9,000 more daily and $45,000 more weekly then budgets approved last summer.

''Superintendents are having to absorb these increases into budgets that could not forsee such huge increases,'' Mullins said. ''They are simply running out of money.''

The 1990 Legislature slashed $6 millon from the state Department of Education's transporttion budget, leaving about $36 million. Mullins said that cut cannot be restored until the Legislature meets in January unless Gov. Ray Mabus calls a special session, which seems unlikely.

Mullins said on average, the bulk contract price for regular gasoline was 80 cents a gallon during the summer when district budgets were completed. That changed quickly after President Bush sent U.S. troops to the Middle East.

Now, the price is an average $1.16 per gallon statewide, according to the state Department of Education.

Compounding the problems is the uncertainty about the crisis.

Mullins said gasoline wholesalers refuse to guarantee prices of school contracts longer than a month. That means districts can't project how long their transportation budgets will hold out.

Schools opened in late August and early September and close in May and June.

DURBAN, SOUTH AFRICA (SEPT. 20) UPI - Senior leaders of the African National Congress and the rival Zulu movement Inkatha held their first high-level meeting in more than a decade in a bid to end a protracted and bloody conflict it was announced Thursday.

A joint statement issued shortly after midnight, said the delegations had held ''exploratory'' talks on ''grave, vital and urgent matters'' and that they agreed to meet again on Sept. 26. Wednesday night's secret talks were held at an unidentified Durban hotel.

The meeting follows an intense flare-up in hostilities between the two movements in black townships surrounding Johannesburg that has left more than 750 people dead since early August and renewed calls for the two organizations to bury their differences.

Supporters of the ANC and Inkatha, ideologically at odds since the 1970s, have fought a long battle in the Indian Ocean province of Natal. More than 4,000 people have died in the province since 1987 but never before had it spread with such intensity to Johannesburg.

''Naturally, the issue of the violence in Natal and elsewhere in the country was top on the agenda and reports of the various local initiatives to diffuse it came under the spotlight,'' the joint statement said.

The seven-member delegation of the Inkatha Freedom Party was led by Steven Sithebe, a minister in the self-governing territory of KwaZulu, and the ANC delegation by intelligence head Jacob Zuma.

The meeting follows several local initiatives in Natal to end the killing, including on Sept. 1, a local pact known as the Lower Umfolozi Peace Accord covering an area of Zululand around Empangeni, some 100 miles north of Durban.

In those talks, Zuma and Sithebe also headed their respective delegations.

That accord, signed not only by the ANC and Inkatha, but the ANC- linked Congress of South African Trade Unions, local community leaders, the police and the South African Defense Forces appears to be holding.

Over last weekend, Zuma and Sithebe also headed delegations to peace talks for an area outside Durban, Ndwedwe, where hundreds of people have died in the internecine strife. An agenda for peace in the area includes joint rallies by the two movements.

The ANC delegation to Wednesday's talks included members of a subcommittee of the ANC's policy-making National Executive Committee, which met in Johannesburg for a third day Thursday on the recent violence. The ANC delegates flew to Durban from Johannesburg late Wednesday afternoon to attend the session with Inkatha.

The talks were regarded as the highest-level negotiations since 1979, when an Inkatha delegation led by its chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi met an ANC team in London led by ANC President Oliver Tambo.

Since the eruption of violence around Johannesburg, the ANC has resisted Buthelezi's demands for direct talks with ANC leader Nelson Mandela and accused the Inkatha movement of fomenting the violence in a bid to increase its political leverage in looming power-sharing talks with the minority white government.

ANC officials have insisted that peace formulas be in place at local level before any meeting takes place between Buthelezi and Mandela.

BRUSSELS, Belgium (SEPT. 20) UPI - A powerful new ''one-stop shop'' for approving all large mergers in the European Community opens its doors Friday, 16 years after a new EC merger policy was first proposed.

A 46-member Merger Task Force has sole jurisdiction to approve or disapprove most mergers involving companies trading a combined $6.5 billion within the 12-nation EC.

Smaller mergers will be handled only by national competition authorities.

''There is now a clear division of responsibility for assessing mergers,'' said Sir Leon Brittan, the EC competition commissioner. ''Business will no longer face the multiple jeopardy of seeking clearance both from Brussels and from national capitals.''

EC member states have bickered for years over the scope of the new regulations which were first proposed by the EC executive Commission in 1974.

About 50 mergers a year are expected to be reviewed by the task force.

Non-EC companies are subject to the regulation if they are merging with EC firms at or above the $6.5 billion threshold of business within the EC.

All companies seeking to merge must notify the task force and fill in a detailed questionnaire regarding their current and planned activities. Failure to notify carries huge fines.

The task force must decide within a month whether the merger may present competition problems, and if so, it has an additional four months to approve the deal, veto it or approve it with modifications. The formal decision rests with the 17 EC commissioners.

Officials say the deadlines imposed by the regulation are demanding.

''We're starting at cruising speed. There is no time for phase-in,'' said Klaus Dieter Ehlermann, head of the EC competition agency. The task force has been practicing on test cases, and a 24-hour telephone hotline was installed in advance to answer questions from companies.

Existing EC regulations prohibit firms from establishing a ''dominant position'' within the Community, but those rules did not allow the EC executive Commission to step in before a merger was completed.

''The previous regulations were very unsatisfactory because it only allowed the Commission to intervene after the fact, after the concentration, and only after one firm had attained a dominant position, '' Ehlermann said.

Even if the $6.5 billion threshold is reached, the new regulation will apply only if at least two of the merging firms trade at least $325 million within the EC. Also, the regulation will not apply to mergers in which more than two-thirds of the combined revenue comes from a single EC nation.

The Commission feels the $6.5 billion threshold is far too high, and will lobby to lower the level in the next few years.

The new regulation was approved last Dec. 21 by the EC Council of Ministers, the decision-making body.

(SEPT. 20) UPI - Three Arab leaders met Thursday to discuss a Persian Gulf peace plan that reportedly would leave Kuwait's ruling family out in the cold and the Olympic Council of Asia, whose president was killed in the invasion of Kuwait, voted overwhelmingly to expel Iraq from the Asian Games.

Iraq's deputy prime minister meanwhile said President Saddam Hussein wants an opportunity to address Americans on U.S. television, in return for President Bush's eight-minute speech played on Iraqi television last weekend.

King Hussein of Jordan, King Hassan of Morocco and Algerian President Chedli Benjidid were expected to discuss the Arab peace initiative at a three-day mini-summit in Rabat, the Moroccan capital.

The proposal calls for the withdrawal of Iraqi troops from Kuwait and the establishment by the Kuwaiti people of a government that does not include the ruling al-Sabah family, sources and Arab news reports said.

The six-point plan also calls for Iraqi annexation of two strategic islands in the Persian Gulf that are considered part of Kuwait, which Iraq invaded Aug. 2. Iraq would retain the right to use Kuwaiti territorial waters.

The Jordanian newspaper al-Destour said nine Arab countries had already approved the peace initiative, but the report could not be verified.

Sources said King Hussein discussed the plan earlier in the week during a meeting with Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat, who had just returned from talks with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein. Arafat said after his meeting with Saddam he was confident a peaceful solution could be worked out and the Iraqi president was willing to consider an Arab initiative, although Arafat did not give any details of the plan.

Al-Destour and Arab sources in the region said the plan calls for a complete withdrawal of Iraqi troops from Kuwait at the same time Western forces withdraw from the gulf.

Members of the Kuwaiti government-in-exile dismissed the plan Wednesday. It was not immediately known how the United States and other powers would respond to the initiative.

In Beijing, the Olympic Council of Asia voted 27-3 to expel Iraq from the Asian Games, which open Saturday in Beijing, for its invasion of Kuwait, delegates said. The move to expel Iraq was prompted by threats from other Arab nations to boycott the quadrennial sports festival unless Iraq was barred.

The president of the OCA, Fahad al Ahmad al Sabah of Kuwait, a member of the ruling family, was slain during the Iraqi invasion.

It was not clear whether Iraqi sports officials and athletes would leave China immediately.

''It's up to them whether they stay or leave now,'' said Umral Singh, the delegate from India.

In other developments:

-Iraq's deputy prime minister, Saadoun Hamadi, said in an interview with Cable News Network that Saddam wants to speak on U.S. television, in return for Bush's taped address to the Iraqi people broadcast on Iraqi TV last weekend.

''I think the president will try to explain in quiet language, in a simple language, he will explain our position,'' Hamadi said.

Bush's address, emphasizing the united international condemnation of the Kuwait invasion, was taped in response to frequent messages from Saddam that have been read by a spokesman on Iraqi television and replayed in whole or in part on U.S. television news. Bush told Iraqis the United States has no quarrel with them, but was determined that Saddam's invasion of Kuwait should not stand.

-Iraq announced Wednesday it passed a law allowing it to seize assets of governments and companies that have frozen Iraqi assets abroad and declared that it was no longer responsible for the safety of foreign property in occupied Kuwait and Iraq.

-The U.N. Security Council prepared to discuss an air embargo against Iraq to tighten enforcement of economic sanctions imposed after the invasion of Kuwait. Yuliy Vorontsov of the Soviet Union, president of the Security Council this month, said the council would take up the issue of a possible air embargo Friday. Nine Western European nations have called for the air embargo to prevent supplies reaching Baghdad by air in violation of the U.N. embargo.

-France said Wednesday two more French civilians were captured in Kuwait this week and taken to unknown destinations. Saddam has been holding foreign men at vital installations against a possible attack by the U.S.-led multinational force in the Persian Gulf area.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 20) UPI - With the ink barely dry on a $65 million bank bailout for his real estate and casino empire, developer Donald Trump has asked his bankers for a delay in loan payments due on the Trump Shuttle airline, the Wall Street Journal reported Thursday.

Trump met Wednesday with officials from Citibank, a unit of Citicorp, which issued the shuttle loan, to ask the bank to restructure $245 million in debt payments still due. He said soaring fuel costs and a soft Northeast economy have made the airline unprofitable, the Journal reported.

The next payment on the shuttle - about $1.1 million - is due in three weeks.

Citibank Thursday night was to contact about 20 banks that purchased pieces of the shuttle loan to urge them to allow Trump to defer interest and principal payments, a Citibank executive told the newspaper.

''This isn't about being mad at Donald,'' the Journal quoted a Citibank representative as saying. ''We have to look at this and analyze it in an unemotional manner.''

If the banks do not agree with Trump's request for a deferral of interest, Trump could lose control of the shuttle, which he bought in 1989 while assuming $380 million in debt.

But, the Journal said, a default on the shuttle would not necessarily trigger a default of the entire bailout agreement reached in August that allows Trump to defer interest on almost $1 billion of his $2 billion in bank debt. The August agreement does not cover $1.2 billion of casino bonds that will most likely be restructured in the coming months.

Under the bank deal last month, Trump agreed to continue payments on $245 million in debt issued by Citibank. An additional $35 million unsecured loan from Citibank and participants already has been deferred under the deal.

Trump probably will be able to meet the forthcoming $1.1 million payment on the shuttle, but is not expected to be able to keep up with the payments due in the next 12 months, said Stephen Bollenbach, chief financial officer of the Trump Organization. Those payments are expected to total about $30 million.

''We don't owe a huge amount right now but we need to maintain our ability to run the company,'' Bollenbach told the Journal.

Bollenbach and Trump Shuttle President Richard Cozzi joined Trump at the Thursday meeting with Citibank, the newspaper said.

Last month's shuttle ridership was off 16 percent from August 1989, a Citibank representative said. In recent weeks, fuel costs have risen to 95 cents a gallon. Trump officials are said to believe that matters will not improve in the next few months.

Convincing the banks to give Trump more time may be difficult. Many of the banks were reluctant to join the August bailout and did so only after Trump executives assured them their payments would continue.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (SEPT. 20) UPI - The Philippines proposed Thursday to take control ''as soon as possible'' of the U.S. Clark Air Base upon the termination of American basing rights unless a new agreement is reached, a spokesman said.

Philippine spokesman Rafael Alunan said at a briefing for reporters after the third day of talks on the future of U.S. military bases in the country that the United States would convene a group of experts ''to help determine the orderly transition of the facilities.''

''The Philippines took the position that it shall assume sovereign control of Clark as soon as possible,'' Alunan said. He said this means ''complete shutdown of U.S. operations at the base'' after expiration of the 1947 bases treaty in September 1991.

Asked to elaborate on the time frame, Alunan said, ''The constitution is our guide.'' He said it bans the presence of foreign bases or troops in the Philippines at the expiration of the U.S. lease in the absence of a new treaty.

Alunan said the fate of the other facilities will be discussed before the second round of talks ends, possibly on Friday or Saturday. But he said if there is no agreement, ''everything reverts back to the Philippines.''

The Philippines hosts, in addition to Clark, the sprawling Subic Bay Naval Base and four smaller facilities.

Clark is the home of the 13th Air Force and is manned by 9,200 troops. Subic, with 6,200 servicemen, is a repair yard and logistics center for the Seventh Fleet. The two facilities are the oldest and largest outside continental United States.

Alunan said the Philippines planned to turn Clark into a civil aviation complex under plans drawn up by an executive-legislative council.

Before the talks began, Philippine officials leaked to reporters a working paper under which Manila would take over Clark at the expiration of the bases pact, while allowing Washington use of Subic during a transition period until 1994.

The council's plans call for the conversion of Subic into a commercial shipyard.

President Corazon Aquino said Monday she expected an ''orderly withdrawal'' of U.S. forces in the Philippines at the termination of the bases pact and hoped the current talks would establish the basis for a new relationship that encompased military ties.

Special U.S. Negotiator Richard Armitage said Tuesday the United States was prepared to scale down U.S. presence. He indicated a 10-year period to do this.

U.S. Spokesman Stanley Schrager said the American panel during its presentation Thursday stressed the new relationship with the Philippines would only succeed if it would enhance regional stability and was flexible enough to meet security needs of Manila and Washington.

''After the termination of the period of the accord, we would hope that the relationship would continue with appropriate U.S. access to and use of the Philippine facilities, together with a U.S. military presence which both countries would judge appropriate to meet our needs,'' Schrager said.

Alunan said earlier he expected the current talks to provide a framework for a new arrangement. He said at the close of the current talks, the two panels would consult with their principals before resuming another session.

In an interview with the U.S. military television Far East Network, Armitage said the Philippine bases remained an important factor for stability in the region.

''Unfortunately, as the world situation regarding the superpowers gets better, regional actors tend to come to the floor (with) designs to upset peace and stability,'' he said in the interview broadcast Thursday evening.

''It is our belief unfortunately that there will be situations in the Pacific that require a continued presence of the United States and in that regard, the Philippines is an ideal location,'' Armitage said.

BEIJING (SEPT. 20) UPI - The Olympic Council of Asia, facing threats of an Arab boycott of the Beijing Asian Games, voted overwhelmingly Thursday night to bar Iraq from the Games and expel it from the council over the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, officials said.

The chief Iraqi delegate angrily denounced the vote as fixed, but said his nation saw no point in appealing.

''This was a victory for everything illegal,'' said the Iraqi chief delegate, Abdul Karim al-Mulla, after the vote. ''This is our great sorrow.''

The vote was the latest show of international outrage against Baghdad over the Aug. 2 invasion, in which OCA President Fahad al Ahmad al Sabah, a member of the Kuwaiti royal family, was killed by Iraqi troops as they stormed into the oil-rich emirate.

The move, two days before the Games open Saturday, also dashed the hopes of host China for a Games free of political disputes. The quadrennial Asian Games staged between Olympics will last for two weeks.

The possible presence of the Iraqis has all but overshadowed the Chinese government's euphoric propaganda on the Games, the first major international sports event hosted by communist China.

Wu Zhongyuan, spokesman for the Beijing Asian Games Organizing Committee, announced the OCA vote overwhelmingly for the proposal to bar Iraq from the Games and expel it from OCA following the council meeting at the downtown Beijing Hotel.

He said the vote was 27-3, with five abstentions and one invalid vote. The OCA has 38 member nations and territories, and two nations were not present.

''The organizing committee will abide by the decision,'' Wu said.

Some Arab nations had indicated they would consider a boycott unless Iraq was expelled from the Games. The possible Iraqi presence had also concerned security officials if the Iraqi team was billetted in the Asian Games village as neighbors to hostile nations.

Al-Mulla acknowledged the Iraqi soccer team had already arrived in China. Its fate was unclear, but he said there was no plan to appeal the decision and the Iraqi official delegation would leave for home. Most of the Iraqi athletes were believed still in Baghdad awaiting the decision.

''We are really worried about the spirit of sports in Asia,'' al- Mulla said. ''There should be friendship. Here there is no friendship.''

Al-Mulla charged the vote had been somehow rigged, claiming the secret ballots were large enough to be read ''100 meters away'' and claiming other technical problems that hurt Iraq. But he did not discuss the overwhelming size of the vote.

In Baghdad, the Iraqi News Agency said, ''The Iraqi National Olympic Committee has strongly denounced measures and behaviors adopted by some gulf countries and the Asian Olympic Council with a view to banning Iraq ...''

It said the Iraq's Olympic committee linked ''these bizarre measures and behaviors'' with ''suspicious policies,'' and said the moves ''were at variance''with the Asian Olympic Council's principles ''away from all political trends.''

Iraq's expulsion was clearly the less difficult route out of the dilemma for the Chinese government, which indicated during the past week it would abide by the OCA majority decision to avoid a more embarrassing boycott.

But the move could also heighten security fears of terrorism against the Games as a means to avenge Iraq. Security around the Kuwaiti and Saudi Arabian delegations in Beijing has been extremely tight, with police virtually sealing off the hotel where senior Kuwaiti officials are staying.

The Kuwaiti delegation is headed by Sheikh Ahmad Fahad al Sabah, the son of the late OCA president who has succeeded his father as head of Kuwait's National Olympic Committee. Kuwait had planned on a 330-member delegation, but entered just 43 athletes this week in the Games who had been training in Europe when the invasion occurred.

Earlier in the day, Chinese Premier Li Peng met with visiting Saudi Arabian Foreign Minister Prince Saud al-Faisal and told the Saudi that the world community should take steps ''to avoid further worsening of the gulf crisis which might lead to a war,'' the official Xinhua new agency reported.

BONN, WEST GERMANY (SEPT. 20) UPI - The West German government Thursday assured its neighbors and allies that a unified Germany will never repeat the atrocities of Nazism and that unification will be ''an investment'' in a European future.

Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher made the remarks in a statement to parliament at the beginning of a session to debate a bilateral unification treaty signed by the two German governments on Aug. 31.

Both German parliaments were expected to ratify the document later Thursday.

''On Oct. 3, the German people will again live in a democratic state - for the first time after 57 years,'' Genscher said. ''Our contribution for one Europe is also an investment in our European future.''

He said Germany had lost its liberty on Jan. 30, 1933, the day Adolf Hitler became chancellor of Germany, and lapsed into a period of fascism and war before the country was devided after World War II.

''Many Germans lost their lives, their health, all their belongings and their homeland. And all of us lost the respect and friendship of the other peoples '' Genscher said.

In a reference to the 6 million Jews killed in Nazi death camps, Genscher said ''we are uniting in the determination that this may never happen again...''

He reiterated the German borders are final and will not be changed, a reference to Polish fears a united Germany will want back former German territories which became part of Poland after World War II.

''The world looks upon Germany and the world should know: We know our responsibility and we will fulfill it,'' he added.

The bilateral unification treaty sets down the legal and financial aspects of the merger, which entails the absorbtion of East Germany in West Germany's Federal Republic - ending the 41-year existance of the German Democratic Republic, East Germany.

The treaty was signed after almost two months of tough negotiations between the two German governments and within each of the two parliaments.

Several compromises had to be reached to prevent a collapse of the talks. Abortion laws proved to be one of the toughest issues, but negotiators eventually agreed on interim legislation, under which abortion will remain legal in East Germany and illegal in West Germany.

A last-minute snag cropped up this week when East German parliamentarians demanded they be given to right to look into the 6 million secret files of the former East German State Security police, know as Stasi.

The two governments agreed Tuesday to an additional clause in the unification treaty which allows individuals to see the data the Stasi compiled about them.

(SEPT. 20) UPI - The rising cost of jet fuel and a softening demand for air travel are taking their toll on the Pan Am Corporation. The airline says it will trim its work force by 25-hundred next month and reduce capacity in an effort to cut costs. Company officials say the jobs will be reduced through layoffs, attrition and voluntary leaves of absence.

Economic officials of the seven largest industrialized nations meet Saturday in Washington, and rising oil prices will top the agenda. Analysts say the world-wide inflationary impact of the price hikes also will be discussed. The so-called G-7 nations are the United States, Japan, West Germany, France, Italy, Great Britain and Canada.

In Japan, the death toll from Typhoon Flo now stands at 29, with 10 others missing and thousands homeless. The typhoon, the most powerful to hit Japan in decades, injured 84 people during three days of heavy rains. Forecasters say it's now churning north into open waters of the Pacific.

In the United States, skies cleared in the Northeast after a day of chilly rains yesterday. Thunderstorms swept across the southern Great Plains, including central and southeast Kansas. Cool weather covered the northern half of the country, with near-freezing temperatures in Glacier National Park in northwest Montana.

Swordfish is becoming more popular as a seafood, and that's bad news for the species. Fishery experts told Congress yesterday that growing demand for swordfish is decimating the species and it's ''clearly overfished.'' William Fox of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration says the situation has become ''significantly worse'' in the past five years.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 20) UPI - American Telephone & Telegraph Co. Thursday repurchased N.V. Philips' 15 percent stake in AT&T Network Systems International B.V.

With the transaction, whose value was not disclosed, AT&T owns 74 percent of AT&T-NSI. STET, Italy's telecommunications holding company, retains a 20 percent stake, and Spain's Telefonica de Espana has agreed to acquire the remaining 6 percent.

AT&T-NSI, headquartered in the Dutch city of Hilversum, was formed as a joint venture between the U.S. telecommunications giant and the leading European electronics company.

Philips this year launched its own telecommunications division, including high-technology services already provided by AT&T, such as ISDN or integrated services digital network, video conferencing and private systems.

CAIRO, EGYPT (SEPT. 20) UPI - By day the Kuwaiti refugees listen to the Voice of America on shortwave radios and hover near telephones that never ring.

At night, the women put on their makeup and fashionable dresses, draping sheer veils over their coiffed hair while the men slip packets of Marlboro cigarettes in the pockets of their pleated trousers.

They gather at the posh Shepheards hotel along the Nile, their taxis and Merecedes blocking traffic until the early hours of the morning along the Corniche.

And it is here in the jammed lobby, with its white marble floor and brass chandelier and smoked glass walls, that 22-year-old Hana Khamis mulls over her plan.

She will go to Saudi Arabia, she says, and work her way through the thousands of foreign troops to the Kuwaiti border.

She will put on a dishdasha, the simple white robe worn by Kuwaiti men, tie her long black hair back with a band and cover it with a man's kiffeyah.

And then, she says, she will drive a rental car through thousands of armed Iraqi soldiers and tanks to Kuwait city to bring word to her father that she and her mother, her two brothers and three sisters are well in Cairo, and waiting anxiously to see him again.

''I think it can be done,'' says the petite university student, looking smart in her boxy, black silk suit with white piping on the sleeves.

''But my mother,'' she pauses in her agitation. ''She says it makes her very afraid. She does not want me to go. But, I want to go. I want to very much. I think I can do it. But my mother, she says no.''

Hamis is like the other Kuwaitis caught in Cairo.

They were in Egypt on summer holiday, seeing family they had not seen in ages, visiting the Pyramids and Luxor and dining at night at the landmark Shepheards or the Swiss Air restaurant where reservations, jacket and tie are strictly required.

Other family members were supposed to join them. They were supposed to go home in time to get ready for school. They had planned to go on to Europe or the United States for an extended holiday.

But on Aug. 2, Iraq invaded the tiny oil-rich emirate and they were stuck in Cairo, without word from home, without knowing what became of their families, friends, houses and pets.

So at night they gather at Shepheards to shares bits of news and rumors and, best of all, the few letters smuggled out from family members still trapped inside the emirate.

The women sit on low divans under the grand curved lobby staircase, eating pistachio nuts and talking among themselves for hour after hour. The men are at the bar and lounge, drinking glass after glass of strong tea sweetened with spoonfulls of sugar. The children are everywhere, playing a slippery game of tag on the polished marble floor.

But it is the young men who dominate Shepheards, congregating in the lobby and on the hotel's front steps. They perch along a retaining wall along the street, smoking pack after pack of cigarettes, dangling feet shod in leather loafers.

When a blonde foreign woman walks by they make a half-hearted attempt to call to her. But, their minds are on other things.

They are thinking about guns.

They are students who know of European capitals and electronics and music. But now they are learning what they can of assault rifles. They examine coveteously the weapons of the Egyptian tourist police. They discuss ways of making bombs out of petrol and cola bottles.

Ahmed al-Ali, 23, got a letter from his brother, smuggled out by friends who made a dash for the border.

''He says, every night they go fishing,'' says al-Alim of the discretely worded letter, unsigned just in case it got in the wrong hands.

''Do you know what this means, fishing?'' he asks.

Fishing means every night they take guns given to them by the Kuwaiti resistance movement and go out looking for Iraqi soldiers to shoot. But now the Iraqis are cracking down on the resistance, raiding their buildings and arresting young men. That is what the newly arrived refugees are saying.

''This letter was written a long time ago, now,'' says al-Ali. He wonders if his brother is still fishing, if he is safe.

(SEPT. 20) UPI - Iraqi athletes were booted from the Asian Games in Beijing today in response to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait last month. Delegates from the Olympic Council of Asian told reporters the vote was 27-3 to expel Iraq, with five abstentions. The Asian Games are scheduled to begin Saturday in China. .

The leaders of Jordan, Morocco and Algeria are holding a three-day summit to discuss an Arab peace initiative that calls for the withdrawal of Iraqi troops from Kuwait. Sources familiar with the plan say it would establish a Kuwaiti government that does NOT include the ruling al-Sabah family. Sources indicate Jordan's King Hussein discussed the plan this week with P-L-O chief Yasser Arafat , who just finished talks with Iraq's Saddam Hussein.

Talks on the future of American bases in the Philippine are being held amid a bomb threat issued by communist rebels opposed to the U-S military presence. The Philippines hosts Clark Air Base, Subic Bay naval station and four smaller U-S facilities. In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler says the bomb threat by the New People's Army was directed at U-S government or public facilities.

Secret high-level talks between the African National Congress and the rival Zulu Inkatha movement were held overnight in Durban, South Africa. In a joint statement the rival groups indicated the ''exploratory'' talks focused on ''grave, vital and urgent matters'' in an bid to end the township violence that has killed 750 people since early August. More talks are scheduled for next week.

Military officials say an Air Force pilot was killed last night when his F-16 jet crashed in a remote area of South Carolina near the Georgia border. Officials at Moody Air Force Base say the jet was on a training mission when the crash occurred in a wooded area near the Savannah River in Hampton County. An Air Force panel is trying to determine the cause of the crash.

News reports say about 200 Nigerian children died last month from tainted doses of an analgesic used to treat fever. The B-B-C says Nigerian officials banned sales of paracetamol syrup until the source of the contamination is found. Officials say the children, mostly ages six months to six years, were given the medicine at three government-run hospitals. An initial report blames a falsely labeled poisonous chemical that caused kidney failure.

PROVIDENCE, RI (SEPT. 20) UPI - The U.S. defense budget passed by the House could take a heavy toll on submarine makers like Electric Boat, which employs 7,500 Rhode Islanders.

The House passed a $283 billion budget Wednesday calling for one SSN- 21 Seawolf attack submarine , as opposed to three requested by the Navy, and ends production of the Trident ballistic missile submarine once the 18th is built. Both vessels are built by Electric Boat.

The 18th Trident is to be purchased next year under the House bill. The Navy had hoped for more than 20 Tridents from Electric Boat before production ended.

Electric Boat, a division of General Dynamics based in Groton, Conn., builds its submarine hulls at Quonset Point in Rhode Island, where 4,300 people work. Electric Boat has been girding for defense cuts since the easing of tensions between the United States and the Soviet Union.

The company said last week it planned to lay off 1,000 workers workers by Christmas and warned that, as a ''worst case scenario,'' it may cut its 23,000-employee workforce in half by 1995.

The House defense budget is $24 billion less than what President Bush asked for in fiscal 1991, which begins Oct. 1. In addition to cutting submarine production, it would stop production of the B-2 bomber, slash funding for ''Star Wars,'' and kill plans to move MX missiles from silos to railroads.

The Senate has come up with a $289 billion defense spending plan that must be compromised with the House.

Rhode Island Reps. Claudine Schneider and Ronald Machtley, who is a member of the Armed Services Committee, voted with the majority when the House passed its defense budget 256-155.

Schneider said the spending plan reflects ''changing defense priorities'' and criticized the Senate budget as being ''mired in the past.''

''(The Senate) takes a business-as-usual attitude by authorizing two more B-2 bombers and higher levels of funding for (Strategic Defense Initiative). The Senate also overruled the Navy by providing funding for two Los Angeles class submarines, yet no funding for the SSN-21 Seawolf attack submarine, which is critical to our naval security and important to Rhode Island's economy,'' she said.

GENEVA (SEPT. 20) UPI - The United States and other western countries Thursday again rejected arguments by China that it was making the necessary economic reforms to join the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

China applied for GATT membership in early 1989 but then reversed a political and economic reform movement which effectively put its request on hold.

At one of its infrequent meetings, a GATT working group on China heard new Chinese arguments Thursday, rejected them as insufficient and agreed to meet again only next spring.

Participants said the Chinese ambassador to the U.N. in Geneva, Fan Guoxiang, insisted that Beijing was moving towards reforms by ''opening to the outside'' and introducing ''equal competition between enterprises.''

That was rebuffed as ''too vague'' by delegates to GATT from the United States the European Community, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and Sweden, the officials said.

The officials demanded specific details of reform intentions, saying China has yet to prove it is moving from a state-controlled to a market economy as required to join GATT, the world's free trade regulatory body.

MIAMI (SEPT. 20) UPI - A tropical depression drifted westward across the Atlantic Ocean Thursday and forecasters predicted it would soon strengthen into Tropical Storm Josephine.

At 6 a.m. EDT, tropical depression No. 11 was centered near latitude 15.9 north, longitude 49.9 west, or a little over 700 miles east of the Lesser Antilles.

It was moving west at less than 5 mph and was expected to continue that motion Thursday, increasing its forward speed and gradually turning toward the northwest by Friday.

Its maximum sustained winds were near 35 mph and forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in Miami said strengthening was likely during the next 12 to 24 hours.

If its circulating winds reach 39 mph, it would become Tropical Storm Josephine, the 10th named storm of the 1990 Atlantic-Caribbean hurricane season.

Four storms - Bertha, Diana, Gustav and Isidore - have developed into hurricanes with winds of more than 74 mph so far this season. But none caused significant damage to land. The hurricane season runs June 1 to Nov. 30.

Forecasters also said an area of disturbed weather 625 miles southwest of the Cape Verde Islands had become better organized and could spawn a tropical depression in the next day or two.

ORLANDO, FL (SEPT. 20) UPI - A computer programmer who gave birth to Florida's first set of quadruplets in four years was still in a surgical recovery room Thursday, but her babies were healthy and doing well, a hospital official said.

Lois Ross, 33, of Sanford, who already had four children, delivered four more - two boys and two girls - by Caesarean section Wednesday.

Her doctors had hoped to deliver them the first week of October, but Ross, who had been hospitalized since July, insisted that they be delivered on Thursday.

''Basically, it was her call. ... She had just taken it as far as she could, so with the pressure and problems breathing and not being able to eat, they went ahead and took them yesterday,'' said Joe Brown, spokesman for the Arnold Palmer Hospital for Children & Women.

The babies, a girl who weighed 2 pounds, 15 1/2 ounces; a boy who weighed 2 pounds, 13 ounces; a girl who weighed 2 pounds, 10 1/2 ounces, and a boy who weighed 2 pounds, 11 1/2 ounces, were delivered at 8:20 a.m. Wednesday, about eight weeks premature.

''They're all in the neo-natal intensive care unit now. They will probably remain in the unit another four to eight weeks depending on their weight gain and how they respond, assuming there are no complications, and so far there are none,'' Brown said.

Ross, however, was suffering with a fever and remained in an operation recovery room Thursday.

Ross and her stay-at-home husband, Dennis, 40, already had four young children Denny, an adopted 5-year-old, Paula, 4; Amy 2, and 9-month-old Jamie.

Brown said Lois Ross had been on a combination of fertility drugs because she had suffered miscarriages.

''She'd already had four children, and they thought, five won't make that much more, but boom, they get quads,'' Brown said.

Florida's last set of quadruplets was born in Tampa in 1986.

Only six or seven sets of quadruplets are born in the United States each year, Brown said.

(SEPT. 20) UPI - Sources and Arab news reports say three leaders are meeting in Rabat today to discuss an Arab initiative for a Persian Gulf peace. They say the plan includes an Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait and establishment of a new government in the nation that does NOT include the ruling al-Sabah family. It also would provide for Iraqi annexation of two Kuwaiti islands in the Persian Gulf. King Hussein of Jordan is discussing the plan with the Moroccan and Algerian leaders.

Senior leaders of two rival black factions in South Africa held their first high-level meeting in more than a decade in a bid to end a bloody conflict. An intense flare-up in hostilities between the African National Congress and the rival Zulu movement Inkatha has left more than 750 people dead in black townships around Johannesburg since August. The two sides issued a joint statement following the secret talks, saying they agreed to meet again next Wednesday.

A Philippine spokesman says his nation hopes to work out what he termed a ''framework'' for a new relationship with the United States before closing the second round of talks on the future of U-S military bases. The talks in Manila have featured a U-S recognition that American forces will be withdrawn from the Philippines. Now, the State Department is warning Americans in the Philippines of a bomb threat by the communist New People's Army.

The U-S Customs Service says a man and woman from Hawaii are free on bond after being arrested for trying to sell warehouses full of U-S military equipment to undercover agents posing as arms dealers. The fighter jets, helicopters, tanks and bombs of all sizes apparently were left in Vietnam after the American withdrawal in 1975. The supplies reportedly are valued at about 500-Million dollars.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 20) UPI - The war of the states rages on and to the defeated go the spoils - America's garbage.

The battle between the states that transport their solid waste beyond their borders and the states where the garbage is dumped has been going on for many years, but it is getting fiercer.

And it will get worse as the amount of solid waste increases and the number of landfills where it can be buried shrinks.

People read three years ago about the barge Mobro that left Islip, N.Y., loaded with garbage and could not find a place to dock and shed its cargo.

And the ''Poo-Poo Choo-Choo,'' a 64-train-car load of sewage from Baltimore that last November tried to deliver its refuse in the Louisiana communities of Shriever, Labadieville and Donaldsonville.

But little is written about the trucks and trains that each day and night haul waste from one state to a dumping site in another state.

Americans produce between 160 million tons and 180 million tons of solid waste each year - enough to fill a convoy of trash trucks six times around Earth - and the Enviromental Protection Agency estimates will climb to 193 million tons by the end of the century.

At the same time, more and more of the older landfills, filled to the brim, are closed and intense local opposition blocks new landfills from opening.

''This leaves some communities with nowhere to dump their trash,'' said Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont. ''So, some community officials have decided the answer to their waste problems is to pass the trash.''

The states are now powerless to regulate the interstate shipment of garbage because the Supreme Court ruled in 1978 that transportation of solid waste among states comes under the commerce clause of the Constitution.

In the Senate this week, the garbage exporters and the garbage importers fought a skirmish.

On a 68-31 vote, the Senate approved legislation to allow states to ban solid waste dumping from other states or, as an alternative, charge the exporting states a higher fee for their waste than they charge home-state dumpers.

But the legislation was an amendment to the District of Columbia fiscal 1991 appropriations bill that President Bush is certain to veto because it would liberalize standards for abortion.

''The fight isn't over,'' said Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J. ''This is just the first round.''

The debate on the amendment degenerated into a ugly confrontation between its sponsor, Sen. Dan Coats, R-Ind., and the two New Jersey Democrats, Sens. Bradley and Frank Lautenberg, that masked the seriousness of the problem.

New Jersey, with 5.25 million tons, exports more garbage each year than any other state. Indiana, as well as Kentucky, has become a popular dumping ground.

Lautenberg, seeking to defeat the amendment, charged, ''For years, Indiana has been exporting garbage. We call it acid rain. But we did not build a wall around the Midwest.''

The New Jersey Democrats also railed at a political television ad Coats is running in his re-election campaign that portrays New Jersey as a ''fat slob with a cigar in his mouth ... this guy handing his garbage to some poor slob in Indiana.''

And Lautenberg even invoked the names of Angelo Bertelli, a legendary Notre Dame quarterback of the 1940s, and Kelly Tripucka, a Notre Dame basketball star who now plays with the Charlotte Hornets, as New Jersey athletes who starred and schooled in Indiana.

''We want New Jersey students,'' Coats said. ''We want New Jersey athletes. We want everything from New Jersey except your trash. We are happy to cooperate with other states in terms of who and what they send to us. We just don't want your garbage.''

Coats said the states need the power to regulate out-of-state garbage because the ''truckloads and trainloads of trash'' pouring into Indiana is rapidly using up landfills needed for the state's own refuse.

Coats said Indiana is willing to negotiate with other states, adding what Indiana does not want is for a state to say, ''We do not want to work out something with you. We are going to ship it to you whether you want it or not."

''Our enviromental plans are rendered useless. Our communities fester in resentment. Our landfills are glutted with the trash of the irresposible,''

Coats said.

TOKYO (SEPT. 20) UPI - The International Olympic Committe Thursday defended charges it caved in to commercial interests by awarding the 1996 Summer Games to Atlanta.

''The choice for Atlanta was made after many hours of study,'' IOC President Juan Antonio Samaranch said at a news conference at the end of the 96th IOC Session. ''I accept the result and I am sure the centennial Games will be excellent.''

Atlanta, likely to bring in more than $600 million in U.S. television rights for prime-time viewing, was chosen ahead of Athens, Toronto, Melbourne, Manchester and Belgrade.

Athens was the sentimental favorite with its aim of bringing the Olympics back to the city in 1996 after it had staged the first Modern Games in 1896.

Samaranch denied Coca-Cola, headquartered in the Georgia capital, played a key role in Atlanta's bid. He said the soft drink company was part of the IOC marketing program and assisted the whole Olympic movement and all the candidate cities.

Richard Pound of Canada, an IOC vice president and mainly responsible for revenue raising, echoed Samaranch's remarks.

He said Atlanta's selection was not a reflection of the IOC's commercial preference. Television and sponsorship interests would have been as great if the 1996 Summer Olympics had gone elsewhere.

''I believe the centennial Games are an event that would stand by themselves wherever they are held,'' he said. ''I can assure you, members of the IOC did not vote on the basis on what or may not have been commercial interests.''

Samaranch said there was no immediate intention of changing the voting procedure despite criticism in some quarters.

''We are always open to trying a new system if there is a better one, but the system we have today is not bad,'' he said. ''It was a democratic decision. We picked the best one. We are not closed to changing for the future but we are quite happy with this system.''

Samaranch did not comment on the wild fluctuation of votes. Many IOC members switched allegiance even though their original choices were still in contention. The secret ballot went the full distance before Atlanta passed the winning 44-vote mark by defeating Athens 51-35 in the fifth round.

Atlanta and Toronto, who shared 60 percent of the votes throughout, formed a North American alliance following Canada's fourth round exit, to defeat Athens.

Although the six candidates had spent more than $100 million between them in campaigning, Samaranch was pleased there was no repeat of the lavish spending surrounding the 1986 session in Lausanne where Barcelona was selected to host the 1992 Summer Olympics and the Winter Games went to Albertville, France.

Candidate cities held extravagant banquets and showered expensive presents on IOC members.

''The bidding process was very much better for 1996 than it was for 1992,'' Samaranch said. ''The candidate cities spent much less this time than the other.''

But he was still not 100 percent happy and the IOC has sent strict instructions to the six cities bidding to host the 1998 Winter Games. This selection will be made in Birmingham, England, next June.

''We do not want cities to spend money in the way they did in the past,'' he said.

IOC Director General Francois Carrard Wednesday revealed future candidate cities faced possible disqualification from the Olympic bid race if they break the new rules.

The accumulative value of gifts from a candidate city to any one IOC member will be limited to $200. This does not include air tickets or accommodation for visiting bidding cities. However, long family holidays at the expense of candidates will be a thing of the past. IOC members would only be invited to bring along one guest and no repeat invitations are allowed.

The IOC would identify any candidate breaking the rule and said repetition of a serious offense could result in diqualification from the bidding process.

Samaranch also made an oblique reference to candidates who made only token bids.

''The cities, even the losers, are not throwing their money away,'' he said. ''It is very good promotion for their city. I will not mention names, but many cities are known around the world thanks to their bid for the Olympic Games.''

ATLANTA (SEPT. 20) UPI - The number of Americans who know their cholesterol level more than tripled between 1987 and 1989, indicating education programs about the artery-clogging substance's health dangers are working, researchers said Thursday.

However, certain groups, including the poor, smokers, young adults and the lazy need more prodding, the federal Centers for Disease Control said in Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

The median proportion of people over 18 who knew the level of cholesterol in their blood jumped from 6 percent in 1987 to 21 percent in 1989, the CDC said in an update on cholesterol awareness in 39 states and the District of Columbia.

The proportion of adults who have had their cholesterol level checked during the same two-year span rose from 47 percent to 56 percent.

The percentage who had their cholesterol checked in 1989 ranged from a low of 48 percent in Alabama and New Mexico to a high of 64 percent in Connecticut, the CDC said.

The percentage who knew their cholesterol level ranged from 12 percent in the District of Columbia to 33 percent in the state of Washington.

While the general population is heeding warnings to watch cholesterol levels, some groups at highest risk for heart disease - smokers, sedentary people and the poor - are lagging in their efforts, the report said.

''The general good news is that cholesterol screening and awareness have increase substantially over the past three or four years,'' said Dr. Robert Anda, a CDC epidemiologist who co-authored the report. ''Unfortunately, it appears that some groups of individuals are lagging behind. Specifically, younger people, people from lower socioeconomic groups and people who are sedentary or are smokers.''

The National Cholesterol Education Program recommends that people 18 and older have their cholesterol level measured at least once every five years and take steps to lower the level if it reaches into the danger zone.

The CDC recommends a level of below 200 milligrams of cholesterol per deciliter of blood, and warns that a level of over 240 is dangerous.

High cholesterol levels are considered a risk factor for the development of heart attacks and strokes because the fatty substance can cause artherosclerosis or hardening of the arteries.

The federal health agency said it was concerned about the low proportion of young adults who knew their cholesterol levels or had been checked.

The report said that in last year's survey only 12 percent of the 18- 34 age group knew their level and 37 percent in the age group had been tested.

''The lower level of cholesterol testing and awareness among the youngest age group is of particular concern,'' the CDC said. ''Considerable evidence suggests that artherosclerosis is present by early adulthood and that early artherosclerotic lesions may be related to elevated cholesterol levels during childhood and adolescence.''

BUENOS AIRES, ARGENTINA (SEPT. 20) UPI - President Carlos Menem, brushing aside public protests over his decision to send warships to the Persian Gulf, said Thursday ''even my palace guard'' has volunteered for Middle East duty.

Menem's surprise decision this week to send two destroyers and a transport plane to the Middle East has been widely criticized by opposition parties in Congress. Polls show majority public sentiment is against the deployment.

In a breakfast meeting with four journalists, including a United Press International correspondent, Menem said he expected public opinion to swing soon in his favor.

''Talk to any Argentine soldier, and he will tell you he wants to go to the Persian Gulf,'' Menem said. ''Even the palace guard, the Grenadiers, come to me and say they want to go. I've had some soldiers come to me and say they're mad at me because I didn't chose them.''

Asked why the Argentine soldiers were volunteering, the president replied: ''They're professionals. That's what they're trained for.''

He said that many Argentines opposed his decision at first ''because they are badly informed.''

''When you talk about sending off troops to a far-away place, people think they are going to war. When they understand they are not going to a war, they will understand it.''

Menem said he was not worried about losing popularity because ''a president is not a movie star. He has to act on the basis of reality, on what is best for the country.''

He labeled opponents in Congress as an ''infernal melange'' of socialists, leftists, and members of the centrist Radical Civic Union who ''would oppose me if we decided to send troops and would oppose me if we decided not to send troops.''

Menem, 61, said Argentina expected to reap international benefits by joining the blockade against Iraq because it was following policy of the United Nations, which, he said, had the force of law in Argentina.

''Those who follow the law receive its benefits,'' Memen said.

DOYLESTOWN, PA (SEPT. 20) UPI - The Bucks County coroner, ignoring calls from citizens groups, Thursday said he has no intention of reopening the investigation into the suicide of political activist Abbie Hoffman.

The Citizens Commission on Human Rights and the Prozac Survivors Support Group - both offshoots of the Los Angeles-based Church of Scientology - had asked the coroner to reopen the case after it was learned Hoffman took the controversial anti-depressant Prozac six weeks before his death.

Dr. Thomas Rosko ruled that Hoffman committed suicide on April 12, 1989, in his Solebury Township by taking an overdose of the sedative phenobarbitol and alcohol.

Hoffman, 52, had filled a prescription for Prozac before his death, but Rosko's autopsy did not find any traces of the drug.

Hoffman, best known as the anti-Vietnam war activist who founded the Youth International Party, known as the Yippies, used Prozac for two weeks in February 1989 and then stopped, the groups said.

A Harvard study published in February found that 3 1/2 percent of Prozac users developed suicidal thoughts that lasted up to three months after taking the drug.

Rosko said he would not reopen the case because ''nothing much has changed from when all this started several weeks ago.''

''The reasons why he commited suicide did not change the fact that he did commit suicide. The death was intentional, a self-inflicted overdose of drugs.

''My duty as a coroner is to make a reasonable judgment as to the cause and manner of death and whether he was on drugs,'' Rosko said.

As one of the Chicago Seven, Hoffman was convicted of organizing violent demonstrations at the 1968 Democratic National Convention. The convictions were overturned on appeal.

He settled in rural southeastern Pennsylvania in the mid-1980s after leading the fight against a controversial water diversion project.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 20) UPI - In a crucial step towards finding a cure for the nation's most common inherited fatal disease, scientists reported Thursday they had repaired cells with the genetic defect that causes cystic fibrosis.

In separate but complementary studies, two research teams used genetic engineering techniques to fix the disease-causing problems in cells taken from people suffering from cystic fibrosis.

The cells were only corrected in the test tube, and were not returned to the patients. Any efforts to use gene therapy to treat cystic fibrosis are likely years away because the approach first must be tested in animals, and researchers must also figure a way to get the genes into patients' lungs, possibly through inhalation.

''This is another step in the direction of offering cystic fibrosis patients treatment, but it is not treatment. On the other hand, patients should take hope and feel good about this achievement. It could have taken longer and been more complex,'' said Dr. Francis Collins of the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, one of the leaders of the research.

Currently, there is no treatment to prevent or directly attack cystic fibrosis a disease in which thick mucus clogs the lungs and leads to life-threatening infections. About one in 2,000 white babies are stricken by cystic fibrosis, and most patients die before they reach age 40.

Robert Dresing, president of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, said: ''There are major steps to achieve before human gene therapy, but this research is a milestone in the drive to cure cystic fibrosis.''

Although their approaches varied slightly, both teams of scientists used a virus to insert a normal copy of the cystic fibrosis gene into cells taken from diseased patients and grown in laboratory dishes. After receiving the healthy gene, the cells appeared to function normally.

The achievement comes about a year after the discovery of the genetic flaw that causes the vast majority - about 70 percent - of cystic fibrosis cases.

At that time, researchers speculated the protein that the gene codes for helped transport salt out of cells. Chloride, which is a component of salt, regulates cells' water levels, and upsetting that balance appears to be what causes the mucus of cystic fibrosis patients to thicken.

In a study published in the journal Cell, a team from the University of Michigan, the University of Alabama at Birmingham and The Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto used a mouse virus that had been rendered harmless to put normal genes into cells taken from a pancreas tumor in a cystic fibrosis patient.

Before the gene implant, the pancreatic cells did not allow salt to properly cross their membranes. After the procedure, those cells transported salt as effectively as cells taken from the airways of healthy people, a change that lasted at least two months and should be capable of producing of normal mucus, researchers said.

That team is now working on implanting normal genes in cells from the airways of people with cystic fibrosis because respiratory problems, not pancreas problems, are the major killers of such patients. The pancreas cells were used in the first test because they were easier to grow.

Meanwhile, in a study to be published next week in the British journal Nature, researchers from the University of Iowa in Iowa City, Genzyme Corp. of Framingham, Mass., and Tufts University in Boston used a cowpox virus to insert normal genes into airway cells taken from cystic fibrosis patients. The corrected cells functioned normally, while comparison cystic fibrosis cells that received an extra copy of the defective gene still did not work properly.

''These results suggests attempts to correct the defect in a cystic fibrosis person is realistic. But there could be an immense amount of work before we can achieve that,'' said Michael Welsh of the University of Iowa, a co-author of the Nature article.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 20) UPI - Congressional investigators said Thursday businesses are routinely conniving with customers to circumvent money-laundering laws requiring large cash transactions be reported to the Internal Revenue Service.

''Businesses from across our land are willing to assist others in laundering money and evading taxes for a 'quick buck,''' said Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, chairman of a House Ways and Means subcommittee.

Loopholes in the present law are ''big enough to ... drive a brand new Mercedes-Benz through,'' said Rep. Richard Schulze, R-Pa.

Under a 1984 law, businesses are required to report to the IRS all transactions that involve more than $10,000 in cash. The purpose was to help the IRS identify taxpayers with large cash incomes that might otherwise be underreported.

However, the subcommittee investigators found that car dealers, jewelers, yacht salesmen and others are willing to ignore the law in order to make big cash sales.

''It is shocking that businesses throughout the country are routinely conniving with customers to violate the law,'' Pickle said during a hearing Thursday.

The subcommittee investigators reported on their visits to 79 businesses nationwide where they negotiated for the purchase of $4.2 million in luxury goods, each for more than $10,000 cash.

''Seventy-six out of 79 of these businesses agreed to acept cash and not report the transactions to the IRS. In fact, some of the businesses actually suggested ploys to circumvent the reporting requirements,'' Pickle said.

The investigators bought a $55,000 Persian rug, a $250,000 condominium, a $22,000 antique mirror, a $73,000 Porsche, a $15,000 Mazda Miata, and two Rolex watches for $17,000.

Barney Gomez, one of the investigators, said that when the Rolex watches were purchased from an Atlanta jeweler, the salesman agreed to work out a non-reporting deal but asked the undercover agents to keep their voices down ''because we still have a couple if IRS people in the backroom looking at our records.''

Drug dealers, who routinely have large amounts of cash, are one of the chief targets of the reporting law. But Pickle said it is intended to ''enhance tax compliance by everyone,'' including doctors, lawyers, executives, businessmen and others with large cash incomes.

Schulze criticized the IRS for lax enforcement, saying, ''Our investigation found an almost total breakdown in the program.''

But Schulze said it was obvious that many businesses are anxious to hide large cash transactions and they need to be pressured into compliance.

He opposed ''placing unnecessary burdens on the legitimate businessman, especially small businesses. But, if we're ever going to put a stop to the drug and crime scourge ravaging this country, everyone, including the business community, has to do his part.''

Michael Murphy, an IRS senior deputy commissioner, said the IRS's own investigations show that compliance with the reporting requirement ''is poor '' but said new efforts by the agency ''are begining to bear fruit.''

''We feel that as the business community becomes more aware of the requirements and more publicity is generated, compliance should improve, '' Murphy told the subcommittee.

TORONTO (SEPT. 20) UPI - Members of the Reichmann family are considering selling 20 percent of a partnership that owns a minority share in Olympia & York Developments Ltd.'s major U.S. real estate portfolio, published reports said Thursday.

In an interview with The Financial Post, John Zuccotti, chief executive of subsidiary Olympia & York (U.S.) Cos. said: ''O&Y itself is not selling any part of its U.S. assets.''

But Reichmann family real estate in the U.S. would be up for sale under the proposed deal, which could be worth between $200 million and $800 million, according to a Wall Street Journal report quoting real estate professionals.

Sources said the sale could be used to raise cash for Olympia & York's huge Canary Wharf development in London.

In addition, the move is seen as a hedge against the depressed northeastern U.S. real estate market.

Olympia & York is one of the largest commercial real estate owners in New York City and has major holdings in Boston, San Francisco and other U.S. cities.

The Reichmanns have retained investment bankers Lazard Freres to handle the sale, The New York Times said.

Zuccotti, a former New York City deputy mayor, said the partnership involves several members of the Reichmann family.

An unidenfited O&Y source said the possible sale was part of attempts at O&Y to prepare for the retirement of Paul, Albert and Ralph Reichmann. The insider said the timing did not indicate the imminent retirement of the three brothers also the company's main shareholders.

O&Y itself holds the balance of the U.S. real estate portfolio, which includes properties in New York. O&Y is reportedly New York's largest single landlord.

O&Y, primarily a real estate development company, also has an investment portfolio including interests in oil and gas, forest products and financial services. A March 1990 estimate of O&Y's investment portfolio by Dominion Bond Rating Service said it was worth more than $5.5 billion in value.

The rating agency did not provide an estimated value for the company's real estate holdings.

CHICAGO (SEPT. 20) UPI - Eighty-seven percent of top-ranking executives in the Chicago area say the United States either is headed for or already in recession, according to a survey released Thursday.

The survey by Ernst & Young, an accounting firm, examined the U.S. economic outlook through the eyes of more than 180 of the area's top executives.

Forty-nine percent believe the U.S. is headed for a recession and another 38 percent think the recession already is here, said spokesman William Church.

Top officials had different views depending on whether they were in the financial or manufacturing sectors.

''More than half of those responding from manufacturing companies think the recession is already here, compared to just 28 percent of the financial respondents.

''More than 80 percent of the responding manufacturing executives say the national recession will last from 1-2 years, compared to just 57 percent of the financial executives. Almost a third of the financial respondents predict a recesssion of a year or less,'' the survey said.

''But the bright side for the Chicago area is that they believe it will be less severe both in duration and effect here,'' said Church.

Those who believe the recession will be less severe in the Chicago area cited its diversity of industries, strong service-based companies and a lower rate of distress in the real estate industry.

Stephen C. Mack, partner-in-charge of Ernst & Young's Financial Services practice, said the different viewpoints are understandable.

''Many manufacturers are undoubtedly beginning to see a cash crunch as expenses rise and revenues fall, while financial institutions will not feel the pinch until their loan portfolios are impacted, possibly by such signals as missed payments by borrowers,'' Mack said.

Executives listed four main factors as being most likely to impact business in the next six to 12 months. They were recession, reduced consumer confidence, higher oil prices, and the Persian Gulf crisis. Higher interest rates were of lesser concern.

In terms of consumer confidence, Duff & Phelps Investment Research Co. said separately that consumers could make recessionary fears self- fulfilling.

''To a large extent, the fate of the economy rest in the hands of consumers,'' said Wayne C. Stevens, president and CEO.

''Despite a sharp drop in consumer confidence following the Iraqi invasion, anecdotal evidence and incomplete data for August indicate that, as yet, there appears to have been no major disruption in consumer spending patterns.''

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 20) UPI - Tests on ticks collected in the 1940s indicate Lyme disease plagued the United States three decades earlier than previously thought and may have originated on Long Island, researchers said Thursday.

Analyzing the bodies of 136 ticks preserved in alcohol in the Museum of Comparative Zoology in Cambridge, Mass., and the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, researchers found evidence of the microbe that causes Lyme disease in some ticks that roamed eastern Long Island 44 years ago.

''These data suggest that the appearance of the Lyme disease ... preceded, by at least a generation, the formal recognition of this disease as a clinical entity in the United States,'' the researchers reported in the journal Science.

The ticks had been found between 1924 and 1951 in various parts of the country including Naushon Island and Martha's Vineyard off the coast of Cape Cod, Mass., various parts of Long Island, N.Y., South Carolina, Florida and California.

Researchers from Yale University in New Haven, Conn., Harvard University in Cambridge and the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., analyzed the specimens using a technique known as polymerase chain reaction, which allows scientists to analyze very tiny samples of genetic material.

The researchers found genetic material from the organism that causes Lyme disease - a spirochete called Borrelia burgdoferi - in 13 ticks collected in the 1940s from the adjacent communities of Montauk Point and Hither Hills in eastern Long Island. No such genetic material was found in any other samples even though many are now infested with infected ticks, which spread the disease to humans through their bites.

While ''it is tempting'' to conclude Lyme disease originated there, the researchers said they had not analyzed enough samples from elsewhere to be sure.

However, around that time, Long Island doctors diagnosed a variety of diseases with names like ''Montauk knee'' or ''Montauk spider bite'' that had symptoms similar to Lyme disease and may have been Lyme disease, said Dr. David Persing a pathologist at the Mayo Clinic who led the research while at Yale.

Lyme disease was not recognized as a distinct illness in the United States until 1975, when patients were first diagnosed in Lyme, Conn., which is located across the Long Island Sound from the Montauk Point and Hither Hills.

More than 14,000 cases of Lyme disease have been reported in 43 states since 1980, with most cases occurring in the Northeast and Mid- Atlantic coastal states and Wisconsin, Minnesota, California and Oregon.

The first syptoms are a usually distinctive rash at the tick bite site and flu-like symptoms. If diagnosed early, the disease can usually be treated with antibiotics. But without treatment, complications such as chronic arthritis, neurological damage and organ damage can occur.

Understanding more about the history of the disease has no direct therapeutic value, Persing said, but helps scientists gain a fuller understanding of the illness.

Researchers are uncertain how Lyme disease came to the United States but the illness had been reported in Europe and could have been brought over through the importation of certain tick-infested animals, he said.

BRUSSELS, Belgium (SEPT. 20) UPI - When a Japanese art connoisseur buys a Renoir at a New York auction, it counts as a French export to Japan and distorts trade figures, a European Community official said Thursday.

Although the 12-nation EC's massive trade deficit with Japan has been recently shrinking, much of the improvement stems from a frenzy of Japanese purchases of Van Goghs and Renoirs - in the Big Apple.

Shipped to their new Japanese owners, the masterpieces are ''attributed as an import - not from the United States, but from the country of origin of the long-dead painter,'' said Frans Andriessen, the EC's top trade official.

''It paints a rosier picture, if you will forgive the expression, than is actually the case,'' he said.

In July, more than one-third of the EC's balance-of-trade improvement with Japan was due to Japanese art imports.

''Japanese imports of paintings have grown so large as to affect the trade figures significantly almost every month,'' the EC official said. ''These paintings, I may say, are not the fresh output of Europe's most industrious modern artists, from which we would earn real benefit.''

The EC trade commissioner's remarks came in a speech to an EC-Japan journalist's conference in Brighton, England. Copies of the speech were released in Brussels.

Japanese art connoisseurs clearly prefer Picasso and Monet to today's starving artists.

Of the eight highest-priced artworks ever sold at auction, five have gone to Japanese bidders, including Van Gogh's melancholy ''Dr. Gachet,'' which set a new record of $82.5 million earlier this year.

Although he criticized the artwork accounting system as twisted, Andriessen said it should at least recognize an artist's birthplace as his true country of origin.

''Speaking as a Dutchman, I hope this bizarre practice correctly attributes the work of Vincent Van Gogh to Holland and not to France where he actually painted many of his most famous works,'' said the former Dutch finance minister.

Japan's trade surplus with the EC was $20 billion last year, a slight auction-aided improvement from 1988.

LONDON (SEPT. 20) UPI - Stock prices on the London International Stock Exchange tumbled to their lowest level of the year in hectic trading Thursday as soaring oil prices and high interest rates undermined companies with heavy borrowings.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which added 1.8 points Wednesday, was plunged 48.9 points to 2,016.9. The narrower top 30 industrial average fell 45.0 points to 1,531.1.

Volume amounted to around 518 million shares compared with 369 million shares changing hands on Wednesday.

Analysts said prices tumbled as investor confidence was hit by ''bad news'' on all sides of the market.

Analysts said that worries about interest rates, oil prices and the general economic situation in Britain combined to produce an uneasy and volatile market.

On the economic front, the Bank of England reported Britain's narrow money supply M-0 rose a provisionally estimated 4.9 percent in August from a year earlier.

M-4 lending, a measure of bank and building society lending to private sectors rose a seasonally adjusted estimated $9.1 billion in August.

The figures compare with market expectations of a 4.9 percent rise in the M-0 and the governments target range of 1 percent to 5 percent growth in the fiscal year ended March 31. Analysts were expecting M-4 to rise about $5.2 billion.

On the corporate news front, Polly Peck International PLC, a British conglomerate, asked the exchange to suspend trading in its shares simply to stop the stock's ''free fall.''

Polly Peck International, whose interest span from Turkish leisure to Japanese electronics, plunged $2.43 to $1.98 on numerous unsubstantiated rumors regarding the company.

On the trading floor, among some of the day's highlights, heavy casualties were also apparent among property companies.

Rosehaugh dropped 54 cents to $1.30 and Stanhope plunged 41 cents to just $1.02.

Pressure of high interest rates pushed Hammerson down 43 cents to $9.68 and similar problems afflicted Speyhawk, whose shares fell 36 cents to $1.50.

Higher earnings by Glaxo and Guinness were overshadowed by the market trend.

Glaxo announced its profits climbed 13.3 percent to $2.14 billion but Glaxo fell 8 cents to $12.90.

Guinness shares dropped 16 cents to $12.10 despite a 31 percent increase in its profits to $462 million.

Elsewhere in Europe, stock prices closed lower in light trading on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange for the sixth consecutive session.

The closely watched German Stock Index, which lost 19.73 points Wednesday, fell another 30.03 points or 2 percent to 1,457.51 - its lowest level Nov. 8, 1989.

Analysts said the market continued to be plagued by worries about Persian Gulf crisis.

Market watchers noted that selling pressure was particularly strong from Swiss and British traders, but overall the trading activity was described as ''anemic.''

HOUSTON (SEPT. 20) UPI - American General Corp. said if a buyer does not step forward with an offer for the entire company, management will sell just one of three business segments.

The announcement, late Wednesday, sent the insurance giant's stock down $6.375 to close at $33.625. The home service division has a book value of $3 billion but American General did not say what it would do with proceeds from the sale of that division.

In a board meeting Wednesday, American General directors authorized management to add a restructuring to the current efforts to sell the company as a whole.

Under the restructuring plan, if the entire company cannot be sold, then the firm's home service companies will be put up for sale, and American General will continue to operate as a public company with its insurance-special markets and finance-real estate divisions.

American General announced the company was for sale at its May 2 annual meeting, following an unsuccessful takeover attempt by Torchmark Corp. of Birmingham, Ala.

''We believe that the current international and economic uncertainty has reduced the probability of completing a transaction of the size and complexity represented by the sale of the company as a whole,'' said American General's Harold S. Hook.

''The interest shown thus far in the process has been primarily in the parts - particularly home service - and not in acquiring the entire company,'' Hook said.

He called the new restructuring plan the ''next-best alternative'' to selling the company as a whole.

In previous reports, American General said it was pleased with the number of interested buyers, both international and domestic. But Wednesday, executives acknowledged they are not negotiating on any specific offer although they have had discussions with many prospective buyers.

Hook said he expects Torchmark to be a bidder for the home services unit.

Torchmark, which has publicly stated its primary interest is in American General's home service segment, had little to say about American General's restructuring plan.

''We continue to be interested in American General, and we're most interested in its home service segment. We're anxious to review the company's confidential memorandum,'' the company said in a news release.

BOSTON (SEPT. 20) UPI - A man aquitted of raping and helping to hide the murder of his infant daughter six years ago was sentenced Thursday to 10 years in prison for marijuana smuggling.

Ralph Richard, 38, formerly of Pawtucket, R.I., was sentenced in U.S. District Court by Judge Andrew Caffrey. He was convicted in June of taking part in the interstate drug ring.

Caffrey last week sentenced 10 men to prison terms ranging from 10 years to six months for their involvement in the operation.

Richard was convicted on two counts he trafficked marijuana between 1973 and 1984 and possessed the drug with intent to sell it in 1984.

Several witnesses testified that Richard participated in one smuggling operation that brought some 10,000 pounds of pot into North Carolina in May 1984, and continued to deal drugs until at least October of that year.

Richard made national headlines in 1984 when his 4-month-old daughter, Jerri Ann, was allegedly snatched from her crib in his Pawtucket apartment.

He and his wife, Donna, issued public pleas for the child's return, but the baby's raped and beaten body was found in an alley near their home four days after her disappearance.

Donna Richard was charged with the baby's slaying and her husband with rape, but he was aquitted in 1986 and charges against his wife were dropped.

At one point during the trial, Richard said he feared Jerri Ann was slain in retaliation for a drug deal. The death has never been solved.

BOGOTA, COLOMBIA (SEPT. 20) UPI - President Cesar Gaviria, who took office last month, faced his first crisis with the recent kidnapping of three people that police said may be part of a cocaine cartel plan to pressure the government into negotiations.

Francisco Santos, news editor of Colombia's largest circulation newspaper, El Tiempo, was kidnapped Wednesday night by armed men who killed a bodyguard. Santos is the son of Hernando Santos, publisher of the paper owned by the prominent Santos family.

Also kidnapped Wednesday was the sister of a former top government official. Others still missing were Diana Turbay de Uribe, daughter of former president Julio Turbay, and five journalists who disappeared Aug. 30.

Gen. Nassin Yanine Diaz, National Police commander for Bogota, said officials were working on the assumption the cases were related and part of a plan to pressure the government to negotiate with cocaine cartel leaders.

''It is one of the aspects we are evaluating,'' Yanine told the radio station RCN. ''If it is a plan put in place to pressure the government to look for a solution then we can say the cases are related. But up to now, we are evaulating this. I believe that we, as policemen, have to be working with this hypothesis.''

The spate of kidnappings prompted the first crisis faced by Gaviria, who took office Aug. 7 looking to end a war between the government and the powerful Medellin cartel of cocaine traffickers.

Gaviria on Sept. 5 announced a peace plan by which drug traffickers and others who committed acts of violence could turn themselves in and confess to their crimes. In return they could receive a reduced sentence and would be ineligible for extradition to the United States.

News reports have said no one has yet taken advantage of the offer. The government also said it did not expect top traffickers to surrender.

The kidnappings disturbed a period of relative peace that began just before Gaviria took office when the Medellin cartel declared an end to its bombings and killings. The peace declaration appeared aimed at pressuring the government to end extradition and reach an agreement with the cartel.

Santos, 28, was kidnapped by armed men who stopped his vehicle and killed his bodyguard. No demands had been received Thursday, officials said.

Hours before, Marina Montoya de Perez was kidnapped from a Bogota restaurant. She is the sister of the former secretary-general of the presidency under the past administration, German Montoya.

During the term of former President Virgilio Barco, Montoya's son, businessman Alvaro Montoya, was kidnapped by the Medellin cartel. He was released after talks between the cartel and the government.

In other cases, Turbay de Uribe, owner of a television news program and a magazine, left Bogota Aug. 30 to try to obtain an interview with the leader of a leftist guerrilla group. She and five other people have not been heard from since.

Bogota newspapers have reported she may be in the hands of Pablo Escobar, the fugitive Medellin cartel kingpin. But her father said Wednesday there was no evidence she had been kidnapped and that she may still be working on a project for the station and magazine.

FLOSSMOOR, IL (SEPT. 20) UPI - Cori Ward's elderly mother has not been calling up the troops in Saudia Arabia, but it looked like it when this month's phone bill rang in at more than $8.7 million.

Illinois Bell spokesman Larry Cose said the elderly woman, who lives in the southern Chicago suburb of Flossmoor, was supposed to get a bill for $87.98 for three weeks service with no long distance calls.

''It was a manual error,'' Cose said. ''We apologized, of course. Something like this rarely happens.''

As far as anyone can figure, an Illinois Bell employee incorrectly typed a correction into the computer system.

Ward said it took some talking, though, to convince the telephone company of its error.

''They said, 'Why do you want a new bill?''' Ward said. ''I said, 'Well, it's rather high.' Then they pulled it up on the computer and said, 'Yes, I see what you mean.'''

Ward says her 75-year-old mother has been a little defensive about the whole thing. She insists she only called her daughter.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 20) UPI - America continues to act as a magnet for brilliant young scientists who are breaking new grounds in many advanced research and high-technology sectors, Fortune magazine said Thursday.

''America continues to act as a magnet for brilliant intellects,'' Fortune said in its issue dated Oct. 8. ''The U.S. scientific and engineering community is nearly a million strong, more than twice the size of Germany's or Japan's.''

While U.S. companies repeatedly warn they need cheaper credit to finance research and development or risk losing the high-technology race to foreign countries, Fortune said Americans invest more in research and development than Japan, Germany, Britain and France combined.

The research and development spendings in the United States in 1990 are estimated at around $108 billion, with $74 billion shelled out by corporate America. The huge budget does not include spendings on military research.

Fortune selected 12 scientists, including three women, as ''America's hot young scientists.''

Closely watched by corporations are Peter Schultz, named America's outstanding young scientist in 1988 by the National Science Foundation, and his work on antibodies; Australian-born Rodney Brooks, associate professor of computer science at MIT, who has endeavored to revolutionize industrial robots; Sharon Long, an associate professor of biology at Stanford, who seeks to stimulate plant growth without massive doses of fertilizers.

But not all research work is aimed at industrial production. Michael Freedman's revolutionary work on topology, a specific branch of mathematics, has won him a ''genius'' five-year grant although there is no direct application yet for his work.

Susan Solomon, who said she was influenced by French scientist and environmentalist Jacques Cousteau, focused her research on the problems of the ozone hole and reached one conclusion: the only solution to save the planet is by prohibiting all offending chemicals.

Bonnie Wallace, a professor at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in Troy, N.Y., is working on new, better drugs to fight diseases based on cell degeneration, while Australian-born Paul Bottomley is investigating the potential of spectroscopic diagnosis.

Computers and the infinitely small continue to fascinate scientists and the high-technology industry is closely watching. Donald Eigler has managed to create the first man-made cluster of atoms which - one day - could be used to produce minute electronic circuits. Eigler also has a sense of humor - or business - and arranged the artificial atom configuration to read ''IBM.''

Mark Reed, a former Texas Instruments researcher and now a professor at Yale, is studying the quantum effect in his elusive search for memory cells that could fit one billion bits information on a surface not bigger than a dot.

Danish-born Bjarne Stroutstrup endeavored to make using computers easy with a new program called ''C++'' which replaces many cumbersome commands with a few strokes.

Marc Montminy, a scientist at the Salk Institute in LaJolla, Calif., has turned his attention to chemicals produced by the brain and linked to mental disorders.

Alan Dressler, who started studying astronomy at age 5, has tracked down the ''Great Attractor,'' a dark matter mass 200 million light years from earth, whose discovery is challenging the conventional wisdom of the Big Bang theory.

The Saudi envoy, Prince Saud al-Faisal, met for an hour with China's hard-line premier during his first visit to Beijing since Saudi Arabia established diplomatic with China in July.

''The talks went very well,'' al-Faisal said at Beijing's airport before departing for Saudi Arabia. ''I am pleased to say I found a very strong position from the government of China.''

Al-Faisal said he was aware of China's publicly stated support for shipments of emergency food and medicine to Iraq, but said he came away his meetings reassured that Beijing was working in concert with the U.N. Security Council.

''There already is an effort to establish that type of (emergency) aid through the machinery of the Security Council,'' he said. ''I found no difference at all in the position of China in this regard.''

As one of five permanent members of the Security Council, China has consistently supported the body's economic embargo of Iraq to compel it to reverse its Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

But Beijing has alarmed Baghdad's foes by maintaining that aid shipments to Iraq are necessary and should be carried out, although officials deny that China has actually made any such shipments.

Officials traveling with the foreign minister said China's stance on food and medicine appeared to be concerned primarily with the conditions of Chinese and other foreign workers stranded in Iraq since the invasion.

Saudi officials said they were told by Chinese officials that about 1,400 Chinese workers remain in Iraq, down from an estimated 5,000 two months ago.

Saudi delegation members said they expressed Riyadh's wishes that all members of the Security Council - including China and the Soviet Union - would commit troops to the massive U.S. deployment enforcing the U.N. embargo.

Chinese officials responded by repeating their hope the crisis could be solved by the gulf nations without military involvement by the ''big powers.''

The Saudi envoy said he nevertheless was satisfied with China's grudging acceptance of the huge U.S. military role in Saudi Arabia and throughout the gulf region.

''I found there is complete understanding (by the Chinese) of the measures taken by Saudi Arabia and the other gulf countries for the security of the gulf countries,'' he said.

Al-Faisal also met with Chinese President Yang Shangkun and other ranking Chinese officials.

Al-Faisal arrived in Beijing Wednesday from Moscow, where he and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev announced Monday their countries would establish full diplomatic ties.

Moscow, like China, made no commitments to join the U.S.-led military force.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 20) UPI - The government will spend about $2.6 billion in federal disaster aid to help the victims of Hurricane Hugo, which caused widespread destruction last year when it stormed across the Caribbean and the Carolinas.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency, marking the first anniversary of the hurricance, said some $1.19 billion of the federal money was needed to supplement the long-term recovery needs of residents and business owners hurt by the storm.

The projected FEMA figure includes $725 million in family grants and housing assistance, $446 million in loans to cover uninsured private and business property losses, and $15 million in unemployment payments and counseling services.

FEMA said the storm caused more than 304,000 people to seek federal assistance the most ever to register for disaster aid as a result of a single incident. Of the total, 144,713 people were furnished with housing, and 187,259 received grants to help pay for disaster-related expenses.

In addition, some $413 million was paid in federal flood insurance proceeds and approved projects for reducing the risk of future hurricane damage, the agency said.

FEMA said the costliest of the recoveries was in South Carolina, where $1.02 billion in total federal funding was needed. In the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico, total federal recovery costs were placed at $1.5 billion. In North Carolina, $69.4 million in federal money was needed to fix the damage.

COLORADO SPRINGS, CO (SEPT. 20) UPI - Some of the students at Coronado High School thought the new cheerleader looked a little large.

Members of the football team joked they would never go out with a girl who could lift more weight than they could.

No wonder, because the high school cheerleader was a 26-year-old man.

For nearly two weeks, Charles James Daugherty convinced the 1,500 students and teachers at Coronado that he was an 11th-grade coed, police said Thursday.

Daughtery, using the name Cheyen Weatherly, showed up at the school Sept. 6 purporting to be a transfer student from Greece and offering a high school transcript.

''Cheyen'' was a good student and tried out for the cheerleading squad, although ''she'' apparently never dressed with the other girl cheerleaders, said police Sgt. Ollie Baltus.

But, at 5-foot-8 and 160 pounds, some people were suspicious of the newcomer.

''Everyone just looked at her like she was so big and everything,'' said Gina, a student at the school. ''I remember one time she (Cheyen) wanted to go out with some of the guys on the football team, but they said they'd never go out with someone who could bench (press) as much as they could.''

School officials did some checking on the transcript and discovered it was a phony. Police arrested Daugherty Tuesday on suspicion of felony impersonation and third-degree forgery.

Daugherty has had experience as a cheerleader, Baltus said. Posing as a woman he served with the all-female cheerleading squad of the Colorado Springs Spirit, a now-defunct minor league football team.

''We did our cheerleading tryouts last year and she (Daugherty) made the squad '' said Betsy Acree, leader of the Spirit squad. ''She was great. I have nothing bad to say about the girl, except she wasn't a girl.''

Acree said she discovered midway through the season that Daugherty was a man and dismissed him.

''One of the cutest stories was that one of the guys involved on the football team, a mister macho, mister chauvinistic pig, made a comment about what great legs she had,'' Acree said.

LONDON (SEPT. 20) UPI - One young British girl is destined to become a living doll - a real-life Barbie doll who will visit theme parks and shopping arcades and attend promotional events to sign autographs and talk to Barbie fans.

American toy manufacters Mattel Thursday announced a campaign to find a young British girl between the ages of 16 and 25 who fits the description of a Barbie doll look-alike.

''She must be bright and bubbly,'' said Mattel's UK brand manager Elaine Blackmore.

Physical requirements include blond hair, blue eyes and long legs, she said.

The winning applicant also must have a good reputation, she said. Barbie has always been faithful to her boyfriend, Ken, and Mattel was planning to scrutinize each applicant, Blackmore said.

''A lot of little girls look up to Barbie and it's important they stay together,'' she said.

Mattel wants the girl to promote Suncharm, the latest version of its best-seller in time for Christmas, she said.

''Like our doll, the real-life Barbie will be a trendsetter, dressed in the latest styles to combine a look that captures the essences of the great outdoors,'' said Blackmore.

The Suncharm look-alike will reign for at least one year and earn up to $28,050 for her appearances.

The chosen girl will be given horseback riding lessons so that she can bring her horse to appearances, she said.

Barbie was named after the daughter of Mattel's co-founders, Ruth Handler and her husband Elliot after they spotted her playing with paper dolls. For the past 31 years it has been one of Mattel's largest selling toys.

Barbie generates $561 million a year from 67 countries with more than 500 million dolls sold per year.

Britain is the first country to hold a contest for a Barbie look- alike, Blackmore said.

COLOMBO, SRI LANKA (SEPT. 20) UPI - Tamil militants wielding knives and automatic weapons stormed through a fishing village in northern Sri Lanka, setting fire to houses and killing at least 40 villagers, a senior military official said Thursday.

The official said the massacre took place Wednesday evening in the ethnic Sinhalese-dominated village of Vella Mundel, about 80 miles north of Colombo.

Rebels of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, the powerful ethnic Tamil separatist group fighting to create an independent homeland for the nation's minority Tamil population, were responsible for the attack, the official said.

''We have recovered 15 bullet-ridden bodies,'' he said.

Initial reports from the village said police rescued two wounded villagers, who told them an unspeciied number of armed militants killed people on sight. Officials said the two wounded villagers told them at least 40 people had been killed in the attack.

''A large number of fishing huts have also been burned down,'' the official said. ''We fear that there are bodies charred inside.''

The official said authorities in Colombo were waiting for a detailed report.

Rebels mined all approaches to the village, forcing security forces to use navy boats to reach the community, he said.

Normal life in the northern and eastern parts of the Indian Ocean island nation has been disrupted since mid-June, when the Tigers renewed their war against the government by staging simultaneous attacks on four military installations in the eastern part of the country.

Since then, more than 2,600 soldiers, civilians and rebels have been killed in the fighting.

Government forces were able to oust Tamil forces from many of their positions in the east, but have faced stiff resistance from the rebels in their northern strongholds.

The Tigers claim the minority Tamils, who are mostly Hindus, need a separate state because of years of alleged discrimination by the majority Sinhalese, who are Buddhist and control the central government.

WARSAW, POLAND (SEPT. 20) UPI - Parliament held Thursday a stormy debate on a draft law dealing with the election of a new president, a day after President Wojciech Jaruzelski said he would step down in November to prevent ''unnecesary'' social tensions.

The debate on the amendment turned into a stormy discussion peppered with attacks on the economic policies of Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, whose Solidarity-led ruling coalition lost its parliamentary majority Wednesday after the Peasant Party broke ranks.

Mikolai Kozakiewicz, chairman of the Sejm, the lower house of Parliament, read Jaruzelski's letter in which he said he would step down to prevent unnecessary social emotions - a reference to the mounting pressure on him to resign.

Jaruzelski offered to resign two months after the Sejm approves an amendment to the constitution which would set rules of the election of a new president.

The general was elected to a five-year term 13 months ago as a result of an agreement between Solidarity and communist authorities which allowed the union to participate in parliamentary elections. Solidarity won the parliamentary election and installed its government.

The Sejm is expected to approve the amendment Friday and Jaruzelski would submit his resignation after Nov. 20.

Solidarity founder Lech Walesa, an advocate of presidential election this fall announced Monday he would run for president.

Mazowiecki favors holding both presidential and parliamentary elections early next spring and his plan caused about a rift between him and Walesa.

A government source said Mazowiecki will take a decision soon to run for president as an opponent of Walesa.

(SEPT. 20) UPI - The Olympic Council of Asia has booted Iraq from the Asian Games set to begin in Beijing in two days. BEAVERTON, OR (SEPT. 20) UPI - Tektronix Inc., Oregon's largest private employer, has decided to seek a buyer for its semiconductor test systems division, part of a recent move to shed unprofitable operations.

Marketing manager Mike Kondrat said Wednesday the electronics company is ''looking at several people'' as potential buyers, including the division's top managers.

He said a deal could be reached in the next 30 to 60 days and might include selling off part of the division to an outside buyer and part to the management.

The test division makes machines for the semiconductor chip industry, subject to frequent business fluctuations that carry through to equipment suppliers.

Tektronix, plagued by generally static sales for five years, recently reported a profitable quarter ended Aug. 18 after two straight losing quarters. It has laid off almost 2,000 employees this year and had a worldwide employment Aug. 18 of 12,722, about half of its peak in 1981.

EASTERN SAUDI ARABIA (SEPT. 20) UPI - Armored foxes arrived in Saudi Arabia Thursday, and American soldiers will use the wily vehicles to sniff and scratch to and determine if Iraq's Saddam Hussein has used his lethal arsenal of toxic gases.

''We know what we are looking for,'' said Sgt. Frank Lyles of Oxford, Miss., patting his Fuchs TPZ1, which is rated as the world's most sophisticated chemical warfare detection vehicle. ''Everything he has got, we can detect.''

The West German-made armored car, dubbed ''the fox'' by its newly trained American crews, was originally designed for protection against Warsaw Pact chemicals and biological agents, but has found a new life with the mission against Saddam.

The massive beetle-like vehicle is fully air-conditioned, can reach speeds of 60 mph and amphibious.

Its four-person crew is totally sealed from the outside atmosphere, which is monitored by a bevy of sensors, and in a battle would be sent to scout forward areas.

If a chemical alarm sounds, specialists in the rear compartment use a robot scoop to obtain a soil sample, which is then sucked up a tube into a sealed box.

A computer tests for 60 known chemical agents, and swiftly determines the type and degree of toxicity, as well as documenting the time and location of contact.

A radio operator then advises other units to avoid the area, or wear full protection gear if forced to pass through the contaminated zone.

''This vehicle can save thousands of lives,'' said Sgt. Richard Smith, a 29-year-old fox commander from Waskom, Texas. ''We have never before had the speed and capability.''

The Pentagon has taken elaborate precautions because Saddam has proved his willingness to use chemical weapons with little apparent compunction, employing lethal gas against Iranian troops and his own people, the minority Kurd community.

Iraq has put considerable resources into building an extensive chemical weapons industry, reportedly with assistance from European businessmen.

It has shown no sign of adherring to the 1925 Geneva Protocol on Chemical Weapons, which was formulated after Europe experienced the ghastly effects of gas during World War I and has basically been respected in subsequent conflicts.

Baghdad has a known capability in producing nerve agents, which act against enzymes in body cells, causing a swift death in which the victim's central nervous system in effect short circuits.

But nerve gas is so toxic that it presents battlefield handling problems, particularly if Iraq eschews longer range missiles and dispatches gas by artillery shells, which have a closer range and would be employed to both kill and deny area.

Instead, Iraqi forces may use what they often hurled at Iranian soldiers, ''dusty mustard gas.'' This is a version of the World War I substance that has been thickened to make it more persistent in lingering in the desert, where heat and wind can disperse it.

Mustard gas causes instant blisters if it contacts with skin, particularly where there is body hair. Greater doses can cause blindness.

If inhaled, blisters form inside a victim's lungs, and when these pop, the fluid causes the person to die by what is known as ''dry-land drowning.''

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 20) UPI - The International Monetary Fund is considering asking nations that have profited from rising oil prices to help ''alleviate the burden'' of other countries hurt by the Persian Gulf crisis, the head of the fund said Thursday.

Michel Camdessus, the IMF's managing director, said the global lending organization is seriously concerned about the recent steep increase in oil prices stemming from Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

''We are considering the possiblity of a scheme allowing countries benefiting from the windfall of oil prices to share the sense of solidarity with countries most effected by extending financing which would help us help the most affected countries,'' Camdessus said.

The crisis in the Middle East has sent oil prices soaring to more than $30 a barrel. The resulting ''oil shock,'' although not as great as those of the 1970s, has heated inflation and slowed economic output in much of the oil-dependent industrialized and developing world.

On Wednesday, the IMF said rising oil prices are likely to slow economic growth of the industrialized world while helping a number of oil-exporting developing nations.

''Those that have this windfall could help alleviate the burden of others,'' Camdessus said.

Among those hardest hit by the latest oil shock are the Philippines, India, Brazil, Jamaica, the Dominican Republic, Morocco and Ivory Coast.

Fuel-exporting debtor developing nations include Algeria, Ecuador, Indonesia, Mexico, Nigeria and Venezuela.

''We hope those who find themselves in a good position would help, but we leave the decision up to the governments,'' Camdessus said, stessing that the program, if approved by the IMF at its annual meeting next week, would be voluntary.

A top fund official said later that specific details of the proposal have yet to be hammered out, but added that the plan could include parallel, or bilateral, lending between individual countries or contributions to a general fund, from which the IMF would distribute low-interest loans.

Camdessus said the IMF is not likely to create any new financing vehicles to assist countries hurt by the oil price increase.

''Our strategy is to try to respond to these needs without making a major new instrument,'' he said in a briefing for reporters. ''We will try to use our instruments and resources with appropriate flexibility.''

Camdessus also said the IMF is not overly worried about the deteriorating financial positions of several of the world's large commercial banks.

''I don't see a systemic risk to financial structures,'' he said, adding that over the past 10 years the ratio of profitability at key money center banks has ''improved significantly.''

''It's part of life to have banking institutions go through periods of frustration,'' he said.

On another topic, Camdessus urged commercial bankers and the government of Brazil to begin serious negotiations to resolve the Latin American nation's mounting unpaid debt.

Brazilian officials have reportedly told the IMF it will unfreeze its debt to foreign governments if it wins agreement on a proposed $2 billion standby IMF loan. The officials have made no mention of debt owed to commercial banks.

Camdessus said a proposal for the standby agreement will be submitted to the IMF Executive Board, but added that he ''must make sure negotiations with commercial banks are firmly lodged.''

''Brazilian authorities gave me assurances of establishing good working relationships with the banking community,'' he said.

(SEPT. 20) UPI - The eruption of the Gulf crisis has prompted European governments from all sides of the political spectrum to raise gasoline prices, impose austerity measures, lower growth projections and reconsider nuclear energy.

The events in the gulf also are exerting heavy pressure on the free- market reforms of the new democracies in Eastern European countries, which are being forced to divert scarce hard currency earnings to pay for higher-priced petroleum to replace oil shipments embargoed from Iraq and Kuwait.

Yet despite almost universal certainty among experts that the crisis unleashed by Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait will lead to slower growth, higher unemployment and rising inflation, many European leaders and economic analysts are optimistic that the effects of a third oil shock can be contained with limited damage.

They point out that since the last oil price jolt in 1979-1980 the world's industrialized countries have reduced their reliance on oil, sharply increased their petroleum reserves and learned that higher energy prices must be counterbalanced with strong and immediate action to contain inflation.

Unlike the United States, which appears headed for a recession because of the oil price rise, Western Europe's economic growth next year is expected to drop only about half a percentage point because of the crisis.

''There is no reason to worry, to panic, or to speculate,'' French Prime Minister Michel Rocard said. ''Within two months we should return to a more or less satisfactory level of oil production and we hope the price will stabilize around $25 or $26 a barrel.''

World oil prices have jumped more than 50 percent to as much as $33 a barrel since the Iraqi strike into Kuwait.

Echoing Rocard, the Union Bank of Switzerland predicted in its latest study oil should stabilize at between $24 and $26 a barrel and that such an increase would not have a great effect on the Western economies.

The study by Switzerland's largest bank said GNP growth within the 24 leading industrialized countries should be 2.8 percent this year compared with its previous forecast of 3 percent and 2.3 percent in 1991 instead of 2.7 percent.

The International Monetary Fund, in its world economic outlook, projected growth would slow to about 2 percent this year from 3 percent in 1989.

Despite the official optimism, governments, industries and consumers are feeling the pinch from higher oil prices. In Sofia, Bulgaria, for example, consumers frequently have had to wait in line for as long as 21 hours to buy fuel.

Britain could well be the hardest hit Western European country, with analysts saying the gulf crisis may prove to be the final straw for an economy already teetering on the brink of recession.

Britain's annual inflation rate reached 10.6 percent at the end of August, the first time price increases reached the double-digit mark since 1982. Economic growth, which was 1.7 percent in the 12 months ending March 31, is expected to decline to 1 percent in the current fiscal year.

Although Britain, a net oil exporter, relies on petroleum for only about 30 percent of its domestic energy needs, it is not exempt from the inflationary and recessionary effects of an oil shock.

''But what's more worrying is the fact that the oil price rises hit the economy at a time when it was already heading for a slowdown,'' said Derek Scott, an economist at Barclays de Zoete Wedd in London.

The British already are feeling the effects, with pump prices up between 3 percent and 5 percent since Iraq invaded Kuwait. Some industry analysts are predicting retail gasoline prices will rise 30 percent before stabilizing.

Car sales are expected to drop 10 percent to 2 million units this year from 1989 levels. Thousands of automobile workers have been laid off at Fiat and Peugeot plants in Britain, although industry officials say the cutbacks are not related to the Gulf crisis.

Across the English Channel in France, the Socialist government was among the first to act to regulate gasoline prices, imposing a ceiling based on the price of a barrel of crude oil on world markets. The result is a $4.28 per gallon price at the pump compared to $3.76 before the United Nations imposed an embargo on Iraqi and Kuwaiti petroleum.

The French statistical office Insee estimated that as a result of the crisis inflation will reach 3.6 percent this year rather then the 3.1 percent rate it previously had projected. The country's large external commerce deficit is expected to increase by an additional $1.9 billion to $9.5 billion.

In addition, French Finance Minister Pierre Beregovoy's prediction that the economy would grow by 3 percent this year appears doubtful, according to economic experts.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 20) UPI - A reluctant President Bush is under growing pressure from lawmakers to tap the nation's Strategic Petroleum Reserve now to calm oil markets before the Persian Gulf crisis leads to an actual energy shortage.

Bush, who signed legislation Saturday giving him wider latitude to order emergency oil supplies drawn from the 600 million-barrel reserve, said this week he had no immediate plans to take such action.

The Energy Department is keeping close tabs on the nation's oil supplies, but an administration official said, ''There is a reluctance to use (the reserve) until it is proven absolutely necessary.''

Recent oil price spikes, accompanied by rising retail gasoline prices, have been attributed more to market speculation than to actual shortages since Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

Although the loss of Iraqi and Kuwait oil due to United Nations trade sanctions enforced largely through U.S. military power has crimped world production, overall oil inventories are expected to remain at or above normal levels through this month, Energy Department officials have said.

Absent a demonstrable shortage in petroleum stocks, the administration is hesitant to draw on the strategic reserve, a move that would likely dampen prices by adding to supplies.

Several analysts, however, have suggested a modest release of oil from the reserve now would calm oil markets and prevent catastrophic price increases that could be set off in the event of a severe supply disruption.

Gasoline prices have risen sharply since the invasion - more than 20 cents a gallon at the pump in many areas - and airlines have boosted ticket charges, citing increased fuel costs. Home heating oil prices also have pushed up, just as the winter heating season arrives.

Energy Secretary James Watkins said last week the possibility of a coordinated ''draw-down'' of strategic reserves by the United States and other industrialized nations, such as Germany and Japan, will be discussed at the next meeting of the International Energy Agency in Paris on Sept. 28.

However, Rep. Philip Sharp, D-Ind., chairman of the House subcommittee on energy and power, sent a letter Tuesday to Watkins urging the administration to begin selling oil from the U.S. reserve immediately.

''This effort should not wait for the IEA meeting,'' Sharp wrote, citing increases in inflation and growing fears of a recession sspurred by escalating oil prices.

''It is for just such circumstances that the Strategic Petroleum Reserve was created, and the recent amendments (giving the president broader discretion to draw on the reserve) reflect the widespread view in Congress that the president should utilize this authority,'' Sharp wrote.

He recommended the administration begin by selling up to 5 million barrels of oil from the reserve under ''test draw-down'' powers authorized by Congress.

Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., noted in a Senate speech Tuesday, ''We've spent $15 billion to store nearly 600 million barrels in the reserve, and I believe it's time to start using it to stabilize gas prices and get our economy back on track.''

Lieberman suggested starting with the 50,000 barrels a day that now go into the reserve, working up to withdrawals of 150,000 barrels a day.

Bush said Tuesday before heading off on a campaign trip to the West that he had no plans to make a decision on use of the reserve this week.

A day earlier, he told reporters, ''I think that when you have a real shortage of a product or you see an external event that is going to guarantee that there be shortage, then would be the time when you most certainly should use the SPR. It is my judgment that there isn't such a shortage at this time.''

WARSAW (SEPT. 20) UPI - A resident from the northern city of Slupsk went to the forest Thursday to pick mushrooms but instead found a bomb lost by a Soviet jet, the official news agency PAP reported.

The agency said Jan Sawicki heard the Soviet MIG-19 taking off from the airfield and minutes later a heavy object fell to the ground a few yards away from the place where he was looking for mushrooms.

''The metal object turned out to be a bomb lost by the plane,'' the agency said. ''Fortunately it did not explode.''

There are about 55,000 Soviet troops stationing in Poland in the northern and southwestern part of the country.

Poland's independent government recently demanded that the troops be withdrawn not later than 1992.

(SEPT. 20) UPI - The Pentagon says an American soldier deployed in Saudi Arabia in Operation Desert Shield was killed today when a jeep-like vehicle rolled over him during a training mission. Two other soldiers were hurt... one with a head injury, the other with a leg injury. Both are reported in stable condition. Identification of the three soldiers is being withheld. .

Also today, Iraq's Information Minister warned the United States against attacking Iraq. The official was quoted on Baghdad Radio as saying that if multi-national forces in the Persian Gulf launch an attack, Iraq will destroy all oil fields in the Gulf. .

In Washington, the Bush administration is seeking permission from Congress on an arms sale package to Saudi Arabia to meet additional needs in the Persian Gulf crisis. A White House aide says the Saudi proposal won't be submitted to Congress yet because the administration needs a better idea of what will be acceptable. The aide says the cost of the arms package would be ''significant.''

Farmers were required to idle five percent of their wheat land this year to qualify for farm program benefits such as crop loans and subsidy payments. But today the Agriculture Department says it plans to require a 15 percent land set-aside for the 1991 wheat crop. Wheat Belt lawmakers pressed for the past two weeks for the announcement, partly because farmers have begun seeding the winter crop and partly to stabilize falling market prices.

Absent a demonstrable shortage in petroleum stocks, the administration is hesitant to draw on the strategic reserve, a move that would likely dampen prices by adding to supplies.

Several analysts, however, have suggested a modest release of oil from the reserve now would calm oil markets and prevent catastrophic price increases that could be set off in the event of a severe supply disruption.

Gasoline prices have risen sharply since the invasion - more than 20 cents a gallon at the pump in many areas - and airlines have boosted ticket charges, citing increased fuel costs. Home heating oil prices also have pushed up, just as the winter heating season arrives.

Energy Secretary James Watkins said last week the possibility of a coordinated ''draw-down'' of strategic reserves by the United States and other industrialized nations, such as Germany and Japan, will be discussed at the next meeting of the International Energy Agency in Paris Sept. 28.

However, Rep. Philip Sharp, D-Ind., chairman of the House subcommittee on energy and power, sent a letter Tuesday to Watkins urging the administration to begin selling oil from the U.S. reserve immediately.

''This effort should not wait for the IEA meeting,'' Sharp wrote, citing increases in inflation and growing fears of a recession sspurred by escalating oil prices.

''It is for just such circumstances that the Strategic Petroleum Reserve was created, and the recent amendments (giving the president broader discretion to draw on the reserve) reflect the widespread view in Congress that the president should utilize this authority,'' Sharp wrote.

He recommended the administration begin by selling up to 5 million barrels of oil from the reserve under ''test draw-down'' powers authorized by Congress.

Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., noted in a Senate speech Tuesday, ''We've spent $15 billion to store nearly 600 million barrels in the reserve, and I believe it's time to start using it to stabilize gas prices and get our economy back on track.''

Lieberman suggested starting with the 50,000 barrels a day that now go into the reserve, working up to withdrawals of 150,000 barrels daily.

Bush said Tuesday before heading off on a campaign trip to the West that he had no plans to make a decision on use of the reserve this week.

A day earlier, he told reporters, ''I think that when you have a real shortage of a product or you see an external event that is going to guarantee that there be shortage, then would be the time when you most certainly should use the SPR. It is my judgment that there isn't such a shortage at this time.''

However, Bush acknowledged, ''I'm listening to those in the administration and on the Hill that make the case'' that a small draw- down from the reserve would ease speculation on oil markets. ''That has some appeal,'' said the president, who built his personal fortune in the Texas oil industry.

Meanwhile, the Energy Department is ''in a state of readiness'' to dip into the government-stored reserve should Bush order it, said Howard Borgstrom, head of the Office of Planning and Financial Management Policy for Petroleum Reserves.

TOULON, FRANCE (SEPT. 20) UPI - Two ships carrying French military vehicles to Saudi Arabia left the southern port of Toulon Thursday, but a third ship carrying the first of 4,000 French troops being deployed was delayed when sailors demanded hazardous duty bonuses.

President Francois Mitterrand announced Saturday the deployment of 4, 000 troops backed by tanks and aircraft as part of France's response to Iraqi troops storming the French Ambassador's residence in Kuwait last week.

The troops will participate in a U.S.-led multinational force deployed in the Persian Gulf region in response to Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

The Atlas and the Cap-Ferrat - roll-on, roll-off civilian cargo ships requisitioned by the government - set sail Thursday at noon with more than 150 army support vehicles aboard, defense ministry officials said.

Also scheduled to leave Thursday was the car ferry Corse, which the government rented as part of the French armada to ferry men and equipment to the Saudi Red Sea port of Yabu, where France has established an advance base for its contingent.

The departure of the Corse with 500 soldiers on board was delayed, however, by a strike and demonstration at its home port of Bastia, Corsica, by sailors demanding the crew's company life insurance be doubled and that they receive a risk premium of $235 a day during the eight-day sea voyage.

No special military escort was provided for the flotilla, but France has 14 warships in the Persian Gulf region, many of them near Yanbu.

Five other cargo and passenger ships were expected to leave for Saudi Arabia by Friday with some 3,500 other men and 800 vehicles aboard.

France already has a small contingent of troops in the United Arab Emirates and about 100 other men with helicopters at Yanbu, who were deployed before Mitterrand's Saturday announcement.

In another development, French companies reportedly under suspicion of having violated a U.N. embargo against Iraq by supplying military equipment to Baghdad denied the allegations carried by the news magazine Le Nouvel Observateur Thursday.

Atochem, part of the state-run Elf Aquitaine group, denied having provided a patented product that may be used for making Tabun gas, used in chemical warfare, to Iraq via Nigeria.

An Atochem spokesman said it had sold to the West German company WET a license for producing the product, Phosphorus Trichloride or PCL3, in Nigeria.

But Atochem said the contract strictly forbade the military use of the product transfer of technology to other companies, or divulging information about the product - normally used to make pesticides and defoliants - to third parties.

Another company called into question by Le Nouvel Observateur, De Dietrich, said it had only supplied ''standard'' material to Iraq.

DHAHRAN, SAUDI ARABIA (SEPT. 20) UPI - Saudi Arabia has canceled special border privileges for more than 1 million Yemenis living in the kingdom in a move apparently aimed at censuring Yemen for its pro-Iraqi stance, officials said Thursday.

An Interior Ministry statement released Wednesday did not directly name Yemen or its citizens, but an official said Thursday its wording was such that they were the only nationality affected.

''The measures were taken because the considerations and circumstances under which the kingdom granted these privileges have changed, and because the general interest requires that these privileges be reconsidered,'' the statement said.

Under the new rules, Yemenis in Saudi Arabia - who are mostly small merchants and very active in the kingdom's gold markets - must have a sponsor and an entry visa, ending what had effectively been an open border into Saudi Arabi, Yemen's wealthy northern neighbor.

''It is directed towards Yemenis without saying so,'' one official said of the statement. ''The Yemenis were the only ones who could come in without visa requirements ... and the government is taking out all the special status that was there.''

Officials said they believed Riyadh was showing disapproval over the Sanaa government's support for Iraq.

Yemen, which is comprised of newly united southern and northern sections, has a longstanding claim on territory inside Saudi Arabia.

It has abstained in some votes in the U.N. Security Council on creating an economic embargo against Baghdad and has given sanctuary to some Iraqi vessels being tracked by warships enforcing the blockade.

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (SEPT. 20) UPI - The NCAA Thursday leveled a two-year probation on the University of Florida's football and basketball programs, barring the school from appearing in a 1990 bowl game and ordering the return of money earned in the 1988 NCAA basketball tournament.

Four months after charging the university with 10 rules violations, the governing body for intercollegiate athletics issued sanctions against Florida's major athletic programs in a decision hand-delivered to UF President John Lombardi. Because of sanctions ordered against the football program in 1984, the NCAA had the authority to impose the ''death penalty,'' and shut down both the football and basketball programs.

The Gator basketball program, now under the guidance of new coach Lon Kruger, was stripped of two scholarships next season and one in 1992-93. The NCAA Committee on Infractions ordered the records of an unidentified player and the team's performance in the '88 NCAA Tournament deleted due to the player's ineligible status.

Published reports have identified the ineligible player as Vernon Maxwell, a third-year guard with the NBA's Houston Rockets and Florida's career scoring leader with 2,450 points.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 20) UPI - Yields for 52-week T-bills fell to 7.25 percent at Thursday's monthly auction, the lowest since 7.21 percent Jan. 11, the Treasury Department said.

The government said it sold about $10.52 billion worth of the bills, and the average investment rate was 7.78 percent at a price of $9,266.90 per $10,000 face value.

At the last auction Aug. 23, the bills yielded 7.40 percent.

DETROIT (SEPT. 20) UPI - A top Chrysler Corp. executive says the automaker may change its mind about installing a driver-side air bag in its minivan models next year if the public is led to believe it is an inadequate or inferior system.

Chrysler Motors President Robert A. Lutz, during a preview of the carmaker's 1991 models at its Highland Park, Mich., headquarters Wednesday, said the air bag planned for its 1991 minivans does not meet the letter of the law under federal standards, which now only apply to cars, not light trucks or minivans.

Because of that, Chrysler is calling it an ''air restraint system'' instead of an air bag.

''Our system does not meet the letter of Federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standard 208,'' Lutz said, because any minivan with an air bag would not have the padded knee bolsters on the lower dashboard, now required on all cars equipped with the balloon-like safety devices.

''An air bag without knee bolsters is the quickest way'' the company can get the safety device to market, Lutz explained, adding that Chrysler expects to beat any federally mandated truck safety standards requiring manufacturers to install passive restraints like air bags or automatic safety belts.

But Lutz said that if the media or public perceive the minivan's air restraint system to be inferior to other air bag systems in cars, ''we would then be sorely tried not to even do it.''

When asked why Chrysler could not design an air bag system with knee bolsters, Lutz blamed the long time needed to redesign an instrument panel - usually about three years - and the fact that light truck safety standards were not a major issue among engineers or planners at Chrysler or any automaker.

Lutz also said Chrysler will have passenger-side air bags on all its North American-made cars within two or three years' time, although no final decision has been made on how many cars will carry them as standard equipment.

Chrysler now has driver-side air bags on all its domestically built cars.

''Three years ago, there were hardly even air bags on cars,'' a spokesman for Chrysler's engineering operations said. ''We took a fairly big risk by putting them on our cars in such big numbers, but now we know it turned out to be the right thing to do.''

MIAMI (SEPT. 20) UPI - An endangered 4,500-pound rhinoceros with a severely infected foot has been fitted for a protective rubber bootie custom made by Pirelli Armstrong Tire Corp., which uses a rhino as its mascot, zookeepers said Thursday.

The 21-year-old male rhino, named Mohan, is the star of Miami Metrozoo's Indian rhino breeding program. He suffers from a foot infection that has grown steadily worse, said assistant curator Ron Magill.

''We can effectively treat the toe but he immediately steps in his own feces, steps in the dirt and mud, and totally nullifies anything we've done to the foot,'' Magill said.

''We've tried a wide variety of bandages and coverings but nothing was strong enough to withstand his tremendous weight.''

While searching for a solution, Magill was inspired by an advertisement for Pirelli Armstrong, which uses a rhino as its mascot and has helped support rhino preservation projects in the past.

''I wondered if they'd like to help this individual rhino,'' he said.

The company, headquartered in New Haven, Conn., agreed to work up a super-strong rubber rhino bootie and turned the project over to engineers in its Little Rock, Ark., plant.

Magill faxed a diagram and the animal's measurements. After experimenting with several prototypes, the company's engineers constructed a 12-pound rubber bootie, reinforced with kevlar, that laces up the back with nylon rope.

It was shipped to Miami and zookeepers plan to slip it on the animal Friday.

''The challenge here is whether we'll get the rhino to cooperate,'' Magill said. ''We're not going to anesthetize this animal. That's extremely dangerous.''

Zookeepers plan to pack the boot with medicine-soaked guaze, then slip it on and lace it in place while the rhino is distracted with food.

''We're hoping this animal doesn't panic. He's going to be initially a little bit perturbed by this thing,'' Magill said. ''He's actually very amiable but this is a very large animal. As big and calm as he looks, he can move quickly and jump and kick. If he freaks, people can get injured. We have to be very cautious.''

They have been experimenting with 10-pound weights to get the animal used to carrying the extra weight on his foot, Magill said.

''He seemd to get over it. Hopefully, what'll happen is he'll slowly become accustomed to the boot,'' he said.

Curators fear that unless the foot heals, the infection could spread, causing lameness or even killing the rhino.

He is one of 50 Indian rhinos living in zoos worldwide, including 29 in the United States. There are only an estimated 2,700 remaining in the wild.

OTTAWA (SEPT. 20) UPI - Mohawk leaders said Thursday they are counting on federal politicians returning to work next week to bring a ''sense of sanity'' to the 10-week standoff between armed soldiers and Mohawks over a land dispute.

Mohawk negotiator Bob Antone said that the 30 militant Mohawks, women and children staging a last stand in a drug treatment center on the Kanesatake reservation south of Montreal would not surrender, even though talks between Indians and the army over a peaceful resolution of the dispute broke off Wednesday.

''We still hope there will be a sense of sanity on the politicians' side,'' said Antone, adding that the Mohawks would try to ''hang on'' until Monday, when Parliament returns from a three-month break.

Late Tuesday, military commanders told native leaders there was nothing left to discuss except surrender. Brig. Gen. Armand Roy, in a message delivered to natives at Kanesatake, said future discussions would be limited ''to our military offer for disengagement.''

''There will be no discussion of Oka land claims by anyone until the (Mohawks) have disengaged and placed themselves in military custody,'' Roy said.

Police, soldiers and Mohawks at two Quebec reservations have been involved in a land dispute that began July 11 when Quebec officers stormed a barricade erected by natives around a proposed golf course they claimed was an ancient burial ground. One officer was killed in the raid at the Kanesatake reserve, south of Montreal.

A day later, Mohawks at Kahnawake erected barricades across highways and a bridge connecting the town of Chateauguay to Montreal. In August, the Quebec government ordered Canadian troops to replace the provincial police force at the barricades. Within days, Kahnawake Mohawks and soldiers agreed to jointly dismantle barricades around the one reserve.

Antone, one of the chiefs of the Six Nations Iroquois Confederacy who has been trying to mediate a settlement at Kanesatake, said the Mohawks have made several reasonable proposals for disengagement, but none of them were acceptable to the army or the Quebec government.

In the latest proposal made last week, the Mohawks offered to surrender their weapons and submit to military custody if the natives could be represented on a joint commission to investigate possible criminal proceedings as well as negotiate long-term issues linked to land claims and recognition of native sovereignty.

But Antone said Mohawks would not surrender unless it was clear the Quebec and federal governments would fulfill their promise to negotiate those issues after the natives surrendered.

Antone said the feeling of isolation in the native encampment ''is closing in all the time'' and spiritual leaders were attempting to deal with those who were close to the breaking point.

Despite their reluctance to surrender, Antone said the natives have already won the war, especially in terms of public support for their cause. ''But in the short term we will probably lose the battle,'' he added.

Antone said there would be loss of life if the army decided to storm the drug treatment center and take natives into custody.

He also warned of similar standoffs across the country if the government fails to negotiate outstanding issues.

BONN, WEST GERMANY (SEPT. 20) UPI - The two German parliaments Thursday ratified - as anticipated - a crucial bilateral treaty which settles the legal financial and technical details of Oct. 3 German unification.

Both houses passed the unification treaty with the required two- thirds majority.

The action came shortly after the West German government assured its neighbors and allies that a unified Germany will never repeat the atrocities of Nazism and that unification will be ''an investment'' in a European future.

Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher made the remarks in a statement to Parliament at the beginning of the session to debate the bilateral unification treaty signed by the two German governments on Aug. 31.

In West Germany's 519-member Bundestag, 442 parliamentarians voted in favor of the treaty, 47 against and three abstained.

Those who voted against included members of the left-leaning, environmentalist Greens party, as well as arch-conservative politicians opposed to a clause in the treaty which formally recognizes the loss of former German territories ceded to Poland after Germany lost World War II.

Deputies in East Berlin burst into applause when the document was accepted, while parliamentarians in Bonn sang the national anthem upon ratification - a rare occurrence in the West German Parliament.

In the 400-seat Volkskammer, the East German parliament, 299 deputies voted for the treaty. Another 80, most of them Communists, opposed it and one representative abstained.

Shortly before the vote in East Berlin, parliamentary President Sabine Bergmann-Pohl said that ''the process of German unification is only at the beginning.''

''It will need much time, great intuition and courage for possibly unpopular decisions to fill old ditches and to avoid creating new ones,'' she said.

In his address to the Bundestag, Genscher said, ''On Oct. 3, the German people will again live in a democratic state - for the first time after 57 years. Our contribution for one Europe is also an investment in our European future.''

He said Germany had lost its liberty on Jan. 30, 1933, the day Adolf Hitler became chancellor of Germany, and lapsed into a period of fascism and war before the country was devided after World War II.

''Many Germans lost their lives, their health, all their belongings and their homeland. And all of us lost the respect and friendship of the other peoples '' Genscher said.

In a reference to the 6 million Jews killed in Nazi death camps, Genscher said ''we are uniting in the determination that this may never happen again...''

He reiterated the German borders are final and will not be changed, a reference to Polish fears a united Germany will want back former German territories which became part of Poland after World War II.

''The world looks upon Germany and the world should know: We know our responsibility and we will fulfill it,'' he added.

The bilateral unification treaty sets down the legal and financial aspects of the merger, which entails the absorbtion of East Germany in West Germany's Federal Republic - ending the 41-year existance of the German Democratic Republic, East Germany.

The treaty was signed after almost two months of tough negotiations between the two German governments and within each of the two parliaments.

Several compromises had to be reached to prevent a collapse of the talks. Abortion laws proved to be one of the toughest issues, but negotiators eventually agreed on interim legislation, under which abortion will remain legal in East Germany and illegal in West Germany.

A last-minute snag cropped up this week when East German parliamentarians demanded they be given to right to look into the 6 million secret files of the former East German State Security police, know as Stasi.

The two governments agreed Tuesday to an additional clause in the unification treaty which allows individuals to see the data the Stasi compiled about them.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 20) UPI - The Trump Shuttle, severely hit by soaring fuel prices, is no longer profitable and no longer for sale, the Trump Organization said Thursday.

''The Trump Shuttle is doing well in a very bad market, but it is not turning a profit because of soaring oil prices and we are no longer looking for a buyer because the market is not existant,'' said Steven Bollenbach, chief financial officer of the Trump Organization.

''What airline would want to buy the Shuttle in the current situation when nobody knows where the oil prices are going to go to?'' he added.

Bollenbach said the Trump Shuttle was still attracting more than 50 percent of the Northeast corridor traffic between Boston, New York and Washington, due to what he described as ''its better service,'' in a direct reference to its sole competitor, the Pan Am Shuttle.

''The Trump Shuttle is not turning a profit because of the fuel prices and because of the recession affecting the Northeast which is affecting traffic,'' Bollenbach said.

Jet fuel prices have surged about 40 percent since the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, and passenger traffic in the Northeast dropped by about 16 percent during the same period, according to airline industry statistics.

Both shuttles have been on the market for most of the year but they have failed to attract a buyer.

Bollenbach confirmed that financially-troubled developer Donald Trump, who bought the shuttle only a year ago, had not been able to make this week a $1.1 million payment in interests on a $245 million loan to finance the Shuttle acquisiton.

''The loan is not in default, since we are now covered by the grace period,'' Bollenbach said.

According to banking regulations, borrowers who fail to meet payments on a loan in time benefit from a grace period, usually 10 days, before a default technically occurs, which could lead to Trump losing control over the shuttle.

''Donald Trump met yesterday with Citibank executives to discuss restructuring the loan and we are very hopeful an agreement can be reached, it went very well,'' Bollenbach said. ''Another meeting is to take place next week with other banks in the lending group led by Citibank, we are hopeful.''

Trump bought the shuttle from Eastern Airlines last year for $380 million in a virtually no-cash acquisition. Many airline industry analysts at the time said Trump had paid too much for the shuttle.

Trump also owes another $135 million for the airline, in a loan part of a $1.4 billion debt which the developer renegotiated three months ago with the banks when his casino empire threatened to collapse.

Citibank, a division of Citicorp and the largest bank in the United States, has long been Trump's main lender.

Citibank, however, does not have this time a high level of exposure in the $245 million shuttle loan, and other, larger lenders might be less eager to give the high-stake developer more time and money.

Citibank is owed only $8.3 million, while two Japanese banks, Fuji Bank and Mitsubishi Trust, are the key lenders, with loans of $32.4 million and $23.7 million respectively.

While Bollenbach expressed confidence in Trump's ability to once again plead with the banks, he expressed little confidence in the future profitability of the shuttle for as long as oil prices remain volatile, an unpredictable factor expected to be on the lenders' mind when they meet next week.

The average profitability rate in the U.S. airline industry is a low 4 percent a margin vulnerable to any surge in costs.

Pan Am Corp. said Wednesday it would have to lay off 2,500 employees or 8.5 percent of its work force by next month, because its main carrier, Pan American World Airways Inc. was severely hit by higher fuel costs and declining passenger traffic.

Pan Am, which recently said its shuttle was turning a small profit, is still hoping to find a buyer for the commuter airline. The Pan Am Shuttle's estimated pricetag, before the Iraqi crisis, was in the $300- million range, according to airline analysts.

CASTEL GANDOLFO, ITALY (SEPT. 20) UPI - Former President Ronald Reagan, on the second day of a visit to Rome, had a private audience with Pope John Paul II Thursday at the papal summer palace, the Vatican announced.

Reagan was accompanied to the 30-minute meeting in the pope's library by his wife, Nancy, and several aides. At the end of the audience, the pope said goodbye to Reagan with the words, ''God bless America,'' the Vatican said.

Vatican spokesmen gave no further details, but Vatican sources said Reagan probably told the pope of his favorable impressions of changes in the Soviet Union, which he visited for five days before coming to Rome Wednesday on the latest stage of his private tour of Europe.

During talks followed by a lunch with Italian President Francesco Cossiga and Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti at the presidential Quirinal Palace Wednesday, Reagan said he was particularly impressed with the ''greater freedom'' in Soviet society and the commitment of the Soviet leadership in its advance toward a market economy.

It was the fifth time Reagan has met Pope John Paul II, but the first time since his two-term presidency expired in 1989.

The previous meetings took place in June 1982 in the Vatican, in May 1984 in Fairbanks, Alaska, where he greeted the pope during a fueling stopover on a papal visit to Asia, in June 1987 in the Vatican, and in September 1987 in Miami, during the pope's second tour of the United States.

The former president's current visit to Rome has drawn little attention from the Italian media, with most newspapers restricting coverage to a photograph of Reagan and his wife meeting dignitaries, accompanied by a brief caption.

(SEPT. 20) UPI - Iraqi President Saddam Hussein says his country is prepared to withstand U-N economic sanctions for several years. In a published interview with a former Turkish prime minister, a former news reporter, Hussein adds- ''We believe we are in a position to harm the United States, in case of war.'' .

Saddam Hussein says he wants to go before the American people to express his view of the Persian Gulf crisis. The Iraqi president announced through aides today that he has videotaped a response to a speech by President Bush that was aired on Iraqi television last weekend.

The Olympic Council of Asia today voted to bar Iraq from the Asian Games and to suspend Iraq from the council itself. The vote comes amid threats of an Arab boycott if Iraq is allowed to participate. The council also is angry about the death of its president, a member of the Kuwaiti royal family, who was killed during Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Sources at Cape Canaveral say NASA is likely to delay a fifth launch attempt of the shuttle Columbia until late November. The space agency is preparing for the October 5th launch of the shuttle Discovery on a high- priority mission to deploy the Ulysses solar probe into space.

The government says it will spend about two-point-six-BILLION dollars in federal disaster aid to help victims of Hurricane Hugo. The hurricane caused widespread destruction when it stormed across the Carolinas and the Caribbean last year. About 725-Million dollars will go for family grants and housing assistance.

(SEPT. 20) UPI - Congressional investigators say businesses routinely skirt money- laundering laws that require cash transactions involving more than 10-thousand dollars to be reported to the Internal Revenue Service. They say the businesses will connive with customers who want to evade taxes in order to make big cash sales.

It appears as if drug cartels in Colombia are trying to pressure recently elected President Cesar Gaviria into negotiations. Police say the recent kidnapping of three prominent Colombians may be part of a cartel plan to get Gaviria to hold talks with the drug lords. The kidnappings are the first crisis of his two- month-old government.

A Boston man who was acquitted in the rape and murder of his infant daughter six years ago was sentenced today to 10 years in prison for smuggling marijuana. Ralph Richard was convicted in June of being part of an interstate drug ring that smuggled as much as 10-thousand pounds of marijuana at a time.

Senior leaders of the African National Congress and the rival Zulu Inkatha movement have held their first high-level meeting in more than a decade. LONDON (SEPT. 20) UPI - Trading in shares of the British conglomerate Polly Peck International PLC was suspended when the company requested a halt to dealings after its shares tumbled by $2.55 to $2.04 a share on the London International Stock Exchange in a matter of hours, a company spokesman announced Thursday.

The moves came at a time of increasing speculation over dealings in the company's shares. Numerous rumors regarding Polly Peck circulated through the London market, but none was substantiated.

The spectacular fall in price wiped $1.09 billion off the firm's market value - as well as $310.2 million from the personal wealth of the chairman and founder, Asil Nadir.

Although an announcement on the trading suspension was promised by Polly Peck officials, a company spokeswoman later said no statement would be made Thursday.

Problems started in the company last month, when Nadir said he wanted to take Polly Peck out of the open market and back into family ownership.

His sudden turnabout prompted the stock exchange to send a critical report on his actions to the Serious Fraud Office and the Department of Trade and Industry for failing to follow proper procedures.

Analysts said this lead to speculation over dealings in Polly Peck shares.

Earlier in the day, detectives from the Serious Fraud Office executed a search warrant on the premises of a company that apparently has connections with the Nadir family.

Polly Peck started as an East London rag trade company and, under Nadir's stewardship, rose to the status of an international conglomerate. The company owns Del Monte foods and a large electronics division.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 20) UPI - Patients who suffer from a mood disorder that causes a severe case of the ''winter blues'' appear to react abnormally to light, British researchers reported Thursday.

The findings offer new evidence patients with Seasonal Affective Disorder, or SAD, have a biological abnormality that affects how they respond to seasonal changes and are not simply suffering from psychological problems.

''It's very gratifying to realize that what they have been suffering from all these years has solid biological underpinning,'' said Dr. Norman Rosenthal of the National Institute of Mental Health in Bethesda, Md. ''This kind of thing should settle any kind of lingering skepticism.''

Researchers are uncertain how the sensitivity is related to SAD but the findings should help scientists get a better understanding of the disorder.

''It's another step towards the cause and better treatment. But a comprehensive understanding is still a long way off,'' Rosenthal said.

The condition, first described in 1984, causes victims to experience often debilitating symptoms of depression in the fall and winter. The symptoms usually disappear in the spring and summer.

Up to 6 percent of the adult U.S. population may suffer from SAD and ''more than twice that number have a milder version which is commonly known as the winter blues,'' Rosenthal said.

Although the cause remains unknown, researchers have found many patients seemed to improve through therapy that includes being exposed to certain types of light at certain times of the day.

Previous research has found other physiological abnormalities in patients suffering from SAD, indicating the condition has a biological basis, Rosenthal said.

In the latest research, published in the British medical journal The Lancet, Dr. C. Thompson of the University of Southampton in England and colleagues compared how 12 SAD patients and 11 normal people reacted to light during different times.

By measuring the levels of a substance, known as melatonin, secreted by the pineal gland in the brain, the researchers found the SAD patients appeared to more sensitive to light in the winter and less sensitive to light in the summer than the normal patients.

''This abnormality related to season and light strengthens the view that SAD is a light-determined disorder rather than simply a psychological response to seasonal changes (an extreme dislike of the winter),'' the researchers wrote.

The researchers speculated the abnormality may stem from a malfunction involving part of the brain known as the suprachiasmatic nucleus, which is involved in regulating the biological rythmns. But more research is need to explore that hypothesis, the researchers said.

SAN SALVADOR, EL SALVADOR (SEPT. 20) UPI - Rebels launched a new series of attacks on military installations and El Salvador's power system, and the army increased patrols in the city and countryside, the armed forces said.

A spokesman for the armed forces said rebels of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, or FMLN, attacked a police academy Wednesday night in La Libertad province, some 20 miles south of the capital. One soldier was wounded.

Rebels also attacked National Police posts in the town of Nueva Concepcion, Chalatenango province, 35 miles north of San Salvador, leaving one rebel and one soldier dead, the spokesman said.

The army has increased ground and air patrols to prevent expected rebel attacks. ''The patrols also include meticulous searches of cars and pedestrians,'' he said.

An electric company spokesman said electricity would be cut in San Salvador by six percent because of FMLN bombing of three primary transmission towers.

Rebels also bombed several smaller electrical transmission posts in the capital Wednesday evening. The city suffered a black-out for most of the night.

Local radio station YSU quoted FMLN commander Ana Guadalupe Martinez as saying ''The war in El Salvador continues,'' after no agreements to end the decade-old civil war were reached at the last round of peace talks that ended this week in Costa Rica.

PHILADELPHIA (SEPT. 20) UPI - The United Bank of Philadelphia received charter approval Thursday from the Pennsylvania Department of Banking, helping to pave the way for a planned winter opening of the black-controlled commercial bank.

The bank, whose organizers' already have raised more than half of the $5 million capital requirement, will be Pennsylvania's first black-controlled commercial bank since the Philadelphia-based Citizens and Southern Bank closed in 1956.

There currently are 36 black-controlled commercial banks nationwide. With the charter approval, the bank's organizers may now begin selling common stock in United.

"We have an aggressive capital development plan, the support of the city's business and financial leaders and a community that's anxious to have its own financial institution," said Emma C. Chappell, who will serve as the bank's chairwoman.

United's organizers include corporate investors such as Meridian Bancorp, First Pennsylvania Bank, Mellon Bank, Provident Mutual Life Insurance Co., Provident Mutual Bank and Continental Bank.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (SEPT. 20) UPI - NASA will delay a fifth launch try for the leaky shuttle Columbia until at least late November, after the Oct. 5 launch of the shuttle Discovery and after a flight by the shuttle Atlantis around Nov. 7, NASA announced Thursday.

Space agency officials also are debating the possibility of delaying another fueling test for Columbia until after Discovery's takeoff because of problems obtaining a fuel line valve to replace one that malfunctioned during Columbia's aborted fueling Monday.

''Both Discovery and Atlantis are operational orbiters with no known or suspected defects,'' said William Lenoir, NASA's associate administrator for space flight. ''Our highest priority is going to be to resume flights with Discovery and Atlantis as scheduled.''

He said a new launch date for Columbia will not be set until after its hydrogen leak is found and fixed.

''Columbia is grounded. The highest priority in working on Columbia is to find the leak, fix same and verify that they're fixed,'' he said. ''Then and only then will we look at returning to flight.''

Columbia was grounded Monday when explosive hydrogen began building up in the shuttle's engine compartment. Later, during a series of tests, a fuel line valve leading to main engine No. 2 refused to close properly on command, a failure that likely would have delayed launch regardless of any leakage.

A replacement valve from the shuttle Endeavour cannot be delivered to the Kennedy Space Center until Sept. 28. Given Discovery's planned Oct. 5 launch target, it is unlikely a fueling test can be conducted with Columbia until after its sistership is off pad 39B.

In any case, Columbia's 10-day astronomy mission is now on the back burner for NASA, with agency managers giving priority to launching Discovery and then Atlantis, which was grounded in July by yet another hydrogen leak. To keep that flight on track, engineers plan to remove a critical hydraulic power unit from Columbia later this week for installation aboard Atlantis.

Because of technical issues involving Atlantis's secret military payload, sources say, Atlantis must be launched from pad 39A. Given NASA's current priorities, here is a preliminary schedule of upcoming launch activity:

-Oct. 5: Discovery is launched on a high-priority mission to carry the European-built Ulysses probe into space for a five-year voyage over the poles of the sun. Lenoir ruled out a fueling test for Discovery, saying ''Discovery has no history of any hydrogen leak problems.''

-Oct. 7: Columbia is moved from launch pad 39A to nearby pad 39B for an exhaustive series of fueling tests to pin down the source of the crippling hydrogen leaks that have grounded the ship since May 30.

-Oct. 9: Atlantis is hauled from the Vehicle Assembly Building to pad 39A for a fueling test and preparations for launch on a classified military mission.

-Nov. 7: Atlantis, carrying a top-secret military satellite payload, is launched on the year's fifth shuttle flight.

-Nov. 28: Columbia finally takes off on its long-delayed ''Astro-1'' astronomy mission, a full six months after the first of the ship's four previous launch delays.

NASA originally planned nine shuttle flights in 1990, but if this preliminary schedule holds up, only six missions will make it off the ground.

Columbia's most recent delay came Monday night when explosive hydrogen gas began building up in the ship's engine room during fueling for a Tuesday launch attempt.

A team of independent NASA engineers was formed to track down the leak and determine what will be required to fix it. In the meantime, shuttle program manager Robert Crippen announced earlier this week that NASA will proceed with plans to launch Discovery Oct. 5.

Columbia originally was scheduled for launch May 30, but the flight was grounded the night before when sensors detected hydrogen gas spewing into the ship's engine compartment. A subsequent test led engineers to suspect problems with a massive 17-inch-wide ''disconnect'' fitting.

Columbia then was hauled off the pad and back to its hangar for repairs while NASA proceeded with plans to launch Atlantis in mid July. But Atlantis was grounded when a fueling test found yet another leak.

Engineers now believe both Columbia and Atlantis fell victim to damaged seals inside the disconnect fittings, which allow the shuttle's external tank to be jettisoned in space. In Atlantis's case, the problem appeared to involve the part of the disconnect assembly attached to the external tank.

But in Columbia's case, engineers believe, at least one more leak was present all along that had nothing to do with the disconnect fitting. It was that leak or leaks, that grounded Columbia Sept. 5 and again on Monday.

HARTFORD, CT (SEPT. 20) UPI - Rep. John G. Rowland, the Republican candidate for governor, has driven with an expired Connecticut license for 16 months but plans to renew it ''at the first opportunity,'' a spokesman said Thursday.

The 33-year-old congressman acknowledged he had been breaking traffic laws, but contended the state Department of Motor Vehicles never sent him a renewal notice - a claim the agency denied.

Campaign spokesman Jack Goldberg said Rowland was scheduled to return from Washington late Thursday afternoon and would renew the license ''when he gets a chance, at the first opportunity.''

Rowland's license expired in May 1989, but the fact he failed to renew it was not publicly known until The Hartford Courant checked motor vehicle records after receiving an anonymous tip.

Rowland suggested the tip came from a state worker angry over his campaign proposals that state employee unions accept a pay freeze and other concessions to cut Connecticut's deficit.

''This is what happens when you have the courage to take on the state employees,'' Rowland told the Courant. ''These things will pop up.''

Driving without a valid license is an infraction that carries a $58 fine, although a motorist must be caught driving to be charged, said Andrew Nelson, spokesman for the Department of Motor Vehicles.

Nelson said DMV records showed a renewal notice had been sent to Rowland in May 1989.

Rowland will have to pay $31 to renew his license, Nelson said.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 20) UPI - Bush administration officials are consulting with congressional leaders on an arms sale package to Saudi Arabia to meet additional needs in the Persian Gulf crisis, a White House aide said Thursday.

The Saudi proposal is not expected to be submitted to Congress until the administration has a better picture of what would be acceptable and the aide, who asked not to be identified, said that although ''no decision has been made '' the cost would be ''significant.''

''Clearly we have additional needs and some people have suggested different packages,'' the aide said.

One of the administration proposals called for a $20 billion sale of new weaponry to the Saudi government, a price tag questioned in a statement Thursday by Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif.

''Several of us suggested to the administration yesterday that the sale should be separated in two parts,'' Cranston said. ''The part first submitted for our consideration should be those weapons that can be gotten to the Saudis immediately.''

Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger told the House Appropriations foreign operations subcommittee the exact composition of the arms sales is now being worked out in consultation with members of Congress.

Undersecretary of Defense Paul Wolfowitz was lobbying Congress on what some lawmakers say would be the single largest arms transfer in American history.

Through the years several administrations have promised to keep Israel's arsenal qualitatively advantageous. Israel has requested a new $1 billion arms package.

Included in the proposed Saudi package would be F-15 jets and Apache helicopters that would take several years to deliver. In addition weapons sought for immediate use include TOW anti-tank missiles and launchers; M-1 battle tanks, Bradley Fighting Vehicles and naval command and control systems.

Cranston and other past opponents of arms sales to Persian Gulf countries have indicated they will not try to block the entire deal, but could be expected to challenge parts of it.

In his statement Cranston said the United States should ''give the Saudis the weapons they have requested provided it is demonstrably clear that they need them to defend against Iraqi agression and that they can assimilate them into their small armed forces.''

But the California Democrat said he would introduce legislation requiring that sophisticated weapons such as Patriot anti-aircraft missiles and F-15 aircraft be leased, instead of sold, to the Saudis.

A spokesman for the Saudi government, Fred Dutton, a Washington consultant, rejected the leasing arrangement. ''These arms are going to be purchased. The only question is where,'' he said, adding, ''We want to be on the record about this.''

Dutton's statement was a reference to past episodes when the Saudis, blocked by Congress from buying U.S. planes or equipment, turned to other countries for weapons. For example, in 1988 the Saudis purchased $10 billion worth of aircraft from British firms after being turned down by the United States in a bid to buy McDonnell Douglas F-15s.

Cranston said his proposal would require the Saudis to pay for the weapons and keep them until the United States determines the current crisis is over.

''The proliferation of U.S. arms in the gulf raises concerns about the possibility of arms falling into hostile hands during some future crisis and being used against our own fighting forces or our allies. Our concern is not hypothetical,'' Cranston said.

''Considerable weaponry now in the hands of Saddam Hussein was made in the United States. We sold it to the shah of Iran and Saddam Hussein captured it during the Iran-Iraq War. ... When he invaded Kuwait, Saddam captured still more U.S. weapons,'' Cranston said.

''By leasing rather than selling weapons outright, we still could expeditiously provide the sophisticated weapons the Saudis truly need and yet retain control over the weapons' ultimate disposition.''

ANCHORAGE, AK (SEPT. 20) UPI - State election officials Thursday sanctioned a mad scramble by candidates for governor to rearrange the November ballot in a game of political musical chairs that tore apart the Alaska Republican Party and brought an attempt at White House intervention.

Political maverick Walter Hickel jumped into the race for governor as an independent at the last minute, stealing the Republican Party lieutenant governor nominee for a running mate in a surprise move that split the party.

But the unorthodox political maneuvering was done according to the rules for making changes on the ballot, said Linda Edgeworth, spokeswoman for the state Division of Elections.

Hickel, 71, one-time Alaska governor and a former U.S. Interior secretary fired by President Nixon, becomes a wild card, transforming a tight race between liberal Democrat Tony Knowles and moderate Republican Arliss Sturgulewski into a three-way free-for-all with Hickel as the conservative.

Alaska Independence Party leader Joe Vogler helped engineer the political coup that threw the Republican Party into turmoil - destroying the ticket created by the August primary election and putting one of Alaska's best-known Republican personalities onto the ballot as the candidate of a stridently independent third party.

Hickel characterized the surprise move as ''a spontaneous revolution.''

Alaska conservatives - stung by defeat in the primary - made no secret of the fact they were looking for ways to resurrect their views before the voters, but they pulled it off like a sneak attack.

Hickel filed for governor one hour before Wednesday's 5 p.m. deadline for ballot changes in the Nov. 6 election - without telling Sturgulewski that he took her running mate, Jack Coghill, as his own.

Sturgulewski learned what had happened in time to recruit a new running mate 10 minutes before the deadline, selecting Jim Campbell, the businessman she edged out in the Republican primary.

The little-known Alaskan Independence Party nominees quit the race for governor, paving the way for the Hickel candidacy and almost leaving the Republican Party without a lieutenant governor candidate. Hickel changed his party registration from Republican to Alaskan Independence Party.

When word of Hickel's intentions reached Washington, White House chief of staff John Sununu called Alaska late Wednesday seeking to stop the renegade Republicans from defecting. President Bush was scheduled to hold an Oct. 9 fund-raiser in Washington, D.C., for the Sturgulewski- Coghill ticket.

''John Sununu called,'' Hickel said. ''He didn't call to congratulate me. He was trying to discourage me.''

Elected governor in 1966, Hickel quit midway through his term when President Nixon appointed him Interior secretary. Less than two years later, with Vietnam War protests rocking the country, Hickel suggested the president listen to American youth and Nixon fired him.

Back in Alaska, Hickel tried to get his old job back, and when he was defeated in the Republican primary, he waged a write-in campaign that once won him enough votes to come in second - ahead of the Democrat.

In 1984, Hickel supported Tony Knowles for mayor of Anchorage, the Democrat now running for governor. In 1986, Hickel ran for governor in the Republican primary, but Sturgulewski defeated him in a campaign marked by her criticism of him for campaigning for a multibillion-dollar trans-Alaska natural gas pipeline while he was chairman of Yukon Pacific Corp., the company seeking to build the line, a position Hickel still holds.

Hickel's move split conservative and moderate factions of state GOP and pleased the Democrats, but former party chairman Jim Crawford said Hickel and Coghill ''represent the fringe right wing of the party'' and left Sturgulewski solidly in the middle.

Mainstream Republicans called the move ''traitorous'' and Coghill acknowledged that it was ''traumatic.''

JOHNSTOWN, PA (SEPT. 20) UPI - Elsie Frum, the oldest known survivor of the Great Johnstown Flood, celebrated her 108th birthday Thursday confined to bed but enjoyed her angel food cake. Her daughter graciously handled publicity.

But Frum still recalls the day a train whistle alerted residents that something was wrong upstream. Just last May, on the centennial of the worst flood in U.S. history, she recounted vivid memories of the bodies of victims lying in a church awaiting coffins that were being made by her father.

''She's bedfast now. She broke her hip a year ago,'' said Evelyn Fondelier, 78 who cares for her mother. ''She was quite active before but now her fingers are so gnarled with arthritis. But, oh, to look at her! She takes a beautiful picture - and she's got a good mind.''

Frum was only seven on May 31, 1889, when a great wall of water pushed a churning mass of buildings, railway cars, trees and human bodies down the Little Conemaugh River valley and smashed into the city of Johnstown.

When the flood waters subsided, 2,209 people were dead. Johnstown and neighboring communities were leveled and many victims believed it was the end of the world.

Today, the industrial city of 35,000 65 miles east of Pittsburgh has spruced up its image. The flood became the stuff of legend and visitors to the revamped Johnstown Flood Museum can watch a film on the incident by Academy Award-winning documentary filmmaker Charles Guggenheim.

Frum also keeps those flood pictures in her head but no longer grants interviews. From her bedroom, she watched a local news program and smiled when the anchor wished her a happy birthday. The cake, baked by daughter Margaret Bower, 86, who lives next door, was festively decorated with blue candles.

''She's got lots of flowers and cards, money and nighties,'' Fondelier said. ''Her room's all fixed up with balloons and wreaths.''

Having survived a disaster that became the subject of books and songs and spawned a tourism-based renaissance for the town, Frum often asks her daughter these days why she is still alive.

''She says, 'I don't know why I'm living so long' and I say, 'He's not ready for you yet,'' said Fondelier. ''What answer do you give her? So that's what I say.''

ATLANTA (SEPT. 20) UPI - The government will not reach its 1990 goal of having 95 percent of Americans who use public water supplies drink fluoridated water to curb tooth decay, officials said Thursday.

Despite strong evidence that water fluoridation reduce dental decay, at least 39 percent of people who use public water supplies do not drink fluoridated water, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control said.

The national objective for dental health was one of 12 for 1990 proposed 10 years ago by federal health officials. The status of six goals were reported in the CDC's Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

The government began urging communities nationwide in the early 1950s to enrich their water the fluorine compound. Every major U.S. health organization including the American Medical Association and the American Cancer Society, has endorsed community fluoridation of public drinking water.

But opponents have argued against fluoridation, claiming the substance can cause cancer or contending that fluoride's benefits can be obtained in other ways, such as toothpaste or special applications.

''To me, the unfortunate thing is that by focusing on freedom of choice issues those who don't have access to care and resources are losing out,'' said Dr. Dolores Malvitz,'' author of the CDC report. ''The upper middle classes will find ways to make sure that their children receive fluoride, but with community fluoridation everyone gets ''nit

States with the lowest proportion of the population drinking fluoridated water include California, Hawaii, Nevada, New Jersey and Utah, where traditions of resistance to government intervention are strong.

In those states, between only 2 percent and 18 percent of the population using public water supplies drink water containing the government-recommended amount of fluoride - over 0.7 parts per million.

On the other end of the spectrum are seven states - Connecticut, Georgia, Illinois, Minnesota, Nebraska, Ohio and South Dakota - where fluoridation is required by law and the vast majority of urban dwellers drink fluoridated water.

Some of the largest cities still holding out include Los Angeles, San Diego, San Antonio, Texas, Newark, N.J., Portland, Ore., Honolulu and Salt Lake City

Phoenix, Ariz. and Tampa, Fla., recently began fluoridation.

Dr. Caswell Evans, director of public health programs and services at the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services, said the fluoridation issue was brought up for a vote in the mid-1970s and rejected.

''While there has been interest in fluoridation among several groups, it was not brought back and hasn't gotten back to a level of consideration.''

Malvitz said a study conducted by the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences showed some evidence that fluoride caused bone cancer in some male rats.

''The evidence was declared equivocal,'' she said. ''It was not strong enough for them to definitely make the connection.''

The CDC report said another of the 1990 dental health objectives calling for only 60 percent of 9-year-old children to have cavities in their permanent teeth has been met.

The goal to reduce gum inflammation to 20 percent and destructive gum disease to 21 percent in adults was partially met and another goal calling for 95 percent of schoolchildren and parents to be able to identify the major factors of dental disease will likely not be met.

Americans have achieved another goal calling for 75 percent of adults to be aware of the need for thorough personal oral hygiene and regular professional dental care, the CDC said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

''We have made progress, but we now need to focus our efforts on the groups of people who still have high levels of disease,'' Malvitz said.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (SEPT. 20) UPI - Launch of a powerful Air Force Titan 4 rocket carrying a classified military payload has been delayed to Friday at the earliest because of technical problems, sources said Thursday.

Launch originally was planned for Sept. 17, the sources said, but the flight was put off two days to Wednesday give the National Aeronautics and Space Administration a chance to launch the leak-plagued shuttle Columbia from nearby launch pad 39A.

Columbia then was grounded during fuel loading Monday night because of another hydrogen fuel leak, clearing the way for the Air Force to launch the Titan 4 on the rocket's third flight.

But the Titan launch was postponed Wednesday, apparently because of technical problems with the rocket, according to usually reliable sources. Launch was believed to have been rescheduled for no earlier than Friday between midnight and 1:30 a.m. EDT Saturday.

Unlike other military rockets, all Titan 4 launches are conducted in secrecy with no advance warning of launch dates or times. Likewise, the identity of the payloads are classified.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (SEPT. 20) UPI - The African National Congress, in a major policy decision, called Thursday for talks with rival Zulu chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi on ending a wave of urban violence and accused President Frederik de Klerk of ''bad faith'' in his racial reform program.

The ANC stopped short of calling off power-sharing negotiations with the white government and resuming its guerrilla war against minority rule, but said talks with de Klerk were perilously close to collapsing.

The attack on de Klerk - the harshest since the reformist president lifted a 30-year ban on the ANC in February and freed ANC leader Nelson Mandela from 27 years imprisonment - came at the end of a three-day meeting of the ANC's National Executive Committee.

The 36-member NEC, joined by senior trade officials and leaders of other ANC-linked anti-apartheid movements, also decided to encourage supporters in areas affected by ''vigilante violence to organize themselves for the purposes of self-defense.''

In an unexpected development, the policy-making body effectively dropped its long-standing opposition to direct talks between Mandela and Buthelezi by proposing a meeting between the ANC and the leaders of the country's 10 black homelands and self-governing territories.

''In order to get to the root causes of the violence and to secure peace among the people, the extended NEC resolved to convene a meeting with all homeland leaders, including Chief Gatsha Buthelezi, to devise a joint strategy to combat the forces of destabilization and violence,'' it said.

The ANC has consistently rejected a meeting between Mandela and Buthelezi, leader of the Zulu movement Inkatha and chief minister of the self-governing territory of Kwa Zulu in the Indian Ocean Province of Natal.

Supporters of the ANC and Inkatha, ideologically at odds since the 1970s, have fought a long battle in Natal. More than 4,000 people have died in the province since 1987 and it spread to black townships surrounding Johannesburg early last month. In the ensuing urban violence - the worst in the country's history - more than 750 people were killed.

Since the eruption of violence around Johannesburg, the ANC had until Thursday resisted Buthelezi's demands for direct talks with Mandela and accused Inkatha of plotting the killing in a bid to increase its political leverage in the power-sharing negotiations.

The call for a meeting with Buthelezi came only hours after the ANC and Inkatha announced the highest-level meeting between the two organizations since 1979 had occurred Wednesday in a bid to end the conflict. A joint statement issued in the Indian Ocean port city of Durban as constructive and said another meeting was scheduled for next week.

Despite the fresh overture, the ANC reiterated in its four-page announcement Thursday that it held ''combined forces of elements of the security services and Inkatha vigilantes'' responsible for the wave of violence.

Failure to curb it, the ANC said, ''poses an immediate threat to the entire process of peaceful transition.''

It said the government had adopted a ''laissez faire'' attitude toward the violence and said measures by De Klerk Wednesday to halt the killings were designed ''to abridge the civil liberies of he African populaion.''

''We are obliged to draw the attention of the South African people and the international community to the act of bad faith committed by State President De klerk in his most recent actions,'' the ANC said.

The broadside coincided with the anniversary of De Klerk's first year in power Thursday and came just three days before his departure for Washington and talks on Monday with President Bush.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 20) UPI - More than 250 prominent scientists signed a petition being sent Friday to the Chinese Embassy backing an international boycott of conferences in China to protest its continuing crackdown on political dissent.

The petition, signed by mathematicians and physicists from at least 11 countries, demanded Beijing provide a complete list of all scientists and students in scientific fields who have been imprisoned since the Tiananmen Square massacre of June 4, 1989.

The appeal, to be delivered to the embassy by messenger on Friday, also demands the ''immediate and unconditional release'' of three campus leaders of last summer's pro-democracy demonstrations.

The petition was organized by Asia Watch and the Robert F. Kennedy Memorial Center for Human Rights in New York, which said it was acting at the urging of recently freed Chinese astrophysicist and human rights advocate Fang Lizhi.

Among those signing the appeal were Nobel laureates Christian Anfinsen, David Baltimore and Hans Bethe. Other signers were from Japan, Sweden, Germany, Canada, the Netherlands, Britain, Belgium, Switzerland, France and Italy.

The petition, addressed to Zhou Guang-zhao, president of the Chinese Academy of Sciences, said it welcomed the release of Fang and his wife, who spent more than a year in the U.S. Embassy in Beijing to avoid charges they helped incite the demonstrations.

''But,'' the petition said, ''we cannot remain silent when other colleagues in the People's Republic of China are held captive because of their pursuit of the ideals of truth and free inquiry.''

The signers said they would ''refrain from participation in any international scientific conferences which take place in China, at least until the end of 1990, and we call upon our colleagues in the scientific community to do likewise.''

Kerry Kennedy Cuomo, executive director of the Kennedy Center for Human Rights said the boycott is an extension of one begun in May by about 100 scientists demanding Fang be allowed to leave China.

She said the action was inspired a similar boycott against scientific conferences in the Soviet Union that was waged on behalf of Yuri Orlov, a dissident human rights advocate who was sentenced in 1978 to seven years in a prison camp in Siberia. Orlov was allowed to leave the Soviet Union in October 1986.

Cuomo said she had no definite way of measuring the effect of such a boycott against China, although she said it has been backed by numerous scientific and professional organizations in the United States and other countries, costing China both prestige and access to technology.

''I think that this has an effect on the Chinese government, yes I do,'' she said.

The three student leaders named in the petition were Chen Mingyuan, a mathematics professor at the Foreign Language Institute in Beijing, Liu Gang, a physics graduate employed at the Beijing Sociology and Economics Institute, and Shao Jiang, a mathematics student and member of the Autonomous Students' Union of Beijing University.

DETROIT (SEPT. 20) UPI - General Motors Corp. said Thursday it will idle its Willow Run plant in Ypsilanti, Mich., for two weeks starting Sept. 24, and then cut back to alternating two work shifts for four weeks beginning Oct. 8 because of slow sales of the restyled, full-sized Chevrolet Caprice.

GM spokeswoman Kathy Tanner said the plant's 4,300 hourly workers were told about the temporary closings and cutbacks Thursday. "In order to maximize employment during reduced volume, we will alternate shifts on a weekly basis, starting with the afternoon shift working the week of Oct. 8," Tanner said.

The latest cutbacks have nothing to do with the loss of export orders because of Middle East tensions, Tanner said. Willow Run had been closed the weeks of Aug. 13 and Aug. 20 because of a loss of a large order from the Middle East, where the Caprice is popular.

The Willow Run plant also builds the Caprice wagon as well as Oldsmobile's new Custom Cruiser wagon. All three models have been given all-new aerodynamic bodies for 1991, although their rear-drive chassis and 5.0 liter V8 engines are carried over from before.

That plant also is currently preparing to build police and taxi versions of the Caprice sedan and will produce the Buick Roadmaster Estate wagon starting in December, Tanner said.

GM's Arlington, Texas, plant, which also makes Caprice sedans as well as the rear-drive Cadillac Brougham, will continue running on two shifts, Tanner said.

Chevrolet has been hoping to sell about 200,000 Caprices a year, although recent concerns about rising fuel prices because of Mideast tensions may be causing buyers to shy away from large cars with V8 engines. EPA fuel economy estimated range from 17 mpg to 26 mpg for the Caprice sedan, while the wagon versions are rated at between 16 mpg and 25 mpg.

GM's supply of unsold Caprices as of Sept. 10, the latest date available, stood at 99 days, according to industry figures. That is up from 92 days at the end of August, with both above the 65- to 70-day supply considered normal for this time of year.

LOS ANGELES (SEPT. 20) UPI - Attorneys for former Lincoln Savings operator Charles H. Keating Jr., jailed on criminal fraud charges and held in lieu of $5 million bail, promised Thursday that Keating won't flee the country if his bail is reduced.

''My client poses no risk of flight,'' said Stephen C. Neal in a bail reduction hearing before Superior Court Judge Gary Klausner. ''He can't defend himself in this matter while incarcerated.''

Neal also offered to surrender Keating's passport to the court.

Keating, 66, accused in a 42-count indictment stemming from the sale of $250 million of now-worthless junk bonds to 23,000 victims, was jailed Tuesday after the indictment was unsealed. He has been held in Los Angeles County Jail since then and has been served chili and macaroni casserole for lunch and chicken patties with gravy for dinner.

One of the victims attending the hearing said outside the courtroom that Keating's bail should not be cut.

''Charlie Keating should stay in jail until the victims get their money back '' said Evangeline Ivy, a retiree from Glendale, Calif., who said she lost her life savings after buying the junk bonds at a Lincoln Savings branch. ''I'm sure he has plenty of money somewhere.''

But authorities are doubtful that any of the money will be recovered. Prosecutors allege that Keating and his three co-defendants headed a scheme that deliberately targeted unsophisticated Lincoln depositors and duped them by not disclosing that the bonds, issued by Lincoln's parent American Continental Corp., were not federally insured.

Klausner said during the two-hour morning hearing that he will probably rule on cutting the bail for Keating, who once had assets of $39 million but claims he is broke, later Thursday afternoon.

Two other attorneys who have worked with Keating, who faces a myriad of civil charges from the collapse of Lincoln, told Klausner that Keating has an unblemished record of court appearances. They also said that Keating was eager to clear his name, which has become symbolic of the excesses of the savings and loan scandals.

''He looks forward to vigorously defending himself,'' Neal told Klausner.

Keating has argued that regulators ruined American Continental, which filed for bankruptcy the day before Lincoln was seized, by flooding the Arizona real estate market with low-priced property from other failed thrifts.

Defense attorneys, who had expected a $1 million bail for Keating and $50,000 for each of the other defendants, brought a string of relatives and business associates to testify about the defendants' high moral character.

Keating and his co-defendants - Judy Wischer, 42, American Continental's former president; former Lincoln President Ray Fidel, 32, and former Lincoln Chief Executive Officer Robin Symes, 37 - will remain in County Jail until they post bond.

Prosecutors made no recommendations on bail at the arraignment Tuesday, but have since indicated that they may support a bail reduction. On Thursday, they filed a motion to require the defendants to prove that the money they put up for bail must have been obtained legally.

The defendants are to enter pleas before Klausner on Oct. 5. If convicted of six or more counts, each defendant could face up to 10 years in prison.

The indictment is the first criminal case stemming from the collapse of Irvine Calif.-based Lincoln 17 months ago. Lincoln's failure is expected to cost taxpayers more than $2 billion, making it the costliest bailout yet in the massive nationwide savings and loan scandal.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 20) UPI - Findings have implicated another area of the brain in Parkinson's disease, opening a new avenue in the bid to find treatments for the debilitating disorder, researchers said Thursday.

Scientists from Johns Hopkins Medical Institutions in Baltimore said their experiments in monkeys with Parkinson's-like symptoms showed excessive nerve activity in the middle part of the brain appears to play a key role in Parkinson's disease.

Furthermore, when researchers deliberately killed the overactive nerve cells in the brain region, called the subthalamic nucleus, the monkeys experienced a dramatic improvement in limb movement and reductions in tremors and muscle rigidity.

For some time, doctors have known that in Parkinson's patients, cells die off at the base of the brain, in a region called the substantia nigra, which produces a substance called dopamine that is used in upper brain regions that control motor function. Nerve tracts travel from the brain's base to its upper reaches through a complicated circuit that includes the subthalamic nucleus.

But ecently researchers have begun to suspect that the subthalamic nucleus may play a direct role in triggering Parkinson's symptoms.

''We now believe a lot of the problems in Parkinson's happens in a pathway different from what was previously thought. It is a rather significant departure from previous thinking,'' said Dr. Mahlon DeLong, a neurologist who headed the study while at Johns Hopkins.

DeLong, now at Emory University medical school in Atlanta, said the monkey experiments provide ''the first direct proof'' that the subthalamic nucleus may be an important treatment target in Parkinson's.

Parkinson's affects between 500,000 and 1 million Americans. The brain disease causes a progressive loss of muscle control resulting in debilitating trembling, stiffness and loss of balance. Mental functions are usually spared.

Some patients benefit from taking pills containing a form of dopamine, but the pills work for only a limited time.

Reporting in the journal Science, DeLong's team found two ''Parkinsonian'' monkeys, whose brain damange was artificially inflicted by a drug, had more nerve activity in the subthalamic nucleus than normal monkeys.

When acid was injected into half of the subthalamic nucleus to selectively kill overactive nerve cells, tremors on the side of the body controlled by the treated region were ''almost abolished'' and movements ''markedly increased'' to the point the animals could feed and groom themselves, researchers said. The improvements persisted over the three- week study.

But the treatment was not a total cure. Some clumsiness and slowness of movement remained and the monkeys developed uncontrolled movements in limbs controlled by the treated side - a problem that gradually decreased in one animal and eventually disappeared in the other.

Although long-term animal studies are needed before the strategy could be tried in humans, researchers said,:''Our results suggest a potential clinical application for surgical or pharmacological inactivation of the subthalamic nucleus as a treatment for Parkinson's.''

Other recent attempts to treat Parkinson's without drugs have involved implanting tissue from the adrenal gland or aborted fetuses into the brain in hopes of restoring dopamine production.

Dr. Abraham Lieberman, an advisor to the American Parkinson's Disease Association, called the latest findings ''potentially very important.'' But he warned that people stricken by strokes that damage the subthalamic nucleus sometimes suffer bouts of uncontrolled movement so severe they are life-threatening.

Dr. Don Gash, of the University of Rochester medical school in New York, also called the work interesting. However, he questioned whether suddenly disrupting a monkey's brain circuitry with a drug reflects the slow gradual deterioration that occurs in people with Parkinson's.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 20) UPI - Stocks closed broadly and sharply lower Thursday in lightly moderate trading as program selling extended losses tied to a surge in oil prices and to anxiety about the economy and interest rates.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 13.86 Wednesday, tumbled 39.11 to close at 2518.32. The close was the lowest point in the Dow's current slide since Aug. 23, when it bottomed out at 2483.42 because of soaring oil prices brought on by Iraq's invasion of Kuwait three weeks earlier.

Among broad market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index slumped 2.69 to 171.22. The price of an average share slid 47 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index skidded 5.12 to 311.48.

Declines thumped advances 1,242-288 among the 1,973 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Volume amounted to about 145,100,000 shares, compared with the 147,530,000 traded Wednesday.

A surge in oil prices, fears about how the economy will fare without an imminent easing of credit policy by the Federal Reserve to bring down interest rates and waves of program selling all were behind Thursday's broad-based sell-off.

The computer-driven selling was not curbed until just before the close, when the Dow industrials hit bottom with a loss of 50 points, triggering the exchange's rule limiting program selling.

Prices opened lower on carryover selling from Wednesday, when Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan, testifying before a Congressional panel, said the surge in oil prices resulting from the Kuwait invasion threatened to push the domestic economy into recession.

But he did not indicate if the Fed was inclined to bolster the sputtering economy with an interest rate cut, saying Fed policy would depend "on the specifics of the situation, which are shifting day by day." Greenspan's remarks disappointed traders, who were hoping for a cut in rates soon.

The early losses were then exacerbated by waves of program selling, used to profit on price differences between stocks and stock-index futures. And with many traders away for the Rosh Hashanah holiday, the market was especially vulnerable to the computer-driven selling.

Dale Tills, manager of institutional equities trading at Charles Schwab & Co. in San Francisco, said the surge in oil prices only served to add to worries about the prospects for the economy. October oil futures, which expired Thursday, closed up $1.53 a barrel to $34.71, a record for the New York Mercantile Exchange. "It was just a real sick feeling when crude broke above $34 a barrel," said Tills. "Things just don't look good."

Tills also said concerns about municipal economies weighed on the market. Traders dumped MBIA, a municipal bond insurer, for the third straight day amid fears of defaults by issuers of tax-exempt bonds, most notably financially shaky Philadelphia.

And from a technical standpoint, Tills noted that the market is getting dangerously close to lows hit in August: "I think that's going to be the critical test. If we break below that level (2483 in the Dow) I wouldn't be surprised to see 2200."

On the trading floor, General Electric, which paid its quarterly dividend Thursday, was the most active issue, down 1/2 to 55 1/8. Pepsico followed, off 5/8 to 22 3/4. Philip Morris was third, down one to 45.

Other losers in the blue-chip average: AT&T, off 1/4 to 30 1/2; General Motors off 1/2 to 36 7/8; Coca-Cola, off one to 38 3/4; Eastman Kodak, off one to 41 1/8; IBM, off 1/2 to 107 7/8; Merck, off 1 1/8 to 75 3/4; Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing, off 1 5/8 to 77 7/8; Alcoa, off 1 1/2 to 68 3/8; and United Technologies, off 1 1/4 to 46 1/2.

Elsewhere, Apple Bancorp soared 5 1/2 to 36 3/8 after saying it would terminate two trusts if investor Stanley Stahl executed his $38-a-share takeover bid before the bank's annual meeting. Stahl had called for elimination of the trusts, created in response to his bid.

Lawyers for the bank and Stahl were in talks Thursday to discuss procedures for assuring that Stahl's nominees would make up a majority of the board on the completion of his offer. Stahl said he expects to complete the deal by Oct. 1.

MBIA plunged three to 25 1/2 after plummeting almost $7 a share Tuesday and Wednesday. And Computer Factory soared one to 3 1/8 after a $4-a-share bid from Bay Street Group.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 174,763,070 shares, compared with 176,384,940 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices fell in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex

Market Value index lost 1.79 to 317.18. Declines led advances 382-155 among the 778 issues traded. The price of an average share fell six cents. Composite volume totaled 14,072,600 shares vs. 12,002,000 traded Wednesday. PaineWebber call warrants on Tokyo's Nikkei stock index led the Amex issues, up 3/4 to 9 5/8.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index tumbled 7.25 to close at 364.43.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 20) UPI - Assets of the nation's 524 money market mutual funds rose by $1.72 billion to $408.76 billion in the week ended Wednesday, the Investment Company Institute reported Thursday.

The Washington-based institute said broker-dealer fund assets increased $40.9 million to $165.61 billion, assets of general purpose funds increased $1.05 billion to $144.85 billion and institutional fund assets rose $629.5 million to $98.30 billion.

"With money market fund yields and short-term interest rates fluctuating within very narrow ranges and light activity in the stock market, there was little to justify large-scale changes in assets positions," said Jacob Dreyer, vice president and chief economist at the Institute. "Assets of money market funds rose nonetheless by a substantial amount reflecting investors' basic predilection for safety in times of economic uncertainty."

Mutual fund assets were revised for Sept. 12 to $407.04 billion. The increase reported for Sept. 12 was revised to $497.8 million. The Investment Company Institute, a national association of the American investment company industry, reports the assets of money market funds to the Federal Reserve Board each week.

The Donoghue Organization, of Holliston, Mass., said average seven- day simple yields were 7.46 percent, down from 7.47 percent, and 30-day simple yields fell to 7.47 percent, off from 7.48 percent the previous week. The average maturity of fund portfolios was 46 days down from 47.

The Bank Rate Monitor, of North Palm Beach, Fla., gave average rates as follows: money market deposit accounts, 5.89 percent, unchanged; Super-Now accounts, 4.97 percent, unchanged; six-month certificates of deposit, 7.49 percent, unchanged; 1-year CDs, 7.58 percent, down from 7.59 percent; 2 1/2-year CDs, 7.67 percent, down from 7.68; and five-year CDs, 7.80 percent, unchanged.

The average rate for a one-year, adjustable-rate mortgage was 8.25 percent, down from 8.26 percent.

The average rate on a 15-year, fixed-rate mortgage fell in the latest week to 9.70 percent, down from 9.71, while the average rate for a 30- year, fixed-rate mortgage also dropped, to 10.01 percent, off from 10.02.

The average rate for a four-year automobile loan was 12.22 percent, down from 12.23 percent.

(SEPT. 20) UPI - The two German parliaments today ratified a bilateral treaty which settles the final details of German re-unfication, set for October 3rd. The action followed re-assurances from the West German government to its neighbors and allies that it will never repeat the atrocities of Nazism. West German Foreign Minister Hans Dietrich-Genscher says re-unification will be ''an investment'' in Europe's future.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein wants to go on American television to tell his side of the Persian Gulf crisis. Iraq's ambassador to Washington today relayed the request to Assistant Secretary of State John Kelly. But the State Department says Kelly responded by telling the Iraqi ambassador the U-S government is ''NOT a marketing agent.''

In another example of international outrage toward Iraq, the Olympic Council of Asia today barred Iraq from the quadrennial Asian Games. The council also suspended Iraq from the council itself. The move comes amid threats of an Arab boycott and anger over the death of the council's president, a member of the Kuwaiti royal family. He was killed by Iraq troops during the invasion of Kuwait.

The head of the International Monetary Fund says the I-M-F is considering asking nations that are benefiting from rising oil prices to help those countries most hurt by the Persian Gulf crisis. Oil prices have soared to more than 30-dollars a barrel and contributed to increased inflation and slowed economic output in much of the oil- dependent industrialized and developing world.

The stand-off was sparked by a land dispute.

One of the nation's top banking regulators told a Senate committee today that the government could easily save at least four-BILLION dollars on the savings industry bailout. William Seidman says if the Resolution Trust Company gets an additional 18- to 20-BILLION dollars in fiscal 1991, it should use the money to prepay promissory notes. The company is selling the assets of failed thrifts.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 20) UPI - Business expectations of higher fourth-quarter sales and profits have dropped to their lowest level in more than seven years, according to a survey released Thursday.

The outlook was particularly gloomy among manufacturers, whose expections for gains in sales, profits and new orders fell sharply, said The Dun & Bradstreet Corp. quarterly survey of 1,500 business executives.

''Business optimism is currently at the lowest levels since the recession period of 1982,'' said Joseph W. Duncan, corporate economist and chief statistician for D&B.

''The survey was conducted shortly after the invasion of Kuwait, so the results may have been exaggerated by the high levels of anxiety immediately following the takeover,'' he noted. ''The bottom line is that - until further data become available - the outlook for a recession remains uncertain.''

Retailers' expectations for gains in fourth-quarter sales increased slightly compared with the third-quarter, D&B said.

''While retailers expect a slight increase in fourth-quarter sales compared with the third quarter, expectations remain at very low levels, '' said Duncan. ''In fact, retailers reported a sharp decline in the previous survey.''

The survey was conducted of 1,500 executives nationwide in manufacturing, retailing and wholesaling between Aug. 12 and 30.

Optimism about sales dropped to its lowest level since the first quarter of 1983, with manufacturers posting the steepest decline.

Optimism among employees dropped to its lowest level in almost eight years, the survey showed.

BELLEVUE, Wash. (SEPT. 20) UPI - Conservative elements in Japan may be using the Middle East crisis to turn the defeated World War II nation into a military power again, but the move will fail because most Japanese would oppose the idea, three visiting Japanese citizens said Thursday.

They said right-wing factions in the ruling Liberal Democratic Party contend that in addition to financial support being lent to the international effort to impose economic sanctions on Iraq, Japan should modify its constitution in order to send its defensive forces to the troubled Persian Gulf region.

''The rightists might take advantage of this because they are feeling very confident now'' due to Japan's economic successes of the past decade, said Nozomu Nakaoka, senior reporter and deputy manager of Toyo Keizai Inc. (The Oriental Economist Inc.).

''The problem (of sending troops) is sentimental,'' he said. ''Should we bleed our own blood? Some Japanese are ready to do that.''

But Nakaoka said those supporting such a move are in the extreme minority in Japan. As a people, he said, ''We are not as sentimental about war as you (Americans).''

He said other Asian nations, still with fresh memories of Japan's invasions of World War II, would not accept a renewed military role for the island nation, nor would Japanese who remember the war.

Yet, he said, the Japanese are sensitive to international criticism that they are not doing enough to counter the threat by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, and such criticism could add fuel to the militarists' goals.

Japan initially decided to contribute $20 billion toward the effort, but when criticized for doing too little doubled the amount to $40 billion.

Nakaoka appeared along with Nobuyuki Ueda, an economist with Long- Term Credit Bank of Japan, and Seiichiro Yonekura, a professor of business history at Hitotsubashi University in Tokyo, in a series of forums this week around Washington state and will later travel to Philadelphia and Boston on a trip sponsored by the Japan-American Society.

Both Ueda and Yonekura agreed with Nakaoka that sending Japanese troops would be the wrong thing to do.

For one thing, Article 9 of Japan's constitution, which was adopted after Japan was defeated in World War II, expressly forbids any kind of military force other than for defensive purposes.

Ueda said some conservatives are trying to get around that by passing a law to allow Japan's defense forces to join the United Nations-backed forces in the Middle East by contending those forces are purely defensive.

''They are very keen to take advantage of this opportunity to set up a special role for the government to sent troops overseas, but I don't think this is a good idea,'' Ueda said.

He said the vast majority of Japanese are opposed to changing the constitution and believe that international disputes should be settled through negotation and alliances with existing military powers.

Ueda pointed out that Japan is not as economically vulnerable as the United States to skyrocketing oil prices resulting from the crisis. Even though Japan gets 70 percent of its oil from the Middle East, its economy as a whole is not as dependent on petroleum, he said.

However, he said, Japan would suffer in the long run from higher inflation and interest rates and that is why the Japanese are willing to contribute $40 billion to the effort - an amount he said could be borne by the Japanese without too much trouble.

LOS ANGELES (SEPT. 21) UPI - An attorney specializing in ''lemon-law'' filed a $1 billion class-action suit Thursday in state court against General Motors Corp., alleging that the automaker does not honor its customer warranties.

''General Motors is easily the worst of the Big Three in terms of covering warranties,'' said attorney Norman Taylor in an interview. ''They fight customers tooth-and-nail over this.''

Taylor said the suit, which alleges that GM is violating the state and federal ''lemon laws,'' could affect as many as 60,000 customers, with $300 million sought in refunds. Damages could surpass $1 billion, he said.

GM spokesman Bill Ott said the company has not yet seen the suit, filed in Los Angeles Superior Court. But he said the company has held discussions about the suit with Taylor prior to the filing.

''We believe the allegations are totallly without merit,'' Ott said. ''We will defend this lawsuit vigorously.''

Ott said that GM has increased its commitment to serving customers in recent years.

''Our No. 1 priority is total customer satisfaction,'' Ott said. ''The automobile business is fiercely competitive around the world now, so there is no incentive for any company to wilfully decieve its customers.''

The suit alleges that the arbitration process is ''fraudulently rigged'' against customers.

The suit includes allegations derived from two cases involving customers who bought a GM car. One involved a Pontiac Fiero, while the other was an Oldsmobile Cutlass station wagon.

The Fiero owner, Verna Webster of Los Angeles, alleged that she had to replace the clutch four times in less than 30,000 miles. Following a jury trial that ended in March 1989, she was awarded a refund.

Taylor said the jury in that case also found that GM had wilfully violated the lemon law.

In the Cutlass case, an arbitrator awarded Steve and Jane Hernandez of Palmdale, Calif., a refund and a $7,000 penalty because of the car's front-end problems, Taylor said.

SAN JOSE, CA (SEPT. 21) BUSINESS WIRE - VLSI Technology Inc. (NASDAQ:VLSI), has split its design technology group out of its Application-Specific Integrated Circuit (ASIC) division in a move that will enable the company to increase its focus on and enhance sales of its leadership software.

VLSI's software ''tools'' are used in the design of ASICs and application-specific standard products (ASSPs).

Heading the new unit will be Dieter Mezger, who is currently senior vice president of VLSI's European operations, based in Munich, Germany. Mezger will continue in his current duties of managing the European operation. He will report to James R. Fiebiger, president and chief operating officer in San Jose.

Mezger joined VLSI in 1984 as the first European employee and president and general manager responsible for starting the company's business in Europe.

Today, the organization consists of employees based in Germany, England, France and Italy, including a software research and development center in Sophia Antipolis, France. European business accounts for approximately 20 percent of VLSI's total revenues.

Alfred J. Stein, chairman and chief executive officer, said: ''Dieter Mezger's outstanding success in growing our European business into a major continental presence and significant portion of our international revenues make him an ideal candidate to start this new business thrust for us.

''The combination of his nearly 25 years' experience in engineering, sales, marketing, plus his ability to develop and manage a highly successful business will enable us to launch the software division with the impetus all new businesses require.''

Commenting on the new division, Fiebiger, president and chief operating officer, said: ''This organizational change allows us to emphasize the software segment of our business and increase our general market visibility. We believe that we will be able to improve our product development cycles and demonstrate even better service to customers.

''We believe that our software tools are unique because they can operate as a stand-alone system or in conjunction with most generic computer-automated engineering (CAE) software, and they have the support of VLSI's manufacturing capability, as well. VLSI's tools and libraries cover the full range of design tasks from synthesis and silicon compilation to place-and-route and test-program generation.

''It is the historical strength of VLSI's tools that have enabled the company to define the state of the art and take a leadership position in the design of complex cell-based ICs and gate arrays. The VLSI ASIC Synthesizer, introduced earlier this year, established a new benchmark for sophistication in synthesis technology.''

As a result of this change, Douglas G. Fairbairn, senior vice president of Corporate Strategy and Development, will be free to concentrate on broader strategic issues for the company. Fairbairn will report to Stein in his new post.

VLSI Technology Inc. produces application-specific integrated circuits, application-specific standard products, and the software used in the design of these products. The company, which is based in San Jose, has approximately 2,000 employees worldwide.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 21) BUSINESS WIRE - The Department of Justice and the United States Attorney for Nebraska Friday announced that Dale Electronics Inc. pled guilty to criminal charges of submitting false statements and will pay criminal and civil fines of $3.7 million.

Dale pled guilty to three criminal counts of submitting false statements in United States District Court in Omaha and will pay $1.05 million in criminal fines. The company, a wholly owned subsidiary of Vishay Intertechnology, Malvern, Pa., also agreed to pay $2.56 million to settle civil charges under the False Claims Act.

Dale will also pay $167,255 to cover the government's investigative expenses.

Dale was charged with falsely certifying that some of the electronic resistors it sold to the Department of Defense (DOD) met or exceeded government specifications when in fact they did not.

In a joint statement, Stuart M. Gerson, assistant attorney general for the Civil Division, and Ron Lahners, U.S. Attorney for Nebraska, said, ''This case is another example of our continuing commitment to eradicate fraud perpetrated by defense contractors. We will continue to zealously pursue these types of cases to ensure that in a time of shrinking military expenditures, the government gets all of what it pays for.''

An investigation by the Defense Criminal Investigative Service disclosed that on three separate occasions, between September 1985 and February 1986, Dale (which was not then owned by Vishay) failed to report that some of its resistors had not met DOD performance specifications. Dale also failed to disclose to DOD that other military contractors using its resistors had reported resistor test failures.

By relying on Dale's claims that its resistors were not responsible for the testing failures and that they were most likely caused by the contractors' own testing procedures, the contractors incurred more than $2 million in additional testing costs. These additional testing expenses were charged back to the government.

Friday's settlement follows the resolution of administrative claims against Dale pursued by DOD. As part of that settlement, Dale agreed to pay $801,594.78, representing $369,233.22 earmarked for repurchase of defective resistors in DOD's inventory and $432,361.56 as administrative costs.

Last January, six former Dale employees were debarred by the Defense Logistics Agency for their roles in submitting the false certifications.

SAN BERNARDINO, CALIF. (SEPT. 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Kasler Corp. (NASDAQ:KASL), a leader in highway/heavy construction, Friday announced the company was the successful low bidder on a $43,433,333 contract in Los Angeles County for the California State Department of Transportation.

The contract, which represents the company's 10th Century Freeway project, is to construct Interstate 105 from Inglewood Avenue to Lemoli Avenue. The work consists of concrete paving of two miles of new freeway and eight bridge structures and construction of the transit station and light-rail facilities. The estimated duration of this project is 30 months.

The $1.2 billion Century Freeway, which represents the largest surface-highway project in the nation, encompasses 18 miles of new freeway construction from Los Angeles International Airport to Norwalk.

Bob Ferguson, president and chief executive officer, commenting on the low bid said, ''Kasler Corp. continues to play an important role in the construction of the new Century Freeway in Los Angeles.''

Ferguson continued: ''This project represents the first major bid on the Century Freeway project since the passage of transportation-related Propositions 111 and 108 in June 1990. The additional funding from these propositions should continue to provide increasing bidding opportunities for Kasler and our industry.''

Proposition 111 (The Traffic Congestion and Spending Limitation Act of 1990) and Proposition 108 (The Passenger Rail and Clean Air Act of 1990) are projected to generate approximately $18.5 billion over the next 10 years, with the funds dedicated to improving and expanding California's aging transportation system.

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, CA (SEPT. 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Nichols Institute (ASE:LAB) announced Friday that, based upon preliminary information now available to it with respect to its third quarter ending Sept. 30, 1990, earnings for that quarter could be less than the highest projections being published by analysts by about 10 percent.

Dr. Albert L. Nichols, president, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the Institute said that, although company estimates are in accord with those of some analysts, the possibility of variances from the highest forecasts arises principally out of the recent unexpected impact of difficulties in consolidating the operations of Physicians Medical Laboratories, a company acquired in January 1990, with the Institute's existing Medlab Inc. operation in Portland, Ore.

He indicated that both management and operational changes are in place in Portland which are expected to bring future performance closer to original expectations. A portion of the negative impact on earnings from the Portland operations will be absorbed by the Institute's other business units, many of which are performing better than planned.

Nichols Institute provides esoteric diagnostic testing to clients nationwide in the fields of endocrinology, genetics, immunology, microbiology, molecular biology, oncology, serology, special chemistries, toxicology and virology. It also has regional laboratories in California, the Pacific Northwest and the Midwest which provide clinical testing to those markets.

The company also provides NIDA-certified substance-abuse testing to clients nationwide. Nichols Institute Diagnostics manufactures kits for the performance of medical-diagnostic tests which are distributed worldwide.

TORRANCE, CA (SEPT. 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Andrew Corp. Friday announced the availability of a new model of its popular Newport/Coax printer adapter for interfacing HP LaserJet printers to IBM mainframe systems.

The Newport III/Coax supports the new LaserJet III and IIID printers as well as the popular series II and IID printers. It contains all the operational features of its predecessor, the Newport/Coax, with the additional functionality of printer-sharing between the host and a PC.

Newport III dynamically switches between host and PC without the need for operator intervention, making it a very efficient and cost-effective solution for mainframe shops.

The dynamic printer-sharing capability is enabled with the addition of a DB9 serial connector on the back plate of the Newport III. With a serial connection to a PC in place, the user can download configurations directly to the adapter card by using the menu-driven Configurator software provided with the unit.

Users and systems programmers can also configure Newport III easily from a host terminal or from an IBM PC.

Both Newport III/Coax and Newport/Coax plug directly into the optional I/O slot of the HP LaserJet and enable host-sourced printouts immediately after installation without any programmer setup or configuration required.

Users can access the entire range of the LaserJet's functional capabilities (e.g. graphics, multiple fonts/formats, page orientation) by invoking a pseudo-transparency feature that bypasses the limitations imposed by the IBM system.

The Newport does not require an external power supply. It includes built-in printer drivers for HP landscape and portrait modes, user-defined configuration presets for different print formats, third-party software support for special graphics applications and extensive built-in diagnostics to make configuring and troubleshooting easy.

Andrew supports the Newport III/Coax with a one-year limited warranty and with optional extended warranty packages. To receive literature or additional information, call Andrew at 800/733-0331.

Andrew, with headquarters in Orland Park, Ill., is a $350 million worldwide supplier of communications products and systems.

TMSFAX is a software package that manipulates bi-tonal raster images. Images are compressed, decompressed, scaled, and rotated purely in software and at speeds that rival, and often exceed hardware-based designs. This all-software solution replaces the need for additional hardware peripherals in most image management systems. The latest version of TMSFAX is called TMSFAX/SPARC.

''TMSFAX/SPARC offers parallel functionality with our latest release of TMSFAX for Microsoft Windows 3.0,'' said Maxwell Steinhardt, TMS vice president of sales. ''This includes the ability to handle up to 'H' size (12 ft. by 8 ft.) drawings at 300 d.p.i., tiling capabilities that are CALS compliant, and a mirrored image functionality.''

Steinhardt added that the TMSFAX/SPARC toolkit also includes a sample application called FaxView. ''FaxView allows the developer to see just how the TMSFAX software can be implemented into their own application and can be used as a sample code reference. In the case of the TMSFAX/SPARC software, FaxView operates under the X-Windows environment. This provides our developers a standard interface for their application development.''

Demand for the software is increasing as end users are asking developers and TMS to include the TMSFAX product in other software applications. ''TMSFAX is rapidly becoming the image management tool of choice,'' said TMS senior vice president Ashok Mathur, ''because the end user wants image management without investing in a hardware card or more RAM. TMS has signed over 100 developers interested in using the software, and is signing new developer contracts at one to two per week.''

TMS has been an active player in the information industry since 1981 and has a number of industry firsts to its credit. It was the first organization to place a database on an optical disc and demonstrate it out of a laboratory (COMDEX, 1982), the first to demonstrate a hypertext retrieval product on a real database (a product called RESEARCH) and the first to offer a generally available file system for CD-ROM.

It was also the first to offer a pure software solution to image compression and decompression problems with TMSFAX.

STILLWATER, OK (SEPT. 21) BUSINESS WIRE - TMS Inc., the industry technology leader in electronic publishing and image management software, has announced the release of a flexible pricing schedule for its TMSFAX image compression/decompression software.

TMSFAX is a software package that manipulates bi-tonal raster images. Images are compressed, decompressed, scaled, and rotated purely in software and at speeds that rival, and often exceed hardware-based designs. This all-software solution replaces the need for additional hardware peripherals in most image management systems. The new pricing schedule announced is designed to allow TMS's developer partner/customers to use TMSFAX without a large up-front commitment.

Demand for the software is increasing as end users are asking developers and TMS to include the TMSFAX product in other software applications. ''TMSFAX is rapidly becoming the image management tool of choice,'' said TMS senior vice president Ashok Mathur, ''because the end user wants image management without investing in a hardware card or more RAM. TMS has signed over 100 developers interested in using the software, and is signing new developer contracts at one to two per week.''

Mathur added, ''TMSFAX is fast, fully capable, and can present and manage a variety of image formats on any PC running MS-DOS 2.0 or higher. TMSFAX also operates under a variety of other environments including Microsoft Windows 2.x and 3.x, UNIX (X-Windows), OS/2 (Presentation Manager), Macintosh and others. We are hearing from our developers that TMSFAX is increasingly identified and asked for by name by corporate buyers.''

''The company strategy is to support the developer at a minimum of risk and a maximum of benefit,'' commented sales Vice President Maxwell Steinhardt. ''The development community can use this software-only approach for image management, and we intend to prove to them that TMS is a company that they will want to work with.''

Three pricing levels, indexed to unit volume, are provided under the new TMS schedule. The lowest price level has minimum volume of 25 units, with the price per unit at $100, and a support fee of $2,500. The second price level minimum quantity is set at 100 units with the price at $100/unit (no other fees required).

Third level pricing minimum volume is 200 units, with the price per unit at $85 (no other fees required). Higher volume commitments will receive alternative price discounts.

''We recognize the developer's need to minimize the up-front investment," said Steinhardt, ''but as their sales grow they will want to upgrade to the schedule that provides volume benefits. TMS is ready, willing and able to respond to developer - and large end-user - needs.''

TMS has been an active player in the information industry since 1981 and has a number of industry firsts to its credit. It was the first organization to place a database on an optical disc and demonstrate it out of a laboratory (COMDEX, 1982), the first to demonstrate a hypertext retrieval product on a real database (a product called RESEARCH) and the first to offer a generally available file system for CD-ROM.

It was also the first to offer a pure software solution to image compression and decompression problems with TMSFAX.

NORWOOD, MA (SEPT. 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Phoenix Technologies Ltd.

(NASDAQ:PTEC) Friday announced that it expects to report a loss for its fiscal fourth quarter, ending Sept. 30, 1990.

Phoenix also announced a series of restructuring and operational changes designed to enable the company to return to profitability in fiscal 1991 if it meets its plan.

Revenues for the fourth quarter are expected to be approximately $10 million, as compared to $4.5 million for the fourth quarter of fiscal 1989. Revenues are forecasted to increase for the 4th consecutive quarter, from $9.3 million for the third quarter of fiscal 1990.

Phoenix expects to report a loss of approximately $2 million before restructuring charges, bad debts, and taxes, and a loss after restructuring charges, bad debts and taxes of approximately $8.5 million. The restructuring charges consist principally of the writeoff of fixed assets and related facilities costs and, to a lesser extent, the writeoff of capital software and costs associated with personnel reallocations.

Rob Langer, the company's chief financial officer explained the reasons for the restructuring: ''In preparing our operating plan for fiscal '91, we have reassessed the level of hardware and software assets that we are likely to require over the next few years. Any excess to the required levels will be written off in the current quarter.

''Additionally, the planning process has identified areas in which we can be more efficient and areas in which we should be redeploying our existing headcount; any costs associated with this realignment will also recognized in the current quarter. Our cash position is strong with a cash balance still above $10 million, and the fourth quarter should once again be cash positive for the company. The changes we are implementing now are designed to make the company a more efficient organization and to enable it to return to profitability during the coming year.''

''The business plan for fiscal '91 reflects my personal assessment of Phoenix's business and operational procedures and my strategy for getting Phoenix back to profitability,'' said Ron Fisher, chief executive officer and president.

''Our 1991 fiscal plan calls for cash being at or above the $10 million level for each quarter of fiscal 1991. In addition, if the company meets its plan, it will achieve profitablity before the end of fiscal 1991.

''The 1991 plan is based on a number of precepts:

-- Phoenix is ideally positioned to take advantage of the proliferation of technologies and standards in the PC and laser printer markets, both by virtue of its superior compatibility products and its worldwide relationships with leading system vendors.

-- we have eliminated redundant positions, reduced non-payroll operating expenses, and allocated increased resources to high growth sectors of our markets, such as notebooks, PC printer controllers and graphics-oriented PCs.

-- we are satisfied with our product strategy. Demand for our compatibility software and services continues to grow in a market overwhelmed by a multiplicity of advanced technologies and competing standards. Our revenue growth in each of the last four quarters supports this view.

''Our fiscal '91 plan focuses on more efficient execution of engineering programs, more responsive customer service and more aggressive cost containment. The changes we are putting into place optimize operations and establish accountability at every level of Phoenix's organization. The result will be felt by our customers immediately in increased quality, responsive service and innovative product development; and, we believe, will be reflected by a return to profitability.''

Phoenix Technologies Ltd. designs, develops and markets systems products for manufacturers of personal computers and laser printers. Its products enable OEMs to offer their customers computers and printers that are compatible with industry standards.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 24) COMTEX - The 8-K report filed at the SEC shows ECI Environmental Inc.(TICKER: ECI) has been served with a complaint charging violation of SS 10 (b) and 20 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and Rule 10b-5 of the Securities Exchange Commission.

The complaint also charges common law counts of fraud and negligent misrepresentation, arising from an alleged failure to disclose material information about ECI's financial results and business prospects since the company's initial public offering in November, 1989.

The suit was filed by Jeffery Stark in the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of California, and seeks to represent the class of persons who purchased the company's common stock during the period Nov. 21, 1989 through July 16, 1990.

The suit also names as defendants Richard G. Cleveland, Kurt P. Zimmerman, Michael Christie and Daniel J. Doud, officers and directors of ECI.

ECI reports the company and its management intend to vigorously defend against the lawsuit, which they believe to be without merit.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 24) COMTEX - The 8-K report filed at the SEC shows Todd Shipyards Corp.(TICKER: TOD) on Sept. 13, 1990, filed a disclosure statement regarding the company's amended plan of reorganization.

The 8-K filing notes that although the management of Todd Shipyards believes that the approximately $26.6 million of working capital to be available to Todd Shipyards under the reorganization plan will be sufficient for Todd Shipyards' working capital needs, requirements are subject to signficant factors outside the control of the company and there can, therefore, be no assurance that such working capital will be sufficient.

In the event that the amount of working capital available to Todd Shipyards is insufficient to meet its working capital needs, such event would have a material adverse effect on the company.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 21) - British Defense Secretary Tom King met here Friday with President George Bush and said the issue of forming a unified command for allied forces confronting Iraq in the Gulf has yet to be resolved.

The matter of command structure for the allied forces "has not been resolved yet," Mr. King said in a television interview prior to his meeting at the White Huse with Mr. Bush and national security advisor Brent Scowcroft.

White House spokesman Roman Popadiuk would say only that the men "discussed developments in the ongoing situation in the Gulf," and Mr. Bush "expressed his deep appreciation" for Britain's decision to send military forces to the Gulf.

On Thursday, Mr. King also met with Defense Secretary Dick Cheney.

In discussing delays in establishing a command structure in the Gulf, Mr. King indicated that there was no problem in possibly placing British forces under a U.S. commander.

There is "nothing new about that. We've had 40 years of NATO together and that's got a supreme commander who's American," he said.

He hinted instead that there were problems concerning the role of Saudi Arabia.

"I'm not sure everybody understands that the Saudis, as the host country, are in a very important position," he said.

Earlier this month, the Pentagon dismissed rumors of there being any friction between General Norman Schwarzkopf, commander of the U.S. forces in the Gulf, and Saudi General Khaled ben Sultan.

The U.S. general reportedly demanded autonomous command after he was told Saudi Arabia would object to having its territory used to attack Iraq.

Despite U.S. insistance later that Saudi-U.S. military cooperation was good, observers pointed out that it was still unclear who would give the orders in case war broke out.

"It's quite a complex situation," Mr. King said. "It works alright on the ground at the moment, but we've got to make sure that we really tie it together in a way that it will stand the strain of all these much bigger numbers involved."

Regarding air and naval forces in the Gulf, Mr. King said, "there is a plan ... they know how to coordinate their actions."

AMMAN (SEPT. 21) - Eleven Iraqi diplomats expelled from France arrived here late Friday from Paris and were to proceed immediately to Baghdad, informed sources said.

The diplomats, whose expulsion was announced last week by French authorities, were accompanied by their families. They declined to speak to the press.

France decided to send home the Iraqi military attache, his two assistants, some identified intelligence officers and 26 non-commissioned officers in training there after Iraqi troops stormed through the French ambassador's residence in Iraqi-occupied Kuwait.

On Friday, Iraq ordered the tit-for-tat expulsion of 11 French embassy staffers, including the military attache who was detained by Iraqi troops earlier this month in the invasion of the French embassy.

Iraq Friday also ordered the expulsion of the West German, Italian, Spanish and Egyptian military attaches in Baghdad.

After Iraq invaded Kuwait on August 2 and annexed the country six days later, the Iraqi authorities decreed on August 24 that all foreign diplomatic missions in the country no longer had diplomatic status and that their employees would be treated like ordinary foreign citizens with no immunity.

He admitted that between 1st October 1987 and the 10th of this month, when he was arrested, he was a member of the illegal underground movement, it said.

LE LUC, France (SEPT. 21) - Three major forest fires raged in southeastern France Friday, destroying several thousand acres of woodland and at least 15 houses and forcing the evacuation of others.

More than 1500 firemen and soldiers using 350 vehicles and 14 aircraft were battling the blazes.

The worst of the three fires broke out Friday at Les Arcs, where it destroyed woods of oak, chestnut and pine.

Earlier in the day, one broke out at Montaroux, 15 kilometres (11 miles) from the city of Grasse, and another at La Mole, spreading rapidly toward Cavalaire across the bay from St. Tropez.

The aircraft had to be called off the job at nightfall as the firefighters battled to keep the flames from getting a grip on urban areas, and firefighters were due to arrive from adjoining regions.

ACCRA (SEPT 21) - Ghanaian Lieutenant General Arnold Quainoo remains the overall commander of the West African peaceeping force in Liberia, made up of contingents from Ghana, Nigeria, Sierra Leone, The Gambia and Guinea, according to reports Friday night from Lagos.

The reports quoted a Nigerian government spokesman as saying ''Quainoo has neither resigned nor been sacked.''

They said ground operations would be run by Nigeria's Joshua Dogonyaro, who had been named in earlier reports from Lagos as replacing Quainoo.

Sources in Accra confirmed earlier Friday that Quainoo had left for Monrovia Thursday to continue with his duties after talks with leaders of those countries contributing troops to his force.

The sources said Dogonyaro had been appointed to join the command of the force but stressed that Quainoo was still the overall head. They added that other appointments from various countries contributing to the force are to follow.

There are said to be some 1,500 more troops waiting in Sierra Leone to move into Liberia to enforce a ceasefire, in addition to 4,000 already in Liberia.

The Ghanaian government Friday night said no country had the right to take unilateral decisions regarding the force in view of its multi-national nature.

WARSAW (SEPT 22) - Poland's parliament on Friday voted to hold presidential elections by the end of the year.

Parliament also agreed in the same resolution that the lower and upper houses would vote their dissolution by the end of March with a view to organizing new legislative elections.

The move came after President Wojciech Jaruzelski announced Wednesday that he would resign as soon as a new head of state could be elected.

General Jaruzelski was elected July 1989 to a six-year term.

Solidarity Union leader Lech Walesa announced on Monday he was running for president. Other potential candidates, such as Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, have yet to declare their intentions.

The current lower house of parliament was elected in June 1989 for four years, in a partially open vote which gave 65 per cent of the seats to the then ruling communist party and its allies. The upper house, the result of free elections, is composed nearly entirely of Solidarity members.

In its resolution Friday, adopted by 252 votes for, with 17 against and 50 abstaining, parliament voted to shorten the terms of both the executive and the legislature after taking into account the "political changes Poland has undergone" since they were elected.

The first East European country to be headed by a non-communist government, Poland has yet to have a freely elected parliament or president.

Many Poles had been calling for the resignation of Gen. Jaruzelski, whose 1981 declaration of martial law had brought an abrupt halt to the liberalization of Poland and the development of a free union movement under communism.

ACCRA (SEPT 22) - Ghana's foreign ministry denied on Friday that General Arnold Quainoo, the Ghanaian commander of the five-nation West African peacekeeping force in Liberia, had been replaced by a Nigerian.

In a statement the ministry said Gen. Quainoo, in a recent round of consultations with Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) Chairman Dawda Jawara of the Gambia and heads of state of contributing countries, recommended that Nigeria appoint a field commander to strengthen the command structure of the Liberian intervention force.

The statement said Gen. Quainoo's recommendations had been accepted by ECOWAS and that Nigeria had then appointed a field commander.

A Nigerian government spokesman on Thursday said Gen. Quainoo was being replaced as head of the ECOWAS monitoring force known as ECOMOG by Nigerian General Joshua Dogonyaro.

The Ghanaian foreign ministry said appointments from other countries participating in ECOMOG would "follow in due course in light of the augmented troop numbers."

The foreign ministry statement said no country had the right to take unilateral decisions about ECOMOG because of the multinational nature of the force. It said Gen. Quainoo remained at his post.

Meanwhile, in Lagos, several unions and human rights associations, in a joint appeal published Friday, called for the Nigerian armed forces to withdraw from the intervention force.

The communique said the situation in Liberia "does not call for a military solution" and asked the Nigerian government to send humanitarian aid instead of troops to Liberia.

BRASILIA (SEPT 21) - Brazil sold 60 million dollars worth of weaponry to Saudi Arabia while difficult negotiations were underway to win the release of 300 Brazilian technicians trapped in Iraq, officials said here Friday.

Foreign Minister Francisco Rezek was apparently taken aback by the timing of the weapons sales that were announced in Riyadh while negotiations for the Brazilians' release were going on in Baghdad.

"This is the moment to avoid transactions of this type," said Mr. Rezek, who expressed surprise and was visibly embarrassed by the announcement of the weapons sales.

He said Saudi Arabia "was considered by the West as a stabilizing factor in the Middle East, and without belligerent tendencies."

Brazilian diplomats were negotiating Thursday in Baghdad to evacuate some 300 Brazilian technicians working in the country since before the August 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

Globo television reported here Thursday that an agreement had been struck for the departure of Brazilian workers for Mendes Junior public works company, Volkswagen-Brasil automobile, Maxion farming equipment manufacturer and HBA military engineers.

They were to be flown out of the country Saturday by Iraqi Airways at a cost of 320,000 dollars paid by Brazil, officials said.

Iraq had earlier refused to let them leave the country, arguing that they had not fulfilled the terms of their contracts.

But Brazilian firms insisted that they could not press ahead with the work because financing and supplies had been stopped by the international trade embargo against Iraq.

The Iraqi Embassy here announced Friday that "in the name of friendship" between the two countries the technicians were free to leave or travel inside Iraq.

Meanwhile, witnesses said the privately-owned weapons company Avibras had begun moving "Astros 2" missile batteries from its plant in Sao Paulo state to the nearby Santos port.

From there, the missiles were to be shipped to Saudi Arabia.

The sale of the 10,000 missiles -- 127, 180 and 300 millimeter projectiles in so-called "Stalin organ" battery configuration -- was announced in Riyadh.

SYDNEY (SEPT. 21) - Australia's largest company, Broken Hill Proprietary Co. Ltd. (BHP), announced Friday a 20 percent jump in net profits to 329.6 million dollars (272 million U.S.) in the three months to Aug. 31, despite a poor steel performance.

After abnormal gains, largely from the sale in June of a 30 percent stake in Woodside Petroleum, the diversified mining, petroleum and steel producer posted a 60 percent profit surge to 435 million dollars (359 million U.S.).

Gross operating profit for the period was up 17 percent to 506.8 million dollars (417.7 million U.S.).

The company said higher petrol and iron ore prices and sales boosted net profit, which compared with 275.2 million dollars (227 million U.S.) in the previous quarter.

The result was struck on a 25.4 percent increase in revenue to 4.3 billion dollars (3.5 billion U.S.).

BHP said the steel group's profit slid 22 percent to 114.8 million dollars (94.6 million U.S.) as domestic sales slumped and raw material and other costs rose.

The mineral arm's profit of 131.2 million dollars (108 million U.S.) was in line with the previous result, it said.

The petroleum division's bottom line soared 280 percent to 231.9 million dollars (191 million U.S.) largely because of the 114 million dollar (94 million U.S.) windfall from the sale of 200 million Woodside shares.

The corporate division notched up a 80 percent rise to 72.4 million dollars (60 million U.S.) largely due to assets sales and improved treasury operations.

SYDNEY (SEPT. 21) - Ansett Airlines of Australia has sliced 163 Australian dollars (134 U.S.) off return fares between Sydney and Melbourne, the country's most popular flight, the company announced Friday.

Ansett General Manager Graeme McMahon said in a statement that the off peak return fare on 28 specific flights would be 245 dollars (202 U.S.) compared to the normal 408 dollars (336 U.S.) from October 1.

Cuts in domestic airfares had been anticipated ahead of deregulation of the airways on November 1.

MANILA (SEPT. 21) - A massive increase in rice production is needed over the next 30 years to avert potential famine, the International Rice Research Institute (IRRI) said in an annual report issued here Friday.

The spread of urban centers, lack of new technological breakthroughs on crop yields and population growth, which results in up to 100 million new rice consumers each year, were at the root of the problem, the Philippine-based IRRI said.

"In 30 years, the earth will be home to eight billion people. More than half -- 4.3 billion, almost as many as inhabit the earth today -- will be rice consumers," the report said.

"Feeding them will require a massive increase in global rice production, from today's 470 million tons to 760 million tons" which even if it could be achieved "will merely maintain current nutrition levels which are already inadquate for hundreds of millions of people," it added.

IRRI said surpluses and low market prices in the late 1980's gave researchers a "false impression that the world's rice problems have been solved. They forgot just how precarious the line is between sufficient rice and potential famine."

The institute stressed that overall contraction of the world economy, lack of foreign exchange in many debt-ridden countries and strong agricultural protectionism in some industrialized countries accounted for depressed prices between 1982 and 1987 as much as productivity gains.

At the close of the decade, rice production growth in Asia, the world's main rice growing and consuming region, "once more fell behind population-driven growth in demand" and rice stocks fell to 13 per cent of consumption, the lowest ratio since the world food crisis in the early 1970's.

Two consecutive poor harvests have since driven world prices up and newly self-sufficient India, Indonesia and the Philippines had again began to import rice, illustrating the "narrow margin between self-sufficiency and potential famine in most of monsoon Asia,", it added.

"Prospects for a rapid recovery of production are dim," it added.

IRRI said new major technological finds that would ensure abundant rice supplies for the next decade were "yet to be found" and "global as well as Asian shortfalls in rice production relative to demand" were likely to raise world prices "into the 21st century."

IRRI, based in Los Banos town south of Manila, is an autonomous, non-profit agricultural research and training center set up in 1960 to help raise total food production from rice-based farming systems in developing countries.

SINGAPORE (SEPT. 21) - The petrochemical industry is expected to face weakening demand worldwide in the next two years even as East Asian countries vie to become major producers, analysts said here.

In a paper delivered at the Petrochem '90 conference here Thursday, Joseph Leonard, vice-president of Chem Systems, cautioned that the international market could become swamped by petrochemical products from Asia.

Petrochemicals is one of the star sectors in the Singapore economy while Malaysia and Thailand are also developing their own industry.

Lee Suan Hiang, of Singapore's investment promotion body, the Economic Development Board (EDB), echoed concerns that over-capacity could lead to an industry downturn, like it did in the early 1980's.

Mr. Leonard said that between 1992 and 1995, plants in Southeast Asia, South Korea, Taiwan and China would add nearly five million tonnes of additional ethylene capacity and these new products would be entering a saturated market in the West.

"A flood of petrochemical imports from the East Asian region into the already over-supplied markets of the United States and Western Europe could have a devastating impact on petrochemical pricing and profitability," Mr. Leonard said.

He said a confrontation loomed between Asia and the West which "should best be avoided through regional self-discipline in petrochemical project planning since no one will win."

Mr. Leonard called for more alliances between producers in Asia and partners who have more experience in marketing and access to global markets.

The two-day Petrochem '90 conference, organised by Times Conferences and supported by the EDB, wound up here Friday with technical presentations.

TOKYO (SEPT. 21) - Rising crude oil prices triggered by the Gulf crisis are expected to curb Japan's gross national product (GNP) growth rate, Economic Planning Agency (EPA) director-general Hideyuki Aizawa said Friday.

If the crisis is extended, the GNP growth would be trimmed by 0.2 percent in the first year and 0.3 percent in the second year, Aizawa warned at a meeting of cabinet ministers.

The estimates have been made based upon the Epa's world economic model assuming the crude oil price of 25 dollars a barrel against 18 dollars before Iraq's invasion of Kuwait in early August, he said.

The Epa announced Japan's economic expansion has entered the 46th consecutive month in September, with adverse effects of higher commodity prices and interest rates due ot the Gulf crisis yet to be reflected in domestic prices and corporate capital investment.

Japan's GNP grew by a real 0.9 percent during the April-June period over the previous quarter. It put the GNP 7.5 percent higher than over the April-June 1989 period.

SINGAPORE (SEPT. 21) - West German carrier Lufthansa has been given permission to operate the first scheduled air service between Singapore and Vietnam, which is aimed at European business travellers.

Lufthansa's General Manager Klaus-Peter Maier was quoted by newspapers reports Friday as saying that the Civil Aviation Authority of Singapore (CAAS) gave the approval for the Singapore to Ho Chi Minh City service on Tuesday, two weeks after the airline submitted its application.

The approval means that Lufthansa has full rights to drop off and pick up passengers and cargo in Singapore for its flight to Vietnam.

The inaugural flight between the two countries is scheduled for October 30.

Mr. Maier said that the service was aimed at business travellers from Europe and Lufthansa believed that it was also able to tap the rising number of Asian businessmen visiting the communist country.

He added that the number of tourists to Vietnam was also expected to rise.

Singapore does not encourage direct investment in Vietnam which is attracting droves of businessmen from around the world in the last two years due to its very liberal investment laws.

For the first eight months of 1990, just over 2.3 million new road vehicles were registered, up 6.8 percent over the same period last year. Private car registrations accounted for about two million, up six percent, the office said.

CARACAS (SEPT. 21) - Venezuela's chamber of deputies has overwhelmingly approved a bill authorizing the renegotiation of the country's 20.6 billion dollar debt with commercial banks.

The government of President Carlos Andres Perez worked out agreements with more than 400 creditor banks to restructure the debt so as to reduce principal by 20 percent and interest payments by half.

The banks were given a list of five options: to reduce the principal; to reduce interest temporarily or permanently; to repurchase the debt at secondary market prices; or new credits in the form of fresh money.

The bill approved Thursday authorizes the president to issue new securities, buy zero coupon U.S. Treasury bonds to guarantee interest payments, and borrow from the International Monetary Fund and World Bank to buy the Treasury bonds.

Voting for the bill were the three major parties -- the ruling Democratic Action Party, the Social Christian party COPEI and the leftist Movement Toward Socialism as well as two small rightits parties aligned with the government.

The bill passed with the support of 90 percent of the 201 member chamber and was assured passage by the Senate Friday.

Mr. Perez, in a radio address, said "this is not a solution to the debt problem, nor the panacea of all our problems, but it is a great relief and we have a clear panorama."

NICOSIA (SEPT. 21) - Iraq charged Friday that two planes coming from Saudi Arabia had violated its airspace.

A military spokesman, quoted by the Iraqi News Agency (INA) monitored here, said the incident occurred Thursday over western Iraq, near an area where the borders of Jordan, Saudi Arabia and Iraq intersect.

He did not identify the aircraft.

"Two planes coming from Saudi Arabia Thursday violated Iraqi airspace in an area close to the intersection of the Jordanian, Iraqi and Saudi borders," the spokesman said.

He said the incident occurred at 12.14 p.m. (0814 GMT).

The planes penetrated between seven and 10 kilometers (four to six miles) into Iraq at a height of 9,500 meters (31,350 feet) and a speed of more than 1,000 kilometers (600 miles) an hour, the spokesman said.

MOSCOW (SEPT. 21) - The Soviet government will resign immediately if parliament adopts a radical reform program drawn up by academician Abel Aganbeguian, deputy premier responsible for economic reform Leonid Abalkin said here Friday.

"The government will resign immediately, (Prime Minister Nikolai) Ryzhkov first and me too, if the Aganbeguian program is adopted today," Mr. Abalkin told journalists in the corridors of the Soviet parliament.

"The government is made up of serious and professional people who do not want to take part in this adventure."

The Soviet parliament on Friday entered the final phase of discussions on sweeping economic reform as representatives of commissions studying rival schemes presented their findings.

Parliament could take a vote Friday on the program to be adopted, or simply adopt some urgent measures.

It was considered most likely to adopt in principle a reform program for the passage to a market economy, with parliament later going through the program and voting on it clause by clause.

Mr. Abalkin said that the Aganbeguian plan, which basically follows the lines of a radical reform program drawn up by economist Stanislav Shatalin and has the support of President Mikhail Gorbachev, would have "tragic consequences."

"They will have to find other people, because the government refuses to implement this program," Mr. Abalkin added.

The Shatalin plan has already been adopted in principle by the parliament of the Russian Federation, the largest Soviet republic headed by radical reformer Boris Yeltsin.

Mr. Ryzhkov, whose government has put forward a more conservative reform plan and whose ideas are virtually ignored in the Aganbeguian formula, has already made it clear he could step down if parliament adopted a program opposed by the government and which it felt unable to implement.

Mr. Shatalin told reporters on the sidelines of Friday's parliamentary session that he was not a possible candidate for the premiership if it fell vacant, because of his poor health.

"I am very seriously ill, and it is not possible that I should be named prime minister," he said, but added that he was "ready to help" implement his reform program. There have been persistent rumours that he is suffering from cancer.

The president of the commission on economic reform, Valentin Vologjin, told deputies that most of the parliamentary commissions and committees were in favour of taking a vote on the Aganbeguian plan.

But Mr. Vologjin said that the commissions were nonetheless recommending that some elements of the less radical reform proposals put forward by the government be added.

The head of the commission on prices and social policy, Nikolai Gritsenko, suggested that parliament should take the interim solution of adopting emergency measures now and then putting the whole reform package to the people.

One measure he advocated was the creation of a second currency, modelled on the Chernovetz, a gold-based currency introduced in the 1920's which unlike the Soviet ruble was convertible.

LONDON (SEPT. 21) - A rare American songbird, the yellow-throated vireo, was spotted Friday in southwestern England after it was blown off course across the Atlantic, marking the first reported sighting of the bird ever in Europe, bird watchers said.

The five-inch bird was the latest rare species to be spotted by "twitchers," or bird watchers, in Britain in the past month after strong autumn gales disrupted their normal migration patterns.

Other uncommon birds seen in Britain in the past several weeks include an ancient murrelet, an Asiatic long-toed stint, three long-tailed skuas and a pectoral sandpiper.

HONG KONG (SEPT. 21) - Top local property label Hongkong Land Holdings Ltd. said Friday its after-tax profits in the six months to June rose 32 percent from a year earlier to about 130 million U.S. dollars.

The board recommended an interim dividend of 2.75 U.S. cents per share, up 34 percent from last year's corresponding payment, a Land statement said.

Locally listed Land, tagged the British colony's biggest landlord, has its property portfolio clustered in the core local business district of Central.

Chairman Simon Keswick reported a near-full tenancy for its office and retail spaces despite a slight downturn in local rental levels amid a general business doldrums in place since the June 4 Beijing massacre last year.

The local Jardine group subsidiary said a revaluation of its investment properties showed an aggregate figure of 5.65 billion U.S. dollars, down about five percent from what they were estimated to be worth at the end of 1989.

Land, also listed on the Luxembourg Stock Exchange, was seeking to go public on the London bourse.

It is 33 percent owned by Jardine Strategic Holdings Ltd., the investment vehicle of the colony's oldest British trading house, the Jardine group.

AMMAN (SEPT. 21) - Saudi Arabia has cut off its supply of oil to Jordan without advance warning in apparent retribution for Amman's stand in the Gulf crisis, official sources confirmed Friday.

They said that Saudi Arabia stopped pumping oil through the Trans Arabian Pipeline (Tapline) Thursday, ending shipments running at a rate of 30,000 barrels a day, which amount to half Jordan's needs.

Saudi Arabia started supplying Jordan with crude oil last month to offset a reduction of oil imports from Iraq in line with U.N. sanctions.

The sources said Jordan had already reduced its oil imports from Iraq from 90 percnet of its needs to 40 percnet because they were being replaced by Saudi supplies.

"We were very surprised by the Saudi measure," a Jordanian official said. "It amounts to an embargo on Jordan, as if we are supposed to be punished alongside Iraq."

The official said the Saudis cut their oil supplies "because they say that we were late on the payment of 48 million dollars for oil shipments to Jordan."

"This is only an excuse and a pretext for their action," the official asserted.

He said that Riyadh was also taking measures against thousands of Jordanians working in the Gulf. Many have been expelled or refused reentry to the kingdom since the August 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

The official confirmed the expulsion of "several members of Jordanian diplomatic staff" in Riyadh and Qatar and hundreds of Jordanians working in the Gulf.

MANILA (SEPT. 21) - British firm General Electric Plessey Telecommunications (GPT) has been contracted to provide an international gateway switch for Digitel, a recently-formed Philippine telephone firm, officials of both firms announced here Friday.

Eastern Telecoms, the sister company of Digitel, has acquired GPT's System X switch to serve as its international electronic gateway when it starts operations in November, providing both local and international telephone services.

GPT and Eastern Telecoms officials would not say how much the System X cost but said the initial phase of operations in Bulacan province outside Manila would cost about four million dollars, including the price of the switching system.

Digitel and Eastern Telecoms, which are both 40 per cent owned by the Hong Kong-based Cable and Wireless, acquired government permits last year to operate an international telephone service in parts of this country.

This effectively ended the monopoly that the Philippine Long Distance and Telephone (PLDT) Company had on long-distance telephone services in this country.

FRANKFURT (SEPT. 21) - The West German M3 money supply rose by only 4.5 percent in August on a seasonally adjusted basis, the Bundesbank reported on Friday.

This was within the range of four percent to six percent which the central bank has set as a target for the M3 aggregate this year.

The figure took account of the money supply in West Germany alone, and did not cover East Germany where the Deutschemark was introduced as the official currency on July 1.

The Bundesbank had hoped to publish pan-German figures for August, but this proved impossible because "statistical information on East Germany was not yet available", the bank said, adding that it was unable to give a date.

Monetary flows developed rapidly, mainly from West Germany to East Germany, after monetary union in July. The bank said that this should increase the money supply in West Germany and reduce the supply in East Germany, but this would not become clear until statistics on East Germany became available.

The definitive M3 money supply figure for July for West Germany was reported at 3.8 percent.

MANILA (SEPT. 21) - The Philippines government on Friday announced a 30 percent increase in domestic oil prices and warned that it would crack down on groups who sought to exploit the situation for destabilization purposes.

The average across-the-board increase is 1.42 pesos (5.7 U.S. cents) per liter giving an average new price of 5.85 pesos (22.7 cents) per liter, the government's Energy Regulatory Board said.

The country's two biggest trade unions have threatened to launch massive protests including a nationwide strike if the government implements any oil price increase.

The two latest and bloodiest coup attempts by military rebels against President Corazon Aquino were launched shortly after the government announced oil price hikes in December 1989 and August 1987.

The defense department said it had mobilized anti-riot teams to prevent disorders arising from the impending mass protests.

"One thing that must be understood by everyone is the fact that oil prices have increased and present prices were set when oil prices were less than 15 dollars a barrel. The present price is now 33 dollars," Mrs. Aquino said Friday.

She said the government could not afford to subsidize the difference, and that Filipinos must conserve energy.

LONDON (SEPT. 21) - British gross domestic product (GDP) rose by 0.3 percent in real terms in the second quarter over the first quarter, official provisional seasonally adjusted figures showed on Friday.

Analysts had forecast growth of 0.8 percent. Excluding the energy sector, GDP rose by 0.2 percent, the figures showed.

But for the previous 12 months growth was 2.3 percent compared with 1.6 percent at the end of the first quarter.

A month ago, the central statistical office, which published the figures, had said that on the basis of output, GDP in the second quarter was 0.9 percent.

NEW DELHI (SEPT. 21) - The value of trade between India and Japan has almost doubled in the past five years, reaching 3.2 billion dollars with the balance slightly favouring Japan, the Indian government said Friday.

The announcement said however that the 1989-90 financial year trade deficit of 50 million dollars was the lowest yet with Japan, India's third largest trading partner after the United States and the Soviet Union.

Bilateral trade jumped from 1.7 billion dollars in 1985-1986 to 3.2 billion in 1989-90, with India's exports shooting up by 120 percent from 700 million in 1985-86 to 1.6 billion in 1989-90.

Imports from Japan rose from one billion dollars to just more than 1.6 billion in the same period, the announcement said.

Iron ore, shrimps and diamonds accounted for nearly 70 percent of Japanese imports from India, while Indian imports of machinery and transport equipment were the chief cause of the adverse balance which peaked at 710 million dollars in 1986-87, it added.

India, by diversifying into manufactured goods such as tools, tea, coffee, spices, cashews, chemicals, pharmaceuticals and textiles, aims to diversify its export basket to Japan and further reduce its deficit, the report said.

Japan represents 12 percent of India's total trade while New Delhi accounts for only one percent of Tokyo's global trade.

GENEVA (SEPT. 21) - The International Organization for Migration (IOM) said Friday it hoped to organize airlifts from Baghdad for Pakistanis and Filipinos trying to leave Kuwait and Iraq.

A spokesman for the Geneva-based independent humanitarian organization said the governments of Pakistan and the Philippines had asked the IOM for help to evacuate its nationals stranded due to the Gulf crisis.

Though the United Nations Security Council on Friday was expected to extend the embargo against Iraq and Kuwait to air traffic, humanitarian flights were likely to be excluded from this, according to informed sources here.

They said India had already obtained permission from Baghdad authorities to fly out Indian nationals wanting to leave Iraq.

The IOM spokesman said his organization had planned about 99 flights from Jordan to repatriate some 29,000 nationals from the six countries of Bangladesh, Egypt, India, Pakistan, Philippines, and Sri Lanka.

Another IOM airlift out of Turkey would end on Saturday since no more refugees seeking to flee the tension were arriving at the Iraqi-Turkish border, the IOM spokesman said.

CAIRO (SEPT. 21) - Iraq Friday ordered the expulsion of the Egyptian military attache in Baghdad, two counsellors at the Egyptian Embassy and several members of the embassy staff, official Egyptian radio said.

The radio said the Egyptian ambassador in Baghdad was summoned to the Foreign Ministry to receive the expulsion order.

The diplomats and staff have seven days to leave Iraq, it said.

The radio did not specify the number of embassy staff who were asked to leave but said they all work in the military attache's office.

Iraq announced similar expulsion orders Friday against embassy staff from four European countries -- Britain, France, Italy and Spain -- and restricted the movement of Western diplomats remaining in Baghdad.

The moves against Britain, France and Italy were seen as reprisals for their decisions over the weekend to expel Iraqi diplomats. Spain said Friday it was now considering a tit-for-tat expulsion after the Iraqi move.

Egypt had not expelled any Iraqi diplomats or embassy staff since the Gulf crisis began August 2, but semi-official sources here said the Iraqi military attache here left the country with his family a few days ago of his own will.

FREETOWN (SEPT. 21) - The West African peacekeeping force has had 20 soldiers killed in its first month in Liberia and several dozen wounded, medical and diplomatic sources said here Friday.

There was no official confirmation of their estimates, which also shed no light on how the casualties were distributed among the five nation force of some 5,000 men.

A week ago the force's command post in Monrovia was shelled by the main rebel movement headed by Charles Taylor, and two navy vessels in the nearby port were hit. The Ghana news agency reported four people killed and 18 wounded, according to an official source.

Another source close to the secretariat of the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS), which sent the troops into Liberia, said there were seven fatalities, most of them Nigerians.

PRAGUE (SEPT. 21) - An agreement admitting Czechoslovakia to the European Community as an associate member could be signed in the first half of 1991, E.C. Commission President Jacques Delors said here Friday.

Delors, who is in Prague for a two-day fact-finding visit, said the 12-member E.C. did not wish to close the doors to any non-E.C. country in its endeavours to achieve a united Europe.

MOSCOW (SEPT. 21) - President Mikhail Gorbachev on Friday intervened to seek a compromise agreement from the Soviet parliament on crucial economic reforms after the government rejected a radical plan put before deputies.

He urged parliament to "resolutely reject the idea of an overturning of the current power and management system" of the country, on a day which had already seen a renewed government threat to resign if radical reforms were adopted.

"If we start disrupting everything in the country, it will be a gift to all the pretenders, all those ambitious people who are ready to exploit the country," he said.

Mr. Gorbachev intervened during a parliamentary session to decide what economic reform path the country should follow after Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov said his government did not agree with a draft resolution put before deputies and produced his own alternative text.

Earlier in the day, the deputy premier responsible for economic reform Leonid Abalkin had said the government would resign immediately if parliament adopted the radical reform programme drawn up by academician Abel Aganbeguian.

The draft resolution in parliament called for the adoption of the Aganbeguian plan, which basically follows the lines of a radical reform programme drawn up by economist Stanislav Shatalin and has the support of Mr. Gorbachev.

But Mr. Ryzhkov's draft resolution said that it was "necessary to review the various projects and programmes for economic reforms."

The government has put forward a much more conservative programme for economic reforms.

BEIJING (SEPT. 21) - China registered a 4.18 billion dollar trade surplus in the first eight months of the year, China's customs service said Friday.

Officials said imports fell by 16.3 percent over the eight-month period to 32.08 billion dollars, compared to the previous corresponding period, while exports rose by 15.3 percent to 36.27 billion dollars.

They said China's major trading partner remained Hong Kong, which China is to take over in 1997, and two-way trade totalled 24.35 billion dollars.

Hong Kong was followed by Japan, the European Economic Community, the United States, the Association of Southeast Asian nations and the Soviet Union.

China's trade with Taiwan surged by 224 percent to 170 million dollars, while imports from Taiwan fell to 1.17 billion dollars, they said.

The trade balance improved because China's austerity programme slowed down imports, while the 21.2 percent devaluation of the yuan last December stimulated exports, analysts said.

WELLINGTON (SEPT. 21) - Even political rivals say Jim Bolger is a nice guy, but he is also relentlessly ambitious and by the end of next month he could be Prime Minister of New Zealand.

If he wins on October 27, Mr. Bolger, 55, will be New Zealand's first farmer prime minister since Sir Keith Holyoake, another leader of the National Party, retired in 1972. In a citified country with rural roots, Mr. Bolger is the archetypal man of the land.

A former leading trade unionist, Rob Campbell summed up Mr. Bolger: "He's a typical New Zealand man of his generation -- conservative, likeable but with pretty limited vision."

One of his former press secretaries, Michelle Boag, says Mr. Bolger's strength is in being a "what you see is what you get" politician.

Former Prime Minister Sir Robert Muldoon says Mr. Bolger has leadership skills.

"One can never say Bolger will make a good prime minister but looking around our caucus and looking at the Labour caucus I do not see any reason why he should not be the first choice," he said.

Mr. Bolger's "ordinary bloke" style has given him a public image of being less than bright, and he has given more than his fair share of bad speeches.

He can get rather too easily rattled. In Parliament in 1988 then deputy Prime Minister Geoffrey Palmer used his law professor style to say: "The Leader of the Opposition is well known for his lack of intelligence." Mr. Bolger, unable to rebut the claim, threw a pen at Mr. Palmer.

Mr. Bolger claimed he had been under total control, but several weeks later in a bizarre debate he reacted to an attack by Government Whip Trevor Mallard by asking Mr. Mallard whether he had AIDS.

His message frequently has been of the need for a "decent society", one where people feel safe.

"We have lost a commitment to work and play and love with each other," he said at a golf club speech.

Born in 1935 in rural Rahotu in the Taranaki province, 250 kilometres (155 miles) north of here, he was the third of five children of Catholic Irish migrant parents. When he left high school he began working on his father's dairy farm.

Later he got his own sheep and beef farm in the remote King Country in the centre of the North Island, 300 kilometres (186 miles), north of here.

But farming, he says, did not provide enough stimulation and inevitably he gets bored with it, adding, "I'd have to find something else."

Until 1972 and election to Parliament, farming was all he knew. But as an opposition backbencher for three years he won notice for his debating skill and when National returned to power in 1975 under Mr. Muldoon (now Sir Robert), Mr. Bolger became under-secretary to the minister of agriculture and fisheries.

In 1977 he was made minister of fisheries himself, at 41 the youngest cabinet minister at the time.

From 1978 to the end of National's term in office in 1984, Mr. Bolger was Minister of Labour.

After the Labour party's victory Mr. Bolger joined two others -- nicknamed the colonels -- who attempted to dump Sir Robert. But he scored few points with party collegues when he abandoned the coup early and pledged his loyalty to the leader.

When in November 1984 Sir Robert finally lost the leadership to Jim McLay Mr. Bolger became his deputy. Mr. McLay, a disaster in the polls, held the job for 16 months until Mr. Bolger ousted him in March 1986.

In March 1987 Mr. Bolger led National to defeat, but he survives as leader, at least until next month's elections.

SINGAPORE (SEPT. 21) - The price of fuel oil shot up Friday while Dubai crude remained unchanged, in line with a see-saw pattern evident throughout the week dealers said.

At the Singapore International Monetary Exchange (SIMEX), October fuel oil soared to 149.30 U.S. dollars per metric tonne, steeply up from Thursday's closing price of 143.00 U.S. dollars.

At one stage Friday the price went as high as 152.00 U.S. dollars a metric tonne before moving down late in the afternoon.

Fuel oil for November deliveries however remained unchanged at 144.50 U.S., although it moved up to a high of 148.00 U.S. dollars a metric tonne mid-morning.

Dubai crude for November deliveries closed at 29.55 U.S. dollars a barrel, unchanged from Thursday's level while there was no quote for December Dubai.

Dealers again attributed the high price to the uncertain situation in the Gulf which they said appeared to be heading for a long standoff.

SIMEX, which trades in gold and currency futures, began trading in oil early this year.

BANGKOK (SEPT. 21) - Iran offered to sell crude oil to Thailand at a "friendship price" in the wake of the oil crisis sparked by the continuing Gulf conflict, state-run Radio Thailand reported Friday.

Minister of Commerce Amaret Sila-on told reporters after a discussion with Teheran's ambassador to Thailand on Wednesday that Iran agreed to sell crude oil to Thailand, which expects several hikes in domestic oil prices before the end of the year.

However, Mr. Amaret declined to go into details, acording to the report.

He said Bangkok should take this opportunity to develop trade relations with Iran, noting that although the country shares a border with Iraq, the two countries have signed a truce agreement.

Thailand and Iran signed an agreement in August to set up a joint commission for economic and scientific and cooperation. Both countries are scheduled to hold a meeting of the commission early next year, the report said.

BEVERLY HILLS, California (SEPT. 21) - Hermes Pan, the dance master who choreographed nine of the 10 films pairing Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, has died. He was 79.

Mr. Pan died suddenly at his home here Wednesday, said his niece, Michelene Laski. No cause of death was given.

Born Hermes Panagiotopulos in Memphis, Tennessee, Mr. Pan was a Broadway dancer from 1927 to 1930 and performed with Ms. Rogers in "Top Speed."

He first met Mr. Astaire in 1933 in Hollywood when he helped the dancer with a routine for the RKO film "Flying Down to Rio," which co-starred Ms. Rogers.

"Fred told him he was the only person he ever saw who could dance like he did " Ms. Laski said.

"He was a darling man, a great dancer," Ms. Rogers said from her home in Oregon.

In a career that spanned four decades, Mr. Pan won numerous awards, including the last annual Academy Award for choreography, presented to him in 1937 for the "Fun House" sequence in "A Damsel in Distress."

KHARTOUM (SEPT 21) - The Organisation of African Unity (Oau) committee on refugee affairs has paid an inspection visit to Kassala in eastern Sudan to gather first-hand information on the conditions of refugees there.

The camp, which was planned to accomodate 5,000 refugees, now holds 65,000, most of them children.

The deputy governor of the eastern region told the Oau delegates that there were 80 to 100 new arrivals from Ethiopia daily. According to him, the assistance the Sudan received from the international community was not commensurate to the number of refugees it hosts. He appealed for more aid.

The Oau delegates arrived in Khartoum Thursday for a meeting that begins Saturday in the Sudanese capital to discuss African refugee affairs in preparation for the emergency meeting of the Executive Committee of the Office of the U.N. High Commissioner on Refugees (Unhcr) in Geneva.

Last week, the Sudanese government sealed off its border with Chad to prevent more refugees from entering the country. Apart from putting a strain on the economy, the Chadian refugees have been causing security and political problems for the Sudan.

On more than one occasion, Chadian troops have entered Sudanese territory in pursuit of Chadian dissidents. There have been accusations also from Chad that the Sudan has been allowing dissident Chadians and Libyan troops to attack Chad from the Sudan.

The bloody tribal conflicts and armed robbery in western Sudan have also been attributed by the Khartoum government to the abundance of firearms and ammunition brought in by Chadians.

BAGHDAD (SEPT. 21) - Iraq's Revolutionary Command Council Friday called on its population to prepare for a hard battle and reiterated that it would not agree to any compromise in the Gulf crisis.

''There is not a single chance for any retreat'' from Iraq's position on Kuwait, the ruling council said.

''The battle ahead would be the mother and father of all battles'', it added. It would be waged ''according to principles of honour and deep faith and determination to achieve victory''.

It was the first official statement from Iraq in recent weeks that failed to mention the word peace and offered no proposals for negotiations.

On Thursday, Culture and Information Minister Latif Nasif al-Jasim said Iraq would blow up Gulf oil fields and use every weapon Baghdad owns in case of a Western attack.

In another development reflecting rising tension in the region, Radio Baghdad reported that two unidentified foreign warplanes violated Iraqi airspace on Friday. They penetrated seven kilometres into western Iraq from the border region of Saudi Arabia and Jordan, the broadcast said.

In Brussels, the commission of the European Committee said the U.N.-sanctionned embargo against Iraq should be expanded to fields covering all kind of services and contracts signed before August 8.

U.S. Defence Secretary Dick Cheney said in Madrid he supported large-scale arms deliveries to Saudi Arabia. He was in Spain for talks with government officials on the Gulf crisis and Spain's contribution to the military buildup there.

Meanwhile, Iraq has ordered two non-diplomatic staff members of the British embassy in Baghdad, eleven members of the French embassy, as well as the Italian and the Spanish military attaches there to leave the country.

The decision was believed to be a reprisal for an earlier European Community decision to expel dozens of Iraqi embassy staffers, military attaches, army officers and civilians from the E.C.

In Washington, the Pentagon said American forces are in for an indefinite deployment in Saudi Arabia.

Cbs news quoted Pentagon sources as saying there were no contradictions in planning a long-term troop presence in the Gulf and President George Bush's assurances that U.S. forces will only remain there until Iraqi forces pull out of Kuwait.

In Cairo, the daily al-Ahram reported that the exiled Kuwaiti government has offered to pay 30 million dollars in August and September salaries to Egyptians who were working in Kuwait before it was invaded by Iraq on August 2.

An end-of-service compensation to those who did not want to return to Kuwait after it was liberated would also be given, the daily said.

In Tokyo, the Japanese government decided to give 900 million dollars to the Gulf peace fund to be set up by the six-nation Gulf Cooperation Council. The fund is to be used for procuring equipment and materials to help U.S.-led multinational forces in the Gulf.

In London, the Foreign Office said a jetliner chartered by the United States will be able to evacuate about 400 Western women and children from Kuwait and Iraq on Saturday. It urged all remaining British nationals to make use of this opportunity.

LONDON (SEPT. 21) - The price of Brent North Sea oil for November rose to 34.10 dollars per barrel on the physical market here on Friday, up from 33.65 dollars at the opening and from 32.95 dollars at the close on Thursday.

This pushed up the price of gold to 389.30 dollars an ounce at the afternoon fixing from 387.25 dollars late on Thursday, analysts said. The price reached 390.10 dollars during Friday morning.

UBS Phillips and Drew analyst Joe Malinowski said that the price of oil rose on news that Saudi Arabia has suspended supplies of oil to Jordan. About 30,000 barrels per day had been supplied, he said.

Statements on Thursday by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein warning that a war with the United States could last several years, and a threat by Iraq to destroy all oil installations in the Gulf in the event of hostilities, contributed to the rise, other analysts said.

Shearson Lehman Hutton analyst Neil Buxton said that gold had firmed in line with the rise of oil prices, but that trading volume was low.

MOSCOW (SEPT. 21) - Russian Federation President Boris Yeltsin suffered a slight injury to the head and a more serious hip injury Friday after being involved in a car crash here, TASS news agency said.

Mr. Yeltsin must rest and remain in bed after receiving a "substantial shock to the right hip" in the collision, Vice President of the Russian Federation Supreme Soviet (parliament) Ruslan Khabulatov said

The 59-year-old Mr. Yeltsin was taken to hospital Friday morning, but earlier reports said he had sustained no injury.

Traffic police said the accident occurred in the morning not far from Mr. Yeltsin's home, at the corner of Gorky and Alexander Nevsky roads, as he was on his way to the Russian parliament.

BRUSSELS (SEPT 21) - Some 750,000 people in Liberia face death by starvation unless the international community mobilises to save them, the Belgian humanitarian organisation Medecins sans Frontieres (MSF - Doctors Without Borders) warned Friday.

Dr Jan Van Erps, in charge of MSF-Belgique's efforts for Liberia, spoke of "food genocide" there.

He told Agence France-Presse that there had not been such a situation since the disastrous mass famine in Ethiopia of 1984-85. Medical aid in the war-ravaged west African state no longer made any sense if there was no food aid, Dr. Van Erps said.

The Belgian doctor told how MSF had to decline to treat more than half the children coming to it for vaccination against measles "for the sole reason that a simple vaccination would have killed them, given their physically weakened state".

MSF-Belgique is the only humanitarian organisation in Liberia, where rival forces have been battling for political control since last December 24, but it has only 10 doctors present in a country of some 2.5 million people.

"The whole economy is completely destroyed.

"We have located 750,000 displaced people who have fled the capital Monrovia or the other regions ravaged by fighting in preceding months," Dr. Van Erps said.

"Barely 10 percent of them are still managing to feed themselves.

"The needs are enormous, but the absolute priority is the despatch of several tens of thousands of tonnes of food.

"Liberia has been forgotten because of the Gulf crisis, although hundreds of thousands of people are in agony. It is crucial that public opinion be alerted " the doctor said.

MSF-Belgique hopes soon to be able to reopen the Bensonville hospital in Monrovia and set up 60 beds there, he said.

PARIS (SEPT 21) - Esso SAF announced that its half-year book profit dropped by 70.7 percent over the same period last year, totalling 165 million francs (31 million dollars) in the first two quarters of 1990 against 566 million francs (107 million dollars) in 1989.

A company statement said the drop was due to a major write-down on oil stock value due to the slump in the dollar and crude oil prices, before oil prices rose again in August.

In 1989, net profit over the whole year was 316 million francs (60 million dollars).

The book profit for the first half of 1990 was affected by a negative stock effect of 534 million francs (101 million dollars), while the same period in 1989 took into account a positive stock effect of 591 million francs (112 million dollars).

Outside stock effect, the current account for refining and distribution improved sharply, passing from 25 million francs (4.7 million dollars) in the first half of 1989 to 376 million francs (71.4 million dollars) for the corresponding period in 1990. The meant the half year results of 351 million francs (137 million dollars) were better than those for the whole of 1989.

According to Esso, the increase in prices for crude oil and finished products triggered by the Gulf crisis has created a "particularly uncertain outlook for the second half", especially in the effect on prices of oil stocks.

The results will be further "burdened by extra costs of supplies and by delays" in carrying forward price fluctuations to the consumer.

However, the company said it was looking to this "turbulent period with confidence".

BRUSSELS (SEPT 21) - The EEC Commission on Friday proposed tighter controls on supplies of food and medicines to Iraq as part of a tightening of the embargo.

It also announced food aid worth nearly 10 million dollars for Egyptian refugees and suggested releasing some Kuwaiti assets.

The proposals to toughen the embargo were expected to be approved by ministers from the 12 members of the European Economic Comunity (EEC) next week, a Commission spokesman said.

EEC foreign ministers asked the Commission on September 7 to propose such measures which "fit entirely with U.N. resolutions," the spokesman said.

The Commission suggested that the assets and activities of three Kuwaiti financial bodies remaining under the control of the Kuwaiti government-in-exile should be released from restrictions.

The three are the Kuwait Investment Office, the Kuwait Investment Agency, and the Kuwait Petroleum Cie.

Under the tighter sanctions, only food and medicines approved by the United Nations Security Council would be permitted for delivery as humanitarian aid.

Medicines "which could be used for purposes other than strict medical uses" would no longer be allowed to go to Iraq. This would apply particularly to antibiotics, synthesised hormones, and pharmaceutical products in bulk, the spokesman said.

The EEC would also monitor application of the embargo by member states. The despatch of any emergency aid to Iraq would have to receive advance authorisation, and member states would exchange information on this with the Commission.

The aid could only be distributed free of charge and on the spot.

The Commission also proposed extending the embargo to include the supply of services not directly linked to commercial transactions.

The spokesman said that the measures were intended as a "preventive measure", and were not intended as a response to loopholes which had been found in application of the embargo.

The EEC announced the first embargo against Iraq, two days after the Iraqis invaded Kuwait, and before the U.N. Security Council had voted one.

MANAGUA (SEPT. 21) EFE - A government-sponsored debate on ways of solving Nicaraga's economic crisis turned violent after supporters of the leftist opposition Sandinista Party tried to storm the meeting, police said.

Several hundred people Thursday burst into the Managua conference center where Chamorro was addressing leaders of pro-government unions and businessmen, roughing up security guards and stoning cars with diplomatic number plates before they were ejected.

Police said the leader of the pro-Sandinista "National Workers' Front" (FNT) union, Lucio Jimenez, was outside haranguing the crowd.

Both the FNT and the pro-Sandinista national Union of Farmers and Ranchers were boycotting Thursday's debate, charging the aim of the meeting was to hand the country over to international financial institutions.

Inaugurating the two-day debate aimed at reaching an economic pact between all productive sectors of society, Chamorro called for "an open dialogue, without hard and fast stances, and without any pre-conditions except one: that we listen to each other so as to reach accords in everybody's mutual interest".

Representatives of the business groups and unions attending the conference Thursday called for a drastic reduction of the Army to combat hyperinflation.

During their decade in power and war against U.S.-backed Contra rebels, the Sandinistas built up a 90,000-strong Army in a country of three million inhabitants.

After taking over from the Sandinistas in April this year, Chamorro promised to cut back Central America's largest standing army by just over half.

Speakers said the Army, together with an oversized public sector, were responsible for 15 per cent of the country's budget deficit, fueling inflation unoffficially estimated at over 500 per cent during the first half of 1990.

Nicaraguan Chamber of Commerce President Juan Lopez Zeledon called for some 400 state companies, most of them heavily indebted, to be privatized as soon as possible.

Union leaders urged the government to guarantee workers a salary of dlrs 200 monthly, saying it was the absolute minimum needed for the basic necessities of life.

MADRID (SEPT. 21) EFE - U.S. Defense Secretary Richard Cheney arrived Friday in Madrid where he was expected to seek increased Spanish cooperation in enforcing the Gulf embargo and to speed up the closedown of some U.S. bases on Spanish territory.

During his 24-hour visit, Cheney is to meet with Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez, Defense Minister Narcis Serra and Foreign Minister Francisco Fernandez Ordonez.

Topping Cheney's agenda will be the Persian Gulf, where Spain has sent three warships to join the U.S.-led multinational naval force maintaining the United Nations blockade against Iraq and occupied Kuwait.

Although Washington has been calling for its allies to step up the pressure on Iraq, Serra told the Spanish parliament this week that the government had no plans to increase its military presence in the region.

Cheney's visit comes the same week the Pentagon announced the dismantling or reduction of 150 U.S. military bases in Europe in 1991, including the joint-use Torrejon Air Base outside Madrid and several smaller installations in Spain.

Under their latest bilateral defense accord, the U.S. agreed to pull its 72 F-16 jet fighters out of Torrejon by May 1992, but with an earlier withdrawal now foreseen, Cheney and Serra will have technical details to discuss Friday.

Cheney is also to be received by Spanish King Juan Carlos before flying on to Lisbon early Saturday for more talks with U.S. allies on the situation in the Gulf.

MANILA (SEPT 21) EFE - The United States has agreed to let Manila take control next year of four smaller U.S. bases in the Philippines, a Philippine negotiator said Friday, as talks on the future of these and two major U.S. installations adjourned for a month.

Negotiator Rafael Alumen said the John Hay, Camp Wallace, San Miguel and Camp O'Donnell supply and support facilities would revert to Philippine control when the current bilateral defense accord expires in September, 1991.

Philippine Foreign Secretary Raul Manglapus called a news conference at the presidential palace where he added, "We want to control these small installations and I do not anticpate any problems."

Still to be worked out in forthcoming talks is the fate of the two largest U.S. military bases on foreign soil, Clark Air Base and Subic Bay Naval Station, both located about 90 km from Manila.

Manglapus said the Philippine position was to "make it clear that we want full control of Clark as soon as the current treaty expires."

Alumen told reporters the United States was arguing for a phased reduction of its forces over a 10- or 12-year period.

But U.S. negotiator Stanley Schrager said his side had not set such a firm timetable, and noted that under any accord that emerges, Washington is seeking to retain the right of access to the bases.

"We want to emphasize our continuing respect for the integrity and sovereignty of the Philippines," Schrager added.

As the talks adjourned Friday until late next month, several hundred demonstrators hurled bottles and stones at police called in to break up an anti-American protest outside the U.S. embassy in Manila.

AMMAN (SEPT 21) EFE - Jordanian officials Friday warned that their country might be forced to break the United Nations sanctions against Iraq following Saudi Arabia's decision to cut its oil supplies to Jordan.

According to the officials, Saudia Arabia cut off supplies of some 33,000 barrels a day, claiming Jordan had failed to pay some dlrs 48 million.

Following the U.N. embargo of Iraq last month, imposed in response to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, Riyadh agreed to pump one million barrels per month to Jordan to enable it to reduce its oil dependency on Iraq from 90 per cent to 40 per cent.

The officials in Amman expressed surprise at the move Friday and said it would likely force Jordan to break the embargo and approach Baghdad for more oil.

Describing the decision as a retaliation for Jordan's opposition to the U.S.-led deployment of troops to Saudi Arabia, they said the measure showed Riyadh and other Gulf states aimed to try bring Jordan to heel politically and economically.

The measure followed reports Thursday that Saudi Arabia had expelled 30 Jordanians over the past three weeks in retaliation for Amman's support for Iraq.

CHICAGO (SEPT. 21) UPI - Trading was choppy in the grain market Friday amid uncertainty over weather conditions and the reluctance of traders to establish new positions ahead of the weekend.

Corn and wheat were higher at the close on the Chicago Board of Trade while soybeans were moderately lower.

Both corn and soybeans were supported much of the day by cold weather concerns and harvest delays. Some forecasters predicted frost over a wide area of the Upper Midwest during the weekend, although a severe freeze was not expected.

Soybeans turned lower late in the day and were at or near the lows for the week at the close. Beans were pressured by professional selling and sharp losses in soybean meal.

Gains in corn were limited by profit-taking, but there was underlying support from continued light country movement.

Wheat rallied with the corn in quiet trading.

A Soviet delegation will be in Washington next week for meetings that will include discussions of the grain supply agreement.

At the close, corn was up 3/4 to 2, soybeans down 2 3/4 to 5 3/4, wheat up 1/2 to 2 and oats down 1 to 1 3/4.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 24) XINHUA - RESEARCHERS FOUND A NEW MEDICAL TECHNIQUE HAS DRAMATICALLY EASED PARKINSON'S SYMPTOMS WHEN THEY TESTED IT FOR MONKEYS WITH A FORM OF PARKINSON'S DISEASE, ACCORDING TO THE LATEST ISSUE OF THE JOURNAL "SCIENCE."

DURING THE STUDY, THE RESEARCHERS WERE ABLE TO ALLEVIATE THE HALLMARK NEUROLOGICAL SYMPTOMS OF THE DISEASE, WHICH INCLUDE INCREASING MUSCULAR RIGIDITY, TREMORS AND DIFFICULT MOVEMENT, BY DESTROY A SMALL GROUP OF CELLS IN THE CENTER OF THE BRAIN.

THE STUDY CONDUCTED BY DR. MAHLON R. DELONG, CHAIRMAN OF THE NEUROLOGY DEPARTMENT AT EMORY UNIVERSITY IN ATLANTA, AND HIS COLLEAGUES.

DR. DELONG SAID THE TEST DEMONSTRATES THAT PARKINSON'S SYMPTOMS ARE AT LEAST PARTIALLY DUE TO EXCESSIVE ELECTRICAL ACTIVITY IN THE NERVE CELLS IN THE

PORTION OF THE BRAIN THEY DESTORYED.

IT PROVIDES STRONG SUPPORT FOR THE VIEW THAT THE PATHWAY THROUGH THE SUBTHALAMIC NUCLEUS IS OVERACTIVE AND IF YOU CAN BLOCK THAT PATHWAY BY SOME MEANS YOU CAN REDUCE THE SYMPTOMS DRAMATICALLY, HE SAID.

"WE HAVE BLOCKED IT IN THE MOST OBVIOUS WAY BY INJECTING A CHEMICAL THAT KILLS THE NERVE CELLS IN THAT STRUCTURE, AND THIS COULD CONCEIVABLY BE DONE IN MAN AS WELL BUT WE FEEL IT NEEDS TO BE MORE FULLY EXPLORED IN ANIMAL MODELS BEFORE WE CAN CONTEMPLATE USING IT IN HUMANS," HE SAID.

PARKINSON'S, WHICH MOSTLY STRIKES PEOPLE OVER 40, CAUSES TREMORS AND GRADUAL LOSS OF MUSCLE. IT RESULTS FROM A GRADUAL LOSS OF NERVE CELLS IN AN AREA OF THE BRAIN KNOWN AS THE SUBSTANTIA NIGRA. THIS CELLS PRODUCE A BRAIN CHEMICAL CALLED DOPAMINE THAT IS VITAL FOR NORMAL COORDINATED MUSCLE MOVEMENT.

THE NEW FINDING SUGGESTED THAT THE DOPAMINE SOMEHOW KEEPS CELLS OF THE SUBTHALAMIC NUCLEUS UNDER CONTROL. WITHOUT THE DOPAMINE, THEY BECOME OVERACTIVE AND CAUSE THE MUSCLE PROBLEMS OF PARKINSON'S DISEASE. BUT BY DESTORYING THIS OVERACTIVE REGION, THE MUSCLES ARE PREVENTED FROM RECEIVING ITS UNCONTROLLED SIGNALS.

BEIJING (SEPT. 24) XINHUA - THE CHINESE GOVERNMENT IS PLANNING TO WORK OUT A PACKAGE OF ECONOMIC POLICIES AND VARIOUS STRONG MEASURES TO DEVELOP THE NATURAL GAS INDUSTRY, ACCORDING TO TODAY'S "CHINA DAILY".

INADEQUATE INVESTMENT AND LOW GAS PRICES ARE TWO MAJOR FACTORS WEIGHING HEAVILY AGAINST THE EXPANSION OF GAS INDUSTRY IN CHINA, SAID A SENIOR OFFICIAL OF THE CHINA NATIONAL OIL AND GAS CORPORATION.

"THIS HAS DRAWN THE ATTENTION OF THE GOVERNMENT, WHICH IS CONSIDERING SOME MEASURES INCLUDING ADDITIONAL STATE INVESTMENT AND READJUSTMENT OF THE PRICING SYSTEM," HE SAID.

HE SAID THAT HIS CORPORATION IS PLANNING TO SET UP A FOUNDATION BY OPENING MORE CHANNELS TO COLLECT "IDLE FUNDS" FROM LOCAL PRODUCTION SECTORS WHICH NEED NATURAL GAS AS RAW MATERIAL.

THE NATURAL GAS INDUSTRY IS LOSING MONEY. IT DEPENDS ON THE GOVERNMENT FOR ALMOST ALL ITS INVESTMENT AND THE GAS PRICES ARE MUCH LOWER THAN THOSE OF COAL.

CHINA INTENDS TO INCREASE ITS GAS RESERVES BY SEVERAL TIMES IN THE NEXT 10 YEARS.

BASED ON THE NEW FINDINGS, CHINA WILL DEVELOP THE NEW GASFIELDS IN A PLANNED WAY SO AS TO INCREASE ITS GAS OUTPUT YEAR AFTER YEAR, THE OFFICIAL SAID.

THE PRIORITY FOR GAS SUPPLIES WILL BE GIVEN TO THE KEY STATE PROJECTS SUCH AS LARGE CHEMICAL FERTILIZER PLANTS AND LARGE CITIES SHORT OF FUEL FOR COOKING.

HE SAID THE NEW METHODS OF GAS UTILIZATION SUCH AS POWER GENERATION BY GAS WILL BE INTRODUCED TO ACHIEVE THE BEST POSSIBLE ECONOMIC RESULTS.

TOKYO (SEPT. 21) KYODO - MITSUBISHI PETROCHEMICAL CO. PLANS TO RAISE THE PRICE OF ETHYLENE BY 24.9 PERCENT FROM OCTOBER 1 BECAUSE OF SOARING CRUDE OIL PRICES, THE TOP JAPANESE PETROCHEMICAL COMPANY SAID FRIDAY.

INDUSTRY SOURCES SAID OTHER PETROCHEMIAL COMPANIES ARE EXPECTED TO FOLLOW SUIT IN A MOVE WHICH WOULD MARK THE FIRST SHARP ETHYLENE PRICE INCREASE SINCE 1979, WHEN ITS PRICE JUMPED DUE TO THE SECOND OIL SHOCK.

MITSUBISHI SAID NEGOTIATIONS WITH ITS CUSTOMERS ARE NOW UNDER WAY OVER THE PRICE INCREASE, CITING THE UPTURN IN CRUDE OIL PRICES AND THE RESULTING PRICE SURGE OF NAPHTHA, THE RAW MATERIAL FOR ETHYLENE, IN THE WAKE OF THE PERSIAN GULF CRISIS.

THE PRICE HIKE, INDUSTRY SOURCES SAID, WILL TRIGGER A SPIRAL OF PRICE SURGES FOR PETROCHEMICAL PRODUCTS AS ETHYLENE IS WIDELY USED FOR MAKING PLASTICS, VINYL, AND SYNTHETIC FIBERS.

ACCORDING TO MITSUBISHI, THE PRICE OF NAPHTHA IS PROJECTED TO SOAR TO 32,500 YEN PER KILOLITER IN OCTOBER FROM AROUND 20,000 YEN IN EARLY THIS YEAR.

A NAPHTHA PRICE SWING OF 1,000 YEN A KILOLITER PUSHES UP THE COST OF ETHYLENE BY 2 YEN A KILOGRAM, MITSUBISHI SAID.

AN OFFICIAL AT SHIN-ETSU CHEMICAL CO., A MAJOR ETHYLENE USER, SAID HIS COMPANY HAS NOT DECIDED YET ON WHETHER TO ACCEPT THE PRICE INCREASE, BUT SAID THERE WOULD BE NO CHOICE BUT TO PASS THE INCREASE ON TO PRICES OF ITS PRODUCTS SUCH AS POLYVINYL CHLORIDE.

JAKARTA (SEPT. 21) KYODO - AN INDONESIA-JAPAN JOINT STUDY TEAM HAS MADE THE FIRST DISCOVERY OF ANIMAL FOOTPRINT FOSSILS FROM AROUND THE ERA OF THE PITHECANTHROPUS, A JAPANESE MEMBER OF THE TEAM SAID FRIDAY.

THE JOINT TEAM OF THE GEOLOGICAL RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT CENTER OF INDONESIA AND THE JAPAN INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION AGENCY FOUND 23 FOOTPRINTS LEFT BY FOUR DIFFERENT VERTEBRATE ANIMALS, BELIEVED TO BE BUFFALOES OR DEER, ABOUT 700,000 YEARS AGO.

THE FIRST HOMO PITHECANTHROPUS ERECTUS FOSSIL TO BE FOUND IN THE WORLD WAS ON THE BANK OF THE SOLO RIVER IN INDONESIA IN 1891 WHERE THE PITHECANTHROPUS WERE ESTIMATED TO HAVE LIVED FROM 500,000 TO 1 MILLION YEARS AGO.

THE JOINT TEAM MADE AN EXCURSION ALONG THE WIDODAREN RIVER, A BRANCH OF THE SOLO RIVER IN EAST JAVA, ON JULY 31, WHERE DR. SADAYUKI AKAHANE, A PROFESSOR OF GEOLOGY AT SHINSHU UNIVERSITY, NOTICED A SERIES OF SMALL DEPRESSIONS EXPOSED ON THE RIVER BED.

HE SAID, "WE ARE VERY LUCKY TO BE ABLE TO SEE THE REMAINS OF THESE ANIMALS WHICH ARE EITHER BUFFALOES OR DEER."

IT IS POSSIBLE THAT A HUMAN FOOTPRINT OF THE PITHECANTHROPUS ITSELF CAN BE FOUND, HE SAID.

AS A RESULT OF THE LATEST FIND, A BIG SURVEY PROJECT TO PURSUE THIS POSSIBILITY IS JOINTLY PLANNED BY JAPAN AND INDONESIA FOR THE YEAR 1991, THE CENTENNIAL OF THE FIRST PITHECANTHROPUS FINDING.

THE JOINT STUDY TEAM IS MEANWHILE PLANNING A MORE DETAILED INVESTIGATION OF THE SITE OF THE LATEST FINDING, INCLUDING AN EXCAVATION.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA joined the INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND yesterday, becoming the fifth Eastern European country to join the 152-member organization. BULGARIA expects to join next Tuesday. Meanwhile, IMF managing director MICHEL CAMDESSUS predicts the organization will support U.S. attempts to provide aid for countries effected by the turmoil in the Persian Gulf.

WHAT'S AHEAD:

McDONNELL DOUGLAS says it plans to launch production of its net long-range jet transport, the MD-12X, next year if it gets enough orders.

FROM THE BULLS:

"It is hard to see logically why the market would go up and that is very typical of bottoms. I think we are making a bottom. It is a retest of the recent lows," says STEVE TODD, editor of the "Todd Market Timer." "We could go another 50 points on the downside, but I think we are putting in a very good bottom."

He believes this bottom will come in the next couple of weeks and will be followed by a two- to three-month rally. "I think we are still going to come back to the old highs. I think we still have 3000 in the cards." (FNN "Marketwrap", 9/20)

KENNEDY GAMMAGE, editor of the "Richland Report," says that the dip in the McClellan Oscillator below zero this week is indicative of a "buy spike rally" possibly as early as late September. This he says will be "followed by a nice, sexy rally into a November top." He says this move could be explosive. (FNN "Marketwrap", 9/20)

"A strange thing about the stock market and events ... you get a string of negatives, and then suddenly, out of the blue, a positive comes," says BILL LeFEVRE of ADVEST INC. "Five-hundred points down on the Dow, 17%, discounts most if not all of the bad news we've experienced." ("Nightly Business Report" 9/20)

FROM THE BEARS:

"The bottom line is that the market is heading lower for the next few months," says RICKY HARRINGTON, of MARION BASS SECURITIES. "He says the Dow "could fall to 2100 to 2200 sometime before the end of the year." ("USA Today", 9/21)

"I think the market trend has shifted from being at all bullish to bearish," according to MICHAEL MANZA of M.J. MEEHAN & CO. "There's not a lot to be encouraged about," says Manza, who thinks the Middle East is the greatest factor weighing on the market. ("Nightly Business Report", 9/20)

"I would say we are looking into next year at the earliest [for a return to growth of the 30 Dow stock prices]," says JOSEPH BATTIPAGLIA of GRUNTAL & CO. "You might see ten to 15 percent further down" before Dow share prices start rising again. (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 9/20)

"People say too many people are bearish," says MICHAEL MURPHY, publisher of "Overpriced Stock Service" and "California Technology Stock Letter." "I say they're not bearish enough." ("USA Today", 9/21)

After testing its lows next week, the market could stage a typical bear market rally lasting into early November and drifting up toward the 2750 area, says MICHAEL JENKINS at "Stock Cycles Forecast."

But he warns, "Bear markets are notoriously selective so a lot of stocks never rally at all ... if you still have stocks that go down everyday, you must liquidate them." Jenkins doesn't think the 3000 mark will be broken for another seven years. (CNBC "World Business", 9/21)

"It seems like all the news is bad news these days," says SCUDDER STEVENS' HOWARD WARD. "On the one hand you have the growing fears of recession," which will bring lower earnings, according to Ward, and, "on the other hand, you've got to be concerned about war, and in an environment where you have a deteriorating economy and prospects for war, it's very difficult to get excited about buying stocks." (FNN "Marketwrap", 9/20)

STOCK MARKET:

Expect more of the same low volume and high volatility during today's triple witching, predicts DENNIS KELLY, vice-president at JANNEY MONTGOMERY SCOTT.

"I think it's natural that you have to be on the sidelines ... The market is not really going down because of the severity of the selling, it's just that the buyers are standing by the side." (CNBC "Marketwatch", 9/20)

"We're not out of the woods where we can say this is going to be the low," cautions KIDDER PEABODY chief market strategist DENNIS JARRETT. "A little more capitulation is going to be necessary."

At YAMAICHI INTERNATIONAL, ANDREW RILEY says, "In this environment, good news is bad news and bad news is really bad news." (CNN "Business Morning", 9/21)

"There's growing concern about the banking problem and there's a lack of any good news," says SUSAN DEL SIGNORE of TRAVELERS INVESTMENT MANAGEMENT. She says she was getting 'the most negative calls [yesterday] I've gotten since I've been in this business. People are losing heart." (WSJ, 9/21)

"The market is still digesting Alan Greenspan's congressional testimony [from Wednesday] and the Mideast is still a powder keg," says KENNETH DUCEY at S.G. WARBURG.

"There's been no concrete news ... to cause a nearly 409-point loss in the Dow but I think Iraq's most recent revelation that it intends to blow up all the oil fields in the event of war - Saddam [Hussein] has said this before - is having a little more effect on the market Thursday than it has in the past," says THOMAS GALLAGHER at OPPENHEIMER & CO. ("The Washington Post", 9/21)

"The heavy sell programs [yesterday] caught everyone off guard," says TRUDE LATIMER of JOSEPHTHAL. "Some of it was in advance of triple witching. But some of the selling could be a follow-through to [Fed Chairman Alan] Greenspan's statements, which might not have sunk in on Wednesday." ("USA Today", 9/21)

The recent low-volume market is "more susceptible to short-term influences," says MICHAEL METZ of OPPENHEIMER & CO. "The reaction's much more pronounced." Metz points out that low volume can "be lethal to Wall Street," and may lead to layoffs at brokerage firms. (FNN "Marketwrap", 9/20)

"Lots of people are just giving up on the market now," says FRANK GRETZ of SHIELDS & CO. "No one's looking for good news." ("USA Today", 9/21)

"We're back under a quieter market, but every now and then you get spikes up and down," says MICHAEL LIPPER of LIPPER ANALYTICAL. He characterizes recent action as "dull." (FNN "Marketwrap", 9/20)

"In this environment, good news is bad news, and bad news is really bad news," according to ANDREW RILEY, a market strategist for YAMAICHI INTERNATIONAL. "Almost everybody is a hostage." (CNN "Moneyline", 9/20)

"We're not out of the woods where we can say this is going to be the low from here until 1991," predicts DENNIS JARRETT of KIDDER, PEABODY. "There's still a little bit more capitulation that's going to be necessary." (CNN "Moneyline", 9/20)

"Earlier this week the stock market appeared to be holding together, but it began to weaken Wednesday," says JAY HOHMANN of DONALDSON, LUFKIN & JENRETTE. He says we are "on the brink of a recession, if not already in one." ("Investor's Daily", 9/21)

STOCK TIPS:

The "Heard on the Street" column in this morning's "Wall Street Journal" focuses on GENERAL ELECTRIC, whose stock is down 9% in a week, in part on concern about its huge loan portfolio.

The article quotes GE VICE CHAIRMAN LAWRENCE BOSSIDY as saying, "We are confused why these people seem to be concern." He says GE Capital earnings grew 20% in the first half of 1990 and should grow 15% to 20% in the second half. "We are on target to meet our 1990 goals," he says. (WSJ, 9/21)

"Rip Van Winkle would be my favorite customer," says ELLIOTT SCHLANG of PRESCOTT BALL & TURBEN. "He'll wake up five years from now to discover that these companies have done incredibly well."

Which companies? Schlang likes TOOTSIE ROLL INDUSTRIES, SAFETY-KLEEN, CINTAS, RPM INC., HILLENBRAND INDUSTRIES, J.M. SMUCKER and STRUCTURAL DYNAMICS RESEARCH CORP. ("USA Today", 9/21)

MONEY & CREDIT:

"The dollar is fairly well underpinned," says IAN FOAKES, foreign exchange manager at PAINEWEBBER. "It looks better than the last time it was up here" at Thursday's levels. (WSJ, 9/21)

Rumors that the BANK OF JAPAN was about to raise interest rates sent "people rushing to buy yen for the high yield attraction," according to GILBERT CISNEROS of BANK OF BOSTON. But when the rumor proved false, those same people "got caught short and dumped yen to buy dollars." ("Investor's Daily", 9/21)

"The sooner we get a budget deal, the sooner the FEDERAL RESERVE will be in a position to ease interest rates," says RAYMOND STONE of STONE & McCARTHY RESEARCH ASSOCIATES. "I think the [Robert Dole proposal to separate a capital gains tax cut from deficit reduction negotiations] is good news, but the [bond] market did not react to it." (NYT, 9/21)

"I think his [Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan] job is chopped liver unless something really dramatic happens," says BILL WOLMAN, chief economist at "BusinessWeek" and "CNBC." "He refused, essentially, to walk the plank for the administration intellectually by promising good things when in fact he could not deliver good things. (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 9/20)

"Many of the ... big banks have actually gone to industrial customers such as Toyota to ask for loans," says JAMES GRANT, publisher of "Grant's Interest Rate Observer." Grant says when the providers of bank credit to the entire world begin to chaff under inadequate capital, it's a sign of stagnation. (CNBC "Marketwatch", 9/20)

"I would suspect that the next best experience is going to be in the bond market because I think it is inevitable that this economy will be declared in a recession if it's not already there and the corrective measures will need to be taken at that point in time, which leads to lower interest rates," says DENNIS KELLY, vice president at JANNEY, MONTGOMERY SCOTT. (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 9/20)

LAWRENCE LEUZZI of S.G. WARBURG says reports that some congressional leaders may try to delay automatic spending cuts even without a budget agreement were a big disappointment to bond investors.

"This could be the first chink in the Gramm-Rudman armor that could potentially lead to the unraveling of the legislation," says LEUZZI. "If they delay Gramm-Rudman a few weeks for the budget negotiations, then next they may want to delay it until the Persian Gulf crisis is resolved. And that would be very negative for the markets." (WSJ, 9/21)

THE ECONOMY:

A new poll by "The Wall Street Journal" and "NBC" finds half of those questioned saying they think the economy will get worse in the next year, a stark increase from the one-third who held that pessimistic view only two months ago.

Fifty-two percent said they were somewhat uncomfortable or very uncomfortable about putting money in stocks. Just slightly over ten percent said they were very comfortable about stocks. (WSJ, 9/21)

DUN & BRADSTREET's quarterly survey of executive opinion shows "Business optimism is currently at the lowest levels since the recession of 1982," according to the firm's chief statistician JOSEPH DUNCAN.

He also noted that "consumers are notoriously headline-prone," and could therefore curtail their spending as a result of the Middle East crisis. "Some of the fundamentals are reasonably strong, but if people stop spending money or stop investing in companies, they could easily force a downturn," according to Duncan. ("Investor's Daily", 9/21)

"Looking at all the numbers that have come out, the odds of a recession are very good," says RICKY HARRINGTON, of MARION BASS SECURITIES. "It's time to be gloomy." ("USA Today", 9/21)

If consumers pull in their spending horns, the predicted recession "could become a self-fulfilling prophecy," according to RICHARD O'BRIEN, an economist at HEWLETT-PACKARD.

"There's a lot of uncertainty and a lot of pessimism, but the economic fundamentals haven't deteriorated that much" since the beginning of the problems in the Middle East. ("Investor's Daily", 9/21)

"The fact of the matter is, high deficits in our economy and a weak economy are the right salve to lower inflation rates," says JOSEPH BATTIPAGLIA of GRUNTAL & CO.

"It doesn't lead to higher inflation rates. So probably six to nine months from now we will see substantially lower rates which will move bonds higher and may start the whole process of higher stock prices again going into next year." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 9/21)

ROBERT HERMES, president of the PURVIN & GERTZ energy consulting firm in Houston, says oil demand may be falling "more than is generally realized because of higher prices and a weakening economy."

Still, he says sharply higher oil prices remain possible if supply conditions change. "The trouble is, we're right on the edge and it doesn't take but one or two things - such as a very bad winter or an accident that puts a major facility out of commission - to push it over the edge." (NYT, 9/21)

"Since the Fed doesn't want a recession but can do little to undo the general weakness, the economy is in an unfamiliar limbo with little growth in prospect " says T. ROWE PRICE economist PAUL BOLTZ.

He predicts the third and/or fourth quarters will show a contraction in the economy, unless there is a quick and favorable resolution to the Middle East crisis. "In light of the Fed's rhetorical goal of reducing inflation, perhaps a sluggish economy is preferable to robust growth at a time of higher inflation " says Boltz. ("Investor's Daily", 9/21)

"If we had a peaceful environment, the price of oil would be around $23 a barrel," says ROSARIO ILACQUA of ROTHSCHILD. "In an embargo environment, which is what we are in right now, I would say somewhere in the $28 to $33 level, and above that it's all war speculation." (FNN "Marketwrap", 9/20)

"So far this [economic downturn] has not been very sharp to warrant a meeting of the committee" that declares when recessions officially begin and end, says PROF. GEOFFREY MOORE of COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY, who is a member of that group. "I haven't attempted to call any of the other members, and they haven't called me." He says we may currently be in a recession. (CNN "Moneyline", 9/20)

RICHARD HOEY, chief economist at BARCLAYS de ZOETE WEDD RESEARCH, believes the economy went into a recession in August. "It could have started as early as May, but clearly we were into recession by August," he says. "The most likely exit point is the spring of 1991." ("USA Today", 9/21)

IN WASHINGTON:

SENATE MINORITY LEADER ROBERT DOLE, breaking with the BUSH ADMINISTRATION, is suggesting that the capital gains tax cut proposal be considered separately from any deficit-reduction package of spending cuts and tax increases. ("The Washington Post", 9/21)

The KIPLINGER WASHINGTON LETTER has been forecasting a capital gains tax cut for a year and a half. "We continue to believe so," says associate editor KNIGHT KIPLINGER.

"The question is what price the Republicans will have to pay to get capital gains into the package." Kiplinger says the price could be steep, including a trimming of deductions and possibly higher brackets for wealthier taxpayers. (FNN "World Business Update", 9/21)

WILLIAM SEIDMAN, chairman of the RESOLUTION TRUST CORP., is proposing that the federal government provide financing to purchasers of commercial and residential properties to speed the sale of $50 billion in real estates and other assets seized as part of the S&L bailout. "If we don't, then we will sell less property."

PITTSBURGH (SEPT. 21) PR NEWSWIRE - National Intergroup Inc. (NYSE: NII), announced today that it is extending its tender offer for all outstanding Cumulative Convertible Preference Units representing limited partnership interests of Permian Partners, L.P. until 12 midnight (New York City time) on Oct. 5, 1990, subject to NII's right to extend the offer further, and that, in accordance with the terms of the offer, the cash portion of the purchase price under the tender offer has been reduced from $3.85 per Preference Unit, subject to adjustment, to $3.5625 per preference unit, subject to adjustment, to reflect the preferred quarterly distribution of $0.2875 per preference unit which has been declared for the quarter ending Sept. 30, 1990 (the "Third Quarter Distribution").

The offer was previously scheduled to expire at 12 midnight (New York City time), on Sept. 25, 1990. The $3.5625 cash portion of the purchase price will be subject to further reduction by the per preference unit amount of any distributions on the preference units as of a record date subsequent to Oct. 1 1990 and prior to consummation of the offer.

As previously announced, the Third Quarter Distribution will be paid on the earlier of Nov. 30, 1990 or promptly upon the closing of the tender offer to holders of record of preference units on Oct. 1, 1990. NII said that all holders of record of preference units on Oct. 1, 1990 will be entitled to receive the Third Quarter Distribution, regardless of whether they tender their preference units before or after Oct. 1, 1990. NII said that a Third Supplement to its Offer to Purchase containing the revised terms of the tender offer is being filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission today and will be mailed to holders of preference units promptly.

As of the close of business on Sept. 20, 1990, approximately 7,392,752 preference units had been tendered and not withdrawn pursuant to the offer. The offer is conditioned upon, among other things, there being tendered and not withdrawn prior to the expiration of the offer at least 7,875,001 of the publicly-held preference units representing a majority of the publicly-held preference units.

The offer is also conditioned upon, among other things, (i) the adoption of an Amendment to Permian's Partnership Agreement which would permit NII, upon acquiring a majority of the publicly-held preference units pursuant to the tender offer, to purchase all remaining preference units at a price equal to the purchase price paid under the tender offer; and (ii) the issuance of a final unappealable judicial order approving the terms of the previously announced settlement of certain litigation relating to the tender offer. As of the close of business on Sept. 20, 1990, approximately 5,625,618 preference and common units (excluding units held by the General Partner and its affiliates) had consented to the adoption of the Amendment. Adoption of the Amendment requires the valid and unrevoked consents of limited partners (other than the General Partner and any of its affiliates) holding at least 7,889,584 units, acting as a single class. On Sept. 5, 1990 the Delaware Court entered an order approving the terms of the settlement. If that order is not appealed within thirty days after entry of the order, it will become a final unappealable judicial order in satisfaction of the settlement condition.

NORWOOD, MA (SEPT. 21) PR NEWSWIRE - Analog Devices (NYSE: ADI) announced today that its board of directors decided to take a non-operating, non-cash charge of approximately $12 million in the fourth fiscal quarter against its Analog Devices Enterprises venture capital portfolio.

Ray Stata, president and chairman of the board, said, "The near-term liquidity of these investments is limited, based on the soft market and economic climate for early-stage, high-technology companies. Therefore, to give us the greatest flexibility in managing or disposing of these assets, the carrying value of the portfolio is being reduced to a level which, in the company's judgment, approximates its realizable near-term liquidation value. Should we liquidate these investments at a higher value in the future we would see an addition to non-operating income.

"Also," he continued, "the volatile performance of the companies in the portfolio has continued to produce a random and unpredictable impact on Analog Devices' earnings. By taking this action now, we believe that the uncertainty of the impact of the ADE portfolio on Analog's future financial performance will be removed."

This charge is in addition to the previously-announced $12 to $15 million nonrecurring charge the company expects to realize in the fourth quarter as a result of planned restructuring and inventory adjustments following the acquisition of Precision Monolithics.

Joseph Hinchey, senior vice president-finance, said, "Analog Devices remains in a very strong financial condition since these charges are largely non-cash, book value adjustments. Our debt-to-equity ratio following the $60.5 million cash purchase of Precision Monolithics is only 8 percent. Through the first three quarters of fiscal 1990 we generated $40 million in cash, net of capital expenditures, and we expect positive cash flow again in the fourth quarter."

The combined sales of Analog Devices and PMI are currently running at an annual rate of approximately $540 million. Analog Devices is a leading manufacturer of precision high-performance integrated circuits used in analog and digital signal processing applications. The company also manufactures board-level products used in computerized data acquisition and measurement and control applications. The company employs approximately 5,700 people worldwide, and has manufacturing facilities in Massachusetts, California, North Carolina, Ireland, Japan, the Philippines and the United Kingdom.

IRVINE, CALIF. (SEPT. 21) PR NEWSWIRE - Gateway Communications (NASDAQ: GWAY) announced today its plans to discontinue OEM sales of the Novell NetWare operating system, and focus more on providing connectivity products, effective Nov. 1, 1990.

Bert R. Ott, vice president of sales at Gateway explained, "We will continue to support NetWare and participate in Novell's Independent Manufacturers Support Program, so that we can remain compatible with NetWare and address the market in the future.

"In addition, we have been aggressively developing LAN software for non-NetWare operating systems such as Banyan Vines, OS/2 LAN Manager and NetBIOS environments. Many Gateway Remote Network Access products have been compatible with both NetWare and non-NetWare environments for years," he said.

Although Gateway will continue to support NetWare, the decision was made as part of the company's strategy to decrease is dependency on NetWare and lower-margin products, while broadening the scope of operating systems supported by its local and wide area networking products. Gateway and Novell have mutually agreed that it is not in either party's best interest to continue the current vendor/OEM relationship for NetWare.

For the first six months of 1990, Gateway's NetWare sales were $2.1 million, as compared to $2.3 million for the first six months of 1989. Gross profit on NetWare sales during each of these six month periods were $700,000 and $1.1 million, respectively. Gateway does not expect that research and development selling and marketing, and general and administrative expenses will change significantly as a result of the discontinuance of NetWare sales.

The company will continue to provide technical support for those versions of NetWare which it has sold. Those version include: NetWare 386 v3.1, SFT NetWare 286 v2.15c, Advanced NetWare 286 v2.15c, ELS II NetWare v2.15c, ELS I NetWare v2.12 and v2.0a.

MIAMI (SEPT. 21) PR NEWSWIRE - The Grand Bay Management Company has agreed to develop Grand Bay Hotels as part of a group of golf and country club resorts being developed by International Golf Associates of Europe (IGA).

IGA is a Luxembourg-based developer of European golf resorts owning through group subsidiaries properties in Italy, France and Germany.

Grand Bay Management Company (GBMC) is a joint venture of Miami-based TCC and Tobishima Associtess, Ltd.

According to TCC Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Sherwood M. Weiser, Grand Bay Management Company initially will develop and operate seven new European hotels in conjunction with IGA. IGA will manage the golf courses for all of the properties through its operating affiliates, while Grand Bay Management Company will operate the hotels, restaurants, spas, and conference facilities. The initial resort developments include:

Castel del Nero at Florence, Italy, a 45-hole golf development of approximately 900 acres surrounding a 14th century Tuscan castle. The castle is being renovated to house the restaurants, meeting facilities, hotel arrival and reception and related facilities. The other existing buildings, which formerly housed workers and staff for the castle and grounds, will be renovated and converted into 175 luxury hotel rooms and 27 apartments. The tournament-standard golf courses were master planned by Robert Trent Jones Sr. with finalization by Cabell Robinson. Apart from the golf facilities, a full-service sporting club with tennis and spa is planned. Initial construction has started and the complex will be completed in 1993-1994.

Le Golf du Manoir de Soufflenheim, in the Alsace, is located 15 minutes from the famous German town Baden-Baden and will feature a Jack Nicklaus designed 18-hole tournament course, a Jack Nicklaus Golf Academy, tennis and other recreational facilities. Le Manoir de Soufflenheim is planned as a 97-room luxury hotel designed in Alsation tradition by the famous French architect Francois Spoerry. More than 100 luxury apartments, "Les Residences du Manoir de Soufflenheim," are being built next to the golf course and hotel. The resort is scheduled for opening in 1992.

Le Kempferhof at Strasbourg, France, is an old private estate which borders the Rhine River. While carefully respecting the natural beauty of the site, famous golf architect Robert van Hagge has designed a challenging 18-hole championship course with an extension to 27 holes. The 18-hole course was opened in May 1990 and the extension will be started in late 1990. The old mansion house is being renovated to become a fine dining restaurant, and ground will be broken in early 1991 for an 84-room deluxe hotel to be managed by GBMC.

Hof Hausen vor der Sonne by Frankfurt, Germany, will feature 27 holes designed by Cabell Robinson and a 125-room deluxe hotel. The project, located approximately 20 minutes from downtown Frankfurt and encompassing some 350 acres, is scheduled for completion during 1993.

Golf de Saint Phillipe at Cannes/Biot, France, will include a nine-hole course and a Jack Nicklaus Golf Academy surrounding a 92-room hotel. Situated at the famous French Hi-Tech park, Sophia Antipolis and only minutes from the Mediterranean, the project will be completed in 1993.

Gut Ratekau, Germany, on the Baltic coast, is adjacent to the existing 36-hole Timmendorfer Strand golf course. Two new 18-hole golf courses and a 92-room luxury hotel will be constructed on the property. In addition, some 50 apartments will be built overlooking the golf facilities. The golf courses are scheduled for completion in 1992 and 1993, and the hotel and apartments will be open in early 1994.

A project in Rome, Italy, is currently being negotiated. Plans for this project include two championship-standard courses and a club house with 60 club suites. Construction of the project is scheduled to start during 1992 with completion foreseen for 1994.

All of these resorts have a variety of outdoor recreational activities in addition to the golf facilities.

The objective of IGA is to secure only first class properties at capital cities or major business centers in Europe. In line with this, IGA has purchased, leased or is negotiating additional properties in Brussels, Paris, Milan, Berlin, Prague, Budapest and London.

International Golf Associates was founded in the 1980s and in February 1990 increased its capital through a new issue allowing the Amer Group Ltd. of Finland, through its Chicago-based affiliate, Amer Golf Properties, Inc., to become a 25 percent shareholder of the company.

The Amer Group Ltd. is a large public corporation, introduced on the Helsinki and London Exchanges and traded on the NASDAQ in the U.S. As the parent of MacGregor Golf Company and Wilson Sporting Goods Company, The Amer Group is one of the largest manufacturers of golf equipment in the world.

Apart from the individual property companies, IGA includes the Altafide Golf group, specializing in the development and construction of golf courses for IGA as well as for third parties like Club Med. Its Golf Marketing International group handles all marketing of the various projects. Bovis International Ltd. has been retained by IGA as construction manager for the hotel facilities.

Tobishima Associates is a New York subsidiary of Tobishima Corporation of Japan. The parent company is a large and prominent international general engineering and construction firm, listed on the Tokyo Stock Exchange. Tobishima Corporation is in the midst of expanding its global real estate network, with strong commitments to each region in which it conducts business.

VINEYARD, UT (SEPT. 21) PR NEWSWIRE - Geneva Steel (NYSE: GNV) reported net income of $10.3 million for the fourth quarter ended Aug. 31, 1990, or $.69 per common share. This compares with net income of $15.7 million, or $1.27 per common share for the same quarter of the previous fiscal year.

Sales and tons shipped for the period totalled $130.1 million and 360,000 tons respectively, compared with $142.5 million and 361,000 tons in the same quarter of fiscal year 1989.

Joseph A. Cannon, president and chief executive officer, said "Geneva Steel continued to experience a softening in demand for its products and as a result reduced prices in the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990 in order to remain competitive and sustain production volumes. As was the case in the first nine months of fiscal 1990, higher margin plate products helped to minimize the decrease in price realization."

During the year ended Aug. 31, 1990, net income was $41.6 million, or $3.18 per common share, on sales of $517.0 million. This compares with net income of $56.1 million, or $4.28 per common share, on sales of $521.8 million for the same period of fiscal year 1989.

In discussing the results of operations for the year, Cannon said, "Although net income for the current fiscal year is below that of fiscal year 1989, net income was above what was anticipated by the company. In addition, steel tons shipped exceeded the prior fiscal year."

In fiscal year 1990, the company has been actively implementing a modernization program that provides for improvements principally to the company's steel-making, casting and rolling facilities. The company expects these improvements to result in production efficiencies that will enhance its ability to take advantage of the low cost at which it produces iron.

Cannon said, "The first project incorporated into our modernization program was a biological wastewater treatment plant. As projected, the construction of the plant was completed by Aug. 31, 1990. The other modernization projects, which include installing a basic oxygen process facility and a continuous caster with various rolling mill improvements, are generally on target with our implementation schedule."

Geneva Steel owns the only integrated steel mill operating west to the Mississippi River. Located 45 miles south of Salt Lake City, the company's mill manufactures hot rolled sheet, plate and other products for sale primarily in the western and central United States.

Chambers Development Company hosted Pittsburgh Mayor Sophie Masloff, state Sen. Michael Fisher (R-Allegheny), U.S. Rep. William Coyne (D-Pa.), local, state and federal officials and community leaders in the successful inauguration of Pennsylvania's largest recycling facility.

Since August of this year, crews have worked days, nights and weekends to construct the new facility. In August, Chambers was selected by the city as its recycling contractor.

The recycling facility, located at 32nd and Smallman streets, is adjacent to Chambers' American Recycling division, the area's only commercial recycler of corrugated cardboard and office paper.

The 11,000-square-foot building, and its adjacent 21,900-square-foot lot is being be used as the processing facility. A two-story building which abuts the main building will be used for office space.

At the new facility, Chambers has installed a system to to receive, sort and process the incoming recyclables. An infeed conveyor delivers materials to a sorting conveyor, where the various recyclables are removed from the bags, separated and deposited into holding bunkers.

The segregated materials are then prepared for shipment to markets. In addition to conveyors, the facility houses a baler, a magnetic separator, an aluminum flattener and blower, and scales. An eddy current separator, which automatically separates aluminum from the recyclables stream, will be added at a later date.

The facility has the capacity to process approximately 50 tons of recyclables per shift. At least 30 new jobs have been created for each shift of operation. Chambers officials expect the city to produce 75 tons per day of recyclables. The maximum capacity of the center eventually will be 300 tons per day.

JACKSON, MI (SEPT. 21) PR NEWSWIRE - Consumers Power Company will conduct fisheries studies at five sites on the Au Sable River and three sites on the Manistee River, between Sept. 26 and Oct. 19, 1990. The studies are being conducted in order to provide information required by the federal government as part of the hydroelectric plant relicensing process.

The fisheries data will be used to estimate the relative abundance, species composition and population of the fisheries resource in river stretches near Consumers Power's hydro facilities.

Consumers Power's sampling methods include electrofishing, which temporarily stuns fish with an electric pulse, blocking nets, gill nets and shoreline seining. After identifying the fish by species, and recording weight and length measurements, all live fish will be returned to the river. Any fish that are killed will be disposed of in coordination with District Michigan Department of Natural Resources personnel.

"Consumers Power is aware of the public interest in this issue. We have selected fish sampling methods that are the least intrusive to the environment " said the utility's Senior Vice President of Energy Supply Gordon L. Heins. "We believe this is the best environmental approach to obtain the needed fisheries information and will do the most to serve the public interest," said Heins.

"Our study plans respond to the direction provided by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources and the appropriate federal agencies. These agencies understand the necessity of collecting the fisheries data, in order to keep pace with the federal relicensing process," Heins said. Consumers Power is seeking new federal licenses for 11 of its hydro plants, located on the Au Sable, Manistee and Muskegon rivers.

The research will be conducted both daytime and nighttime. Fish sampling is scheduled to begin at a site above the Mio Dam on the Au Sable River on Wednesday, Sept. 26, and conclude on the Manistee River, above the Tippy Dam, on Oct. 19. Adverse weather may cause a delay in the sampling schedule.

In order to protect fall salmon spawning runs, sampling will not be conducted until spring 1991 below the Croton Dam on the Muskegon River, Foote Dam on the Au Sable River, and the Tippy Dam on the Muskegon River.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 21) PR NEWSWIRE - Interwindows, a joint venture among four Soviet entities (the Residential Construction Administration of the Odessa Region Executive Committee; the Main Economic Planning Administration of the Odessa Region Executive Committee; the Odessaenergo Economic Planning Division; and the Primorsk Production State Cooperative Administration) and two U.S. companies (Pioneer Windows Inc. and Semi-Zero Inc.) announced their agreement to join together in the production of modern aluminum windows, doors display windows and light pre-fabricated pavilions and small houses.

"These products are to be manufactured in the Odessa Region of the Ukrainian S.S.R., according to American design and technology," said Vincent J. Amato Jr., president of Pioneer Windows. "The joint venture intends to market the aluminum products in the Soviet Union and elsewhere in Europe for residential, commercial and industrial construction," he added.

Butanko, governor of the Odessa Region of the Ukrainian S.S.R. "The joint venture will benefit from the transfer of the "know-how" of the American partners to the Soviet partners, for the organization of production in the Odessa Region along with the use of American manufacturing equipment," Butanko added. By such transfer of technology and equipment, Interwindows shall seek to achieve its goals of projected production and distribution, initially established at 400,000 aluminum windows for the calendar year 1991.

The Soviet partners have guaranteed to provide the necessary land, buildings, labor, raw material resources and energy. The American partners have guaranteed to provide technology through the latest technical know-how and manufacturing equipment. Together, the Soviet and American partners look toward a successful business venture in the Odessa Region of the Ukrainian S.S.R.

MISSION VIEJO, CALIF. (SEPT. 21) PR NEWSWIRE - Thomas V. Tilton, president of AMDL Incorporated, announced today that AMDL has completed the filing of international patents in 16 foreign countries which include the Western European Community of Nations, in addition to its filings in the United States. The filings cover a variety of test systems for detecting a unique tumor marker released into the blood by all malignant tumors studied to date.

AMDL's initial product will be an inexpensive, non-invasive serum test for monitoring the effectiveness of conventional treatment of a wide variety of tumor types. It is also expected to be used for early detection of occurrence of cancer when it is most treatable. The detection systems may eventually be useful in screening for cancer in asymptomatic subjects, both in clinical and veterinary applications.

AMDL is currently exploring procedures for adapting its test systems to automated instrumentation to provide reliable testing of a large number of specimens. When perfected, selected systems will be screened in first-stage testing programs in prominent national and international research facilities.

Before AMDL can begin marketing its cancer monitoring system, it must obtain FDA approval under a Pre-Market Approval (PMA) application 515 C. PMA is typically a six-month process.

ST. PAUL, MINN. (SEPT. 21) PR NEWSWIRE - Spectrum Diagnostics, Inc., today announced that it has obtained an option on exclusive worldwide rights to commercialize an innovative, patented biosensor technology from The Ares-Serono Group of Geneva, Switzerland.

The new technology, called Surface Plasmon Resonance (SPR), was developed by a research and development partnership under the direction of The Ares-Serono Group's Diagnostics Division.

SPR diagnostic technology employs certain well-established principles of quantum physics and the more recent developments of immunoassay and DNA probe technologies, according to Joseph Shaw, president and chairman of the board of Spectrum Diagnostics. The result is a technology that converts a biological phenomenon to a digital signal that can be used in a variety of applications.

When fully funded, Spectrum Diagnostics will provide instruments and associated disposable testing panels for groups of clinically associated states that usually require multiple tests. An example is sexually transmitted diseases, which includes more than 20 different microorganisms. Other testing panels will test for allergic profiles, thyroid function, cardiovascular function, and others.

Diagnostic tests using SPR technology will be less expensive and easier to use than existing methods, and eliminates the need for additional reagents. The technology's sensitivity enables it to yield accurate results within minutes.

The target market for SPR -- medical diagnostic testing -- surpassed $8.6 billion in 1988 and will exceed $13.66 billion annually by 1995, Shaw said.

Spectrum Diagnostics is a privately held technology development company. It was established in 1989 and plans to continue to develop biosensor technologies. Spectrum Diagnostics is now in negotiations with a number of major international firms interested in licensing the technology or becoming strategic partners with the firm.

MONTVALE, N.J. (SEPT. 21) PR NEWSWIRE - The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, Inc. (NYSE: GAP) announced today that net income for the second quarter ended September 8, 1990 was $36,316,000 or $.95 per share on sales of $2,604,294,000, compared with the prior year's quarter of $35,630,000 or $.93 per share, on sales of $2,590,149,000.

For the 28 weeks year-to-date, net income was $87,323,000 or $2.28 per share on sales of $6,006,984,000 compared with $81,020,000 or $2.12 per share on sales of $6,029,740,000 in the same period of 1989.

The company said that its investment in Isosceles PLC had a net cost of 5 cents per share in the second quarter versus a 1 cent gain in the 1989 second quarter and a net cost of 12 cents per share versus a 1 cent gain for the year-to-date periods.

James Wood, chairman, president and chief executive officer said, "second quarter sales and earnings were slightly ahead of 1989 levels, giving us an 8% earnings increase in the first half of 1990. That increase would have been 14% without the cost associated with the Isosceles investment," he said.

"We continued to experience sluggish sales during the quarter but were able to achieve an overall positive sales trend through more aggressive merchandising efforts. We expect to finalize the acquisition of the 69 store Miracle Mart Division of Steinberg, Inc. in Ontario, Canada during the third quarter, which will help expand our sales base in that very important market," he said.

During the first 28 weeks of 1990, A&P opened 27 new stores, remodeled or enlarged 46 stores and closed 31 older outmoded stores. The company operates 1,211 supermarkets in 25 states and Canada under the A&P, Super Fresh, Walabaum's, Food Emporium, Farmer Jack, Kohl's and Dominion tradenames.

EDISON, NJ (SEPT. 21) PR NEWSWIRE - The board of directors of Midlantic Corporation (NASDAQ-NMS: MIDL) today announced several significant actions taken as a result of current economic conditions and the substantial completion of the examination of the corporation's banks by federal regulatory agencies.

Midlantic Corporation Chairman Robert Van Buren stated, "The conservative actions taken today will help to ensure that Midlantic remains well capitalized and positioned to respond to the economic challenges and opportunities of our marketplace."

Reflecting further declines in real estate values and economic uncertainties compounded by recent developments in the Middle East, the corporation announced a substantial provision for possible loan losses in the third quarter amounting to approximately $285 million.

Midlantic expects total non-performing assets, consisting of non- performing loans and net other real estate owned, to be approximately $1.220 billion at Sept. 30, 1990, compared to $924 million at June 30, 1990. The reserve for possible loan losses at the end of the third quarter is projected to be approximately $700 million, 76 percent of non-performing loans. At June 30, 1990, the reserve totaled $550 million. As a result of this action, the corporation anticipates reporting a net loss of between $150 million and $160 million for the three months ended Sept. 30, 1990, or $3.96 to $4.22 per common share on a fully diluted basis.

Van Buren said, "We believe that the continued strengthening of reserves in the third quarter is prudent based on existing market conditions."

In view of these anticipated results, the board of directors declared a quarterly dividend of 25 cents per common share, compared to 47 cents per share for the previous quarter. The dividend is payable on Oct. 15, 1990, to shareholders of record at the close of business on Oct. 1.

Commenting on the decision to reduce the quarterly dividend, Van Buren said, "This action was taken with full consideration given to the importance of the dividend to our shareholders. However, the board recognizes that Midlantic's capital must be adequate to accommodate the corporation's future growth and to reflect the changing regulatory environment requiring higher capital levels for the banking industry."

Van Buren noted that Midlantic's results over the previous decade have reflected strong profitability and a sound financial condition. "The corporation expects to return to profitability in the fourth quarter."

The board of directors also declared the third quarter dividend payable on shares of the corporation's term adjustable rate cumulative preferred stock, Series A.

Midlantic Corporation is a $24 billion interstate bank holding company headquartered in Edison. The company operates a network of 510 offices primarily in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and New York.

With respect to the ACR shares received, Primark is restricted from selling, transferring or assigning these shares for a period of one year from the receipt of the shares. After such time, Primark may, at its option, request ACR to sell the shares for which Primark will receive a price of not less than $14.00 nor more than $15.50 per share. DENVER (SEPT. 21) PR NEWSWIRE - EAC Industries, Inc. (AMEX: EAC) today reported a loss from continuing operations of $1,242,000, or 63 cents per share, on sales of $6,042,000 for the second quarter ended July 31, 1990. This compares to a loss of $91,000, or 5 cents per share, on sales of $8,406,000 for the same period of the prior year. For the second quarter of the prior year, EAC lost $431,000 or 22 cents per share from discontinued operations. The total loss for the quarter was $522,000 or 27 cents per share for 1989 as compared to a loss of $1,242,000 or 63 cents per share for 1990.

For the six month period ended July 31, 1990, the company lost $4,887,000 or $2.49 per share, on continuing operations as compared to $358,000 or 19 cents per share, for the same period last year. For the last year's six month period there was a loss of $431,000 on discontinued operations. The total loss per share for the six month period was $2.49 as compared to a 41 cent loss for the same period last year.

The loss for the second quarter from continuing operations of $1,242,000 was substantially less than the $3,645,000 loss reported in the first quarter primarily because of improved operations at the company's Ideal Security Hardware subsidiary. In the first quarter, Ideal lost $3,127,000, whereas in the second quarter the loss narrowed to $790,000. The substantial loss in the first quarter and the continuing loss in the second quarter were primarily the result of production cutbacks, which resulted from Ideal's inability to obtain raw materials, and certain other restructuring costs, including a loss on the disposition of the former manufacturing facility in St. Paul, Minn. As previously reported, the company completed a financial restructuring at the end of May and vendors began shipping raw materials again in June. This enabled Ideal to substantially increase production at its manufacturing facility and as a result, Ideal's loss was substantially less in the second quarter. In fact, on an unaudited basis Ideal generated a modest ($55,000) profit in July.

The company's other subsidiary, Goodren Products Corporation, continued to perform in a superior manner in the second quarter. Goodren's unaudited operating earnings increased by 32 percent ($246,000 compared to $186,000) for the quarter ended July 31, 1990, as compared to the prior year's quarter and 56 percent ($530,000 compared to $340,000) for the six months ended July 31, 1990 as compared to the prior year. This earnings improvement is primarily attributable to the increased sales activity by Goodren's major customers.

EAC is a holding company serving the hardware and point-of-purchase advertising markets through its subsidiary companies, Ideal Security Hardware and Goodren Products Corporation.

CHICAGO (SEPT. 21) PR NEWSWIRE - United Airlines announced today it will participate in a scientific study of aircraft wake vortices that could lead to a significant increase in capacity at busy airports.

The study of the hazardous effects of vortices -- small masses of swirling air that trail off the wingtips of aircraft -- will be conducted at the National Oceanic Atmospheric Administration Test Facility in Idaho Falls, Idaho, beginning Sept. 23.

"United Airlines believes the potential benefit of this scientific test -- proving that airport capacity can be increased 5 to 10 percent by safely reducing the separation between planes -- justifies its contribution of aircraft and crew members for this study," said James M. Guyette, executive vice president-operations.

United will make a Boeing 757-200, a Boeing 767-200 and a Boeing 727-200 aircraft and flight test crews available to the Federal Aviation Administration which is conducting the tests under a contract from the U.S. Department of Commerce.

The tests will be carried out both at low altitude and at a typical cruise altitude over a four-hour period for each aircraft.

The low altitude test will utilize a 200-foot instrumented tower equipped with smoke emission capability and special sensors to measure the speed, direction and persistence of the vortices as the aircraft flies past. The ability to emit multi-color smoke from the tower as the plane flies by allows a visual and photographic study of the dynamics of vortex movement and decay.

The tests will be conducted within reserved airspace about 40 miles west of Idaho Falls in daylight, visual flight rules (VFR) conditions. Winds must be below 20 miles per hour.

A second test at cruise altitude will employ two aircraft, the United aircraft and an FAA A-4 Skyhawk probe jet modified for this purpose.

The test results will be used in a new classification of aircraft for air traffic control purposes and in the design of a vortex warning system to be installed at busy airports.

This compares with $247,181,000, or $3.10 per share, for the 12 months ended Aug. 31, 1989.

Kilowatt-hour sales of electricity for the eight months ended Aug. 31, 1990, increased less than 1 percent from the comparable period last year. However, residential sales increased 2.2 percent, reflecting an increase in the number of customers which was partially offset by warmer winter weather.

The total volume of gas sold during the current eight-month period decreased 7.2 percent from the same period last year. The decrease in sales was primarily related to milder winter weather and decreased usage by our commercial and industrial customers.

Earnings from diversified business activities primarily represent the results of operations of Constellation Holdings Inc. and its subsidiaries. Lower earnings from diversified business activities for both periods are primarily attributable to the timing of income recognition on alternative energy systems and lower income from real estate projects and financial investments. During the remainder of 1990, earnings from diversified business activities are expected to improve but are not expected to reach the earnings achieved during calendar year 1989.

NEW YORK, (SEPT. 21) PR NEWSWIRE - Apparel America, Inc., a manufacturer of women's swimwear and specialty sportswear apparel, today reported decreases in net sales for the fiscal second quarter and the six-month period ended July 31 1990. The decrease in sales was primarily attributable to the cessation of operations of a former subsidiary, Primo Designs, effective Oct. 1, 1989.

Net sales for the three months ended July 31, 1990, were $23,771,000 compared to $26,998,000 in the comparable fiscal period in 1989. Operating income was $531,000, compared to operating income of $537,000 in the year-ago quarter. The loss before income taxes amounted to $686,000, compared to a loss before income taxes of $980,000 in the prior year.

The company had a net loss of $656,000, or 11 cents per common share, compared with a net loss of $920,000, or 23 cents per common share, for the year-ago period. The net loss per common share in the three months ended July 31, 1990 has been computed after the recognition of preferred stock dividend requirements. At July 31, 1990, there were an additional 1,087,000 average common shares outstanding.

Net sales for the six months ended July 31, 1990, were $50,937,000, compared to $58,760,000 for the comparable fiscal period in 1989. Operating income was $4,031,000, compared to $5,056,000 in the prior year's fiscal period. Income before income taxes was $1,437,000, compared to $2,999,000 in the prior year.

Net income was $1,357,000, or 15 cents per common share, compared with $2,384,000, or 24 cents per common share, in the six-month period last year. Net income per common share has been computed after the recognition of preferred stock dividend requirements and reflects an additional 1,289,000 average common share outstanding.

Robert C. Postal, president and chief operating officer, said Apparel America's performance was adversely affected by the continued turmoil and contraction within the retail community. Further, the sluggish retail business climate, a highly promotional environment combined with certain credit restraints, resulted in reduced deliveries.

Postal said that both its Robby Len and Mayfair divisions were unable to fully offset margin deterioration caused by selected production curtailments in response to these factors.

Additionally, Apparel America's results include an increase in its provision for bad debts of approximately $225,000, attributable to the Ames bankruptcy proceedings. Postal further stated that interest and financing costs increased by approximately $492,000, principally due to the inclusion for a full six months of borrowings incurred to finance the acquisition of Mayfair Industries (acquired May 15, 1989), which was partially offset by a reduction in acquisition related borrowings resulting from the exchange, effective Jan. 31, 1990, of an aggregate of $12,000,000 principal amount of subordinated notes into an equivalent amount of $12 preferred Series E stock.

Postal indicated that management is cautiously optimistic about the remainder of fiscal year 1991.

DES MOINES, IA (SEPT. 21) PR NEWSWIRE - Oliver H. Hagen, president and chief executive officer, announced today that First Interstate of Iowa Inc. (NASDAQ: FIIA), a multi-bank holding company, will charge off $2.1 million of loans in the third quarter of 1990. In addition, as of Sept. 30, 1990, the company will report increases in nonperforming loans of $7.2 million and other real estate owned of $2.7 million. The company's net charged off loans for the first six months of 1990 totaled $.2 million. At June 30, 1990, nonperforming loans and other real estate owned were $8.9 million and $1.3 million, respectively.

Hagen stated, "Such an increase in charged off loans and nonperforming assets is very disappointing. However, a significant portion of our consolidated loan portfolio has been examined by the company's loan review team thus far in 1990. The loans that recently have been identified as loss or nonperforming are relatively few and are believed to be exceptions to the high credit quality of the company's loan portfolio."

The recognition of the additional charged off loans and increases in nonperforming loans and other real estate owned resulted from management's analysis of the credit quality of the loan portfolio of the company's Des Moines bank and from recent examinations of that bank by the company's loan review team and by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency. A major portion of the charge offs resulted from a commercial real estate loan which was treated as an in-substance foreclosure and will be reported as other real estate owned. The remaining charged off loans primarily consisted of commercial loans.

Due to the increased amount of nonperforming loans and the possibility of a national economic slowdown, the company will maintain the approximate amount of its June 30, 1990 allowance for loan losses by recording a $2 million provision for loan losses in the third quarter of 1990. The company anticipates the allowance for loan losses will exceed 85 percent of nonperforming loans at Sept. 30, 1990. In addition, the company will charge to operations $.5 million of interest income recognized in 1990 on loans that either have been charged off or placed on nonaccrual status.

Hagen concluded his remarks by noting, "Our disappointment over the temporary setback does not diminish our optimism concerning the long-term prospects of the company. The Iowa economy is in good condition, although it could be affected by the world-wide political situation. The company is well-positioned and strongly capitalized, enabling it to play a vital role in the future development of Iowa and to take advantage of existing market opportunities."

First Interstate of Iowa owns controlling interest in 13 Iowa banks, a computer services company and an insurance agency. The banks operate 33 locations in numerous Iowa cities including Algona, Cresco, Des Moines, Estherville, Fort Dodge, Greenfield, Kalona, Marengo, Mason City, Sigourney, Sioux City, Spencer and Urbandale.

MORRIS TOWNSHIP, NJ (SEPT. 21) PR NEWSWIRE - Allied-Signal Inc. (NYSE: ALD) said today that the U.S. Trade Representative and Japan's Ministry of International Trade and Industry have reached an agreement that will open the Japanese market to the company's patented amorphous metal alloys.

"We are pleased that the USTR, with the strong support of the Department of Commerce and other U.S. agencies, has been successful in these precedent-setting negotiations with MITI," said Allied-Signal Chairman and CEO Edward L. Hennessy, Jr. "The successful opening of the Japanese market to this critical technology signals a new atmosphere of cooperation on matters of trade between our two countries."

The USTR began negotiations with MITI in April after Allied-Signal agreed to temporarily withdraw its petition for relief from unfair targeting of amorphous metals under 301 of the Trade Act of 1974. Allied-Signal said today it will not refile this petition.

Under terms of the trade agreement, Japanese utilities will purchase 32,000 electric transformers containing amorphous metal cores over the next 30 months.

After this initial period, the Japanese utilities will recognize the value of energy efficiency in the purchase of electrical transformers. The Japanese government will oversee implementation of the agreement.

In addition, the agreement provides that Japanese utilities, as well as Nippon Steel Corporation and Kawasaki Steel Corporation, will strictly observe Allied-Signal's patent rights, which give Allied-Signal the exclusive right to manufacture and sell amorphous metal in Japan, until late 1997.

Allied-Signal's amorphous metal alloys, marketed under the name Metglas, are used in the cores of electric transformers, where they cut energy losses by 70 percent.

The Japan Research and Development Corp., an arm of the Japanese government, has acknowledged that the use of such transformers would save 4.3 billion kilowatt hours of electricity, worth $1 billion, annually.

Allied-Signal operates the world's only commercial plant to manufacture amorphous metal alloys and sells the material in the United States and other countries. Allied-Signal has a joint venture in Japan with five companies of the Mitsui Group to market Metglas alloys there.

The potential world market for amorphous alloys in transformers is $1 billion a year and more than $2.5 billion per year for other applications. In addition, the technology upon which the material is based, also patented by Allied-Signal, is expected to have wide use in the production of high performance aerospace and structural materials.

Allied-Signal is an advanced technology company with businesses in aerospace, automotive products and engineered materials.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 21) PR NEWSWIRE - James Madison Limited today reported that it anticipates a loss for the third quarter due to two recent developments which it believes to be material to stockholders.

The company disclosed in its Second Quarter Report that it had foreclosed on a resort loan and was carrying this asset in "Other Real Estate Owned." The transaction was recorded in compliance with generally accepted accounting principles and the value was supported by an independent appraisal. Rather than operate the resort, the company, on Sept. 10, 1990, elected to accept an offer from an established resort owner/operator. This action resulted in a $1.0 million pre-tax loss which will be recorded in the third quarter 1990.

In a separate matter, the company has continued to carefully manage and monitor its loan portfolios, particularly real estate based credits. Continuing trends in the mid-Atlantic real estate market have resulted in increased non-accrual loans. While the compilation of third quarter results is in its early stages, preliminary indications are that the company may need to double its Allowance for Loan Losses from the $12.6 million recorded at

Recordation of these transactions in the third quarter will have two additional ramifications. First, the company will receive tax benefits in excess of 40 percent of any loss reflected in pre-tax income. This benefit is derived from the company's long history of earnings and significant tax payments. Second, the company's primary capital ratio, while reduced to approximately 9 percent, will remain above the regulatory minimum of 5.5 percent.

VANCOUVER, BC CANADA, (SEPT. 21) PR NEWSWIRE - Akiko-Lori Gold Resources Ltd. (Akiko-Lori) announces assay results for two diamond drill holes completed on the Lakewater Project which is centered some five kilometres southwest of the Eskay Creek 21 Zone Deposits. The Lakewater Project is an equal joint venture between Akiko-Lori, Tymar Resources Inc. and Varitech Resources Ltd.

The two drill holes were a part of the $100,000 1990 Phase I exploration program which also consisted of linecutting, soil geochem sampling, prospecting, geologic mapping and various geophysical surveys including VLF, Magnetometer, UTEM and IP. Legal surveying of the property boundaries was initiated during this phase of exploration. It has resulted in the locating of two sizeable gaps within the adjacent SIB Claims which are owned by Silver Butte Resources Ltd. and American Fibre Corp. Ownership of the westerly portions of the underlying ground within the two SIB Claim Gaps belongs to the Lakewater Project Property.

The two drill holes, separated by 450 metres, partially completed a stratigraphic evaluation across the eastern portion of the Lakewater Property along Section 14+50S. Drill hole LW90-01 returned no significant results. Drill hole LW90-02 returned 1.197 ounces per ton gold and 1.71 ounces per ton silver over a core length of 9.8 feet from 301.8 to 311.6 feet. Further drilling is required to determine the orientation and true width of the mineralized horizon encountered in drill hole LW90-02.

The $250,000 1990 Phase II exploration program is now under way and will include grid extensions, geological mapping, continuation of geophysical surveys and some 1,000 metres of diamond drilling. Drilling targets will include follow-up testing of the results obtained in drill hole LW90-02 both down dip and along strike, as well as drilling coincident IP Chargeability - Soil Geochem anomalies and coincident Airborne Magnetic Trends - UTEM conductors.

WASHINGTON, (SEPT. 21) PR NEWSWIRE - The Office of Thrift Supervision (OTS) today placed Texas Commercial Savings Association, Sulphur Springs, Texas, in receivership and chartered a new federal mutual institution to take its place.

The new institution, Texas Commercial Federal Savings Association, will assume certain assets and liabilities of the old thrift, and will operate in conservatorship under the oversight of the Resolution Trust Corp.

The receivership did not result in any interruption of Texas Commercial's day-to-day operations. The institution will remain open for business as usual. Holders of insured accounts are not affected by the action, which was taken by OTS to protect insured depositors and the interests of the thrift insurance fund. Deposits remain insured to the $100,000 legal limit.

OTS initiated the action because Texas Commercial was operating in an unsafe and unsound condition in that it had insufficient capital with no prospect of replenishment without federal assistance.

Texas Commercial's condition is due primarily to poor underwriting, a high level of non-performing assets, and losses on multiple family mortgages and commercial non-mortgage loans.

Texas Commercial is insolvent in that it has negative tangible capital. Texas Commercial Savings Association was a state-chartered stock association. Shareholders will retain no interest in the new institution.

As of July 31, 1990, Texas Commercial reported assets of $27.4 million, liabilities of $27.1 million and tangible capital of negative $95,000, for a tangible capital-to-assets ratio of negative .004 percent.

MOSCOW (SEPT. 21) TASS - "IN SPITE OF RAPIDLY GROWING HOUSING CONSTRUCTION FOR THE SOVIET ARMED FORCES, THERE ARE NOW STILL MORE THAN 173,000 COMMISSIONED AND NONCOMMISSIONED OFFICERS, AS WELL AS EXTENDED SERVICEMEN, WAITING FOR APARTMENTS," DEPUTY DEFENCE MINISTER, COLONEL-GENERAL NIKOLAI CHEKOV, RESPONSIBLE FOR HOUSING CONSTRUCTION AND BILLETING, TOLD TASS TODAY. HE WAS DISCUSSING THE PROGRAM ADOPTED BY THE SOVIET DEFENSE MINISTRY TO SOLVE THE HOUSING PROBLEM.

GENERAL CHEKOV NOTED THAT WITH THE WITHDRAWAL OF SOVIET TROOPS FROM CZECHOSLOVAKIA AND HUNGARY THERE WILL BE 25,000 SERVICE FAMILIES WITHOUT HOUSING. "THE SITUATION WILL BE AGGRAVATED BY THE FORTHCOMING WITHDRAWAL OF UNITS OF THE WESTERN ARMY GROUP FROM GERMANY, WHERE 63,000 FAMILIES HAVE NO FLATS OF THEIR OWN ON SOVIET TERRITORY," HE STRESSED.

CHEKOV SAID THAT OVER 10,000 SERVICE FAMILIES OF THE MOSCOW GARRISON WERE NOW LODGED IN RENTED FLATS, HOTELS AND HOSTELS. MOST OF THEM HAVE BEEN WAITING FOR THEIR OWN APARTMENT OR IMPROVED HOUSING CONDITIONS FOR THREE TO FIVE OR MORE YEARS. "THE MOSCOW CITY COUNCIL OWES THE DEFENSE MINISTRY 2,200 APARTMENTS. IT RECEIVED ONLY 16 APARTMENTS THIS YEAR," CHEKOV NOTED.

TURNING TO THE PROGRAM, THE DEPUTY MINISTER SAID THAT 100,000 FLATS WOULD BE BUILT BY THE END OF 1991. "BUT THIS IS OBVIOUSLY INSUFFICIENT," HE NOTED. ACCORDING TO THE GENERAL, THE HOUSING PROBLEM IS EXPECTED TO BE SOLVED PRIMARILY BY STEPPING UP THE CONSTRUCTION OF APARTMENT BLOCKS. PLANS ARE AFOOT TO COMMISSION 436,000 APARTMENTS BETWEEN 1991-1996, INCLUDING 25,000 APARTMENTS FOR SERVICEMEN WITHDRAWN FROM CZECHOSLOVAKIA AND HUNGARY.

"THE HOUSING PROBLEM COULD BE SOLVED MORE QUICKLY IF THE LOCAL COUNCILS WOULD PROVIDE THE DEFENSE MINISTRY WITH THE 24,500 APARTMENTS THEY OWE FOR 1990-1991 " CHEKOV STRESSED.

(SEPT. 21) UPI - The Persian Gulf crisis has governments around the world trying to re-adjust their energy supplies and bolster their economies. European countries are imposing austerity measures, and President Bush is said to be pondering a move on the Strategic Petroleum Reserve. Some economists say drawing on the reserve could calm jittery oil markets.

Lawyers for Charles Keating argued in court Thursday that his bail should be reduced from its current level of five-Million dollars, but the disgraced Lincoln Savings operator is spending a third night in a Los Angeles jail. The lawyers pledged that Keating would NOT flee the country, and presented testimony showing he is more than five-Million dollars in debt. But they got NO immediate results.

Colombian national police believe that a recent rash of kidnappings is an attempt on the part of the cocaine cartel to pressure the government into negotiations. Among those missing is Francisco Santos, news editor of the nation's largest newspaper. President Cesar Gaviria met with the National Security Council Thursday to discuss the crisis.

Nine months after the U-S invasion, Panama is far from being a happy, unified nation. Hundreds of protesters marched in Panama City Thursday to mark the nine-month anniversary of the invasion and to call for the withdrawal of U-S troops. More than 500 Panamanians were killed in the fighting last December, and some protesters carried placards bearing the names of the dead.

BOGOTA, COLOMBIA (SEPT. 21) UPI - The recent kidnapping of three people related to prominent Colombians may be part of a cocaine cartel plan to pressure the government in the nation's war with drug traffickers, police said.

Francisco Santos, news editor of Colombia's largest circulation newspaper, El Tiempo, was kidnapped Wednesday night by armed men who killed a bodyguard. Santos is the son of Hernando Santos, publisher of the paper owned by the prominent Santos family.

Also kidnapped Wednesday was the sister of a former top government official. Others still missing were Diana Turbay de Uribe, daughter of former President Julio Turbay, and five journalists who disappeared Aug. 30.

Gen. Nassin Yanine Diaz, National Police commander for Bogota, said officials were working on the assumption the cases were related and part of a plan to pressure the government to negotiate with cocaine cartel leaders.

''It is one of the aspects we are evaluating,'' Yanine told the radio station RCN. ''If it is a plan put in place to pressure the government to look for a solution then we can say the cases are related. But up to now, we are evaluating this. I believe that we, as policemen, have to be working with this hypothesis.''

Kidnapping, widespread in the South American nation, is a major way guerrilla groups finance their activities, and is used frequently by common criminals as well as the drug gangs.

The spate of kidnappings is the first crisis faced by President Cesar Gaviria, who took office Aug. 7 looking to end a war between the government and the powerful Medellin cartel of cocaine traffickers.

Gaviria met Thursday in a special session of the National Security Council to discuss the situation but took no extraordinary actions, officials said.

A caller to El Tiempo claimed the three missing people were in the hands of the Medellin cartel, the newspaper said. The callers claims could not be confirmed.

But El Tiempo also cited unnamed intelligence sources that said the cartel has created work teams in Bogota, Medellin and Cali in order to ''carry out actions aginst political personalities and top government officials.''

A guerrilla group called the National Liberation Army was working with the cartel and had carried out the three kidnappings, the newspaper said.

Gaviria on Sept. 5 announced a peace plan by which drug traffickers and others who committed acts of violence could turn themselves in and confess to their crimes. In return, they could receive a reduced sentence and would be ineligible for extradition to the United States.

The caller to El Tiempo said the cartel rejected the government offer and said ''no one, absolutely no one is thinking of turning himself in,'' the newspaper said. The caller also said the cartel wanted a ''political treatment'' similar to that received by guerrilla groups.

The kidnappings disturbed a period of relative peace that began just before Gaviria took office, when the Medellin cartel declared an end to its bombings and killings. The peace declaration appeared aimed at pressuring the government to end extradition and reach an agreement with the cartel.

Santos, 28, was kidnapped by armed men who stopped his vehicle and killed his bodyguard. No demands had been received Thursday, officials said.

Hours before, Marina Montoya de Perez was kidnapped from a Bogota restaurant. She is the sister of the former secretary-general of the presidency under the past administration, German Montoya.

During the term of former President Virgilio Barco, Montoya's son, businessman Alvaro Montoya, was kidnapped by the Medellin cartel. He was released after talks between the cartel and the government.

In other cases, Turbay de Uribe, owner of a television news program and a magazine, left Bogota Aug. 30 to try to obtain an interview with the leader of a leftist guerrilla group. She and five other people have not been heard from since.

Bogota newspapers have reported she may be in the hands of Pablo Escobar, the fugitive Medellin cartel kingpin. But her father said Wednesday there was no evidence she had been kidnapped and that she may still be working on a project for the station and magazine.

(SEPT. 21) UPI - Around the world... around the clock... U-P-I has the latest news. .

The Bush administration is considering a major arms sale to Saudi Arabia to meet additional needs caused by the tense stalemate in the Persian Gulf. One administration proposal puts the sale figure at 20- BILLION dollars, but a White House aide says only that the cost would be ''significant.'' The weapons sale package is NOT expected to be presented to Congress until the administration has more information. .

Soaring oil prices resulting from the Persian Gulf crisis are having an impact on world stock markets. Prices fell in New York Thursday, with the Dow Jones dropping to its lowest close since August 23rd. Stocks also fell in London, Frankfurt, Tokyo and Taipei. Higher oil prices and rising interest rates are increasing the possibility of recession.

Police in Colombia think a wave of kidnappings of people related to prominent Colombians might be part of a plan by the cocaine cartels. The national police commander for Bogota says the recent abductions apparently are an attempt to pressure the government to negotiate with drug lords.

Lawmakers in Bonn sang the German national anthem yesterday after the West German parliament ratified a bilateral treaty settling details of German unification. The East German parliament also ratified the document. German unification is to take place on October 3rd.

NASA says the shuttle Columbia is grounded until at least late November. That will allow time for launch of the shuttle Discovery on October 5th, and for a flight by Atlantis about November 7th. (SEPT. 21) UPI - Buck Rogers' doubts aside, the Montreal Expos are suddenly in a pennant race.

Chris Nabholz fired a one-hitter for his first major league shutout Thursday to lead the Expos to their sixth straight win, a 2-0 decision over the New York Mets that gave Montreal a sweep of their double- header.

In the first game, Andres Galarraga snapped a tie with a sacrifice fly and the Expos scored four runs in the eighth inning for a 6-4 victory.

The Expos' six straight wins - three against the first-place Pittsburgh Pirates and three against the Mets - moved the Expos to within 4 1-2 games of the top of the NL East and dropped the Mets 2 1-2 games behind Pittsburgh.

Still, Rogers is downplaying his teams' pennant surge.

''Before we're taken seriously, we gotta' pass somebody and get into second place,'' Rodgers said. ''Hopefully we can play well enough to pass them (Mets). We've got a big four-game series in Philadelphia this week. This was a great series for us.''

For the Mets, it further exposed their vulnerability to left-handed pitching.

Montreal started two left-handers who began the season in Double A, and came away with two wins. New York fell to 24-29 against southpaw starters.

It won't get any easier for the Mets. They face left-hander Steve Wilson Friday in Chicago.

''We dug ourselves a couple of holes this year,'' New York Manager Bud Harrelson said. ''We bounced back early in the season and again after the All-Star Game.''

Any combination of Pirate victories and New York losses totalling 11 would eliminate the Mets. Pittsburgh's magic number is nine for ousting the Expos.

New York plays 10 of its last 13 games on the road, including its final three against Pittsburgh. The Pirates play nine of their last 12 at home.

New York's Dave Magadan reflected on what the Mets squandered in going 5-5 on their last major homestand.

''Pittsburgh loses six in a row ...,'' he said. ''We've had our opportunities.''

Nabholz, 6-0, took a no-hitter into the sixth before Tom Herr singled with two out.

''It's a pitch I wanted to throw,'' Nabholz said of the ball Herr hit. ''So I have no regrets.''

Sid Fernandez, 9-14, took the loss despite allowing just two hits in six innings.

The Expos got all the runs they would need in the fourth. Tim Raines walked and scored on singles by Galarraga and Tim Wallach. Mike Fitzgerald walked to load the bases and Marquis Grissom lined a sacrifice fly to right.

''Montreal has everything to gain and nothing to lose,'' New York's Keith Miller said.

Galarraga's eighth-inning fly to shallow center delivered Raines in the opener making a winner of reliever Mel Rojas, 3-1. Tim Burke pitched two innings for his 20th save. The loss went to Frank Viola, 19- 10, who entered the eighth with a two-run lead. John Franco blew a save opportunity for New York.

Elsewhere in the National League: Pittsburgh crushed Chicago 11-2; San Francisco topped Atlanta 5-3, Houston edged Cincinnati 3-2, St. Louis nipped Philadelphia 5-4 and Los Angeles crowned San Diego 7-2.

In the American League; Cleveland pasted New York 12-7 and Seattle downed Chicago 7-3.

-- AROUND THE NL --

Pirates 11, Cubs 2

At Chicago, Andy Van Slyke hit two home runs, driving in three runs, and Barry Bonds hit his 32nd homer to power the Pirates. Bob Walk, 6-5, posted his first victory since July 20, allowing five hits over 5 1-3 innings, including Ryne Sandberg's NL-leading 37th home run. Bonds's homer, a two-run blast in the eighth, was his third in his last six at- bats. Randy Kramer, fell to 0-3.

Giants 5, Braves 3

At Atlanta, Mike Laga's two-run pinch-hit homer in the sixth helped Eric Gunderson earn his first major-league victory. With the score tied 2-2 and one out, Jose Uribe singled off John Smoltz, 13-10 and Laga, batting for Gunderson 1-2, hit his second homer of the season. Rick Reuschel earned his first save sinc 1985 with four-innings of three-hit relief.

Astros 3, Reds 2

At Houston, Pinch hitter Carl Nichols lined a bases-loaded, two-run single with two out in the bottom of the ninth to rally Houston. Nichols, batting for winning pitcher Javier Hernandez, lined the first pitch off Randy Myers, 3-5, to send the Reds to their third straight setback. Hernandez, 2-0, retired the side in order in the ninth to pick up the victory.

Cardinals 5, Phillies 4

At St. Louis, Rookie pinch hitter Ray Lankford's RBI single capped a three-run ninth inning rally to lift St. Louis. Roger McDowell, 6-8, took the loss. Mike Perez, 1-0, pitched the ninth to pick up his first major league win. Lenny Dykstra went 1 for 5 and is now batting .330. Willie McGee leads the NL with a .335 average.

Dodgers 7, Padres 2

At Los Angeles, Ramon Martinez tossed a six-hit complete game and Alfredo Griffin and Mike Scioscia drove in two runs apiece to help move Los Angeles within 3 1-2 games of the Cincinnati Reds in the National League West. Martinez, 19-6, hurled his major league-leading 11th complete game. Andy Benes 10-9, took the loss.

-- AROUND THE AL --

Indians 12, Yankees 7

At New York, Carlos Baerga had a triple and three of Cleveland's nine doubles to pace the Indians. Brook Jacoby added two doubles, a single and and two RBI for the Indians. Mike Walker, 2-6, picked up the win while Rich Monteleone, 0-1 was the loser.

Mariners 7, White Sox 3

At Seattle, Henry Cotto drove in four runs with a two-run triple and a two-run homer and Erik Hanson pitched a complete game for the Mariners. Hanson, 16-9, scattered eight hits in posting his third complete game. Greg Hibbard, 13-9, allowed six runs over five innings.

BANGKOK, THAILAND (SEPT. 21) UPI - A typhoon flinging winds up to 72 mph dumped up to 14 inches of rain on central Vietnam, killing at least seven people, the Vietnam News Agency reported.

The agency, in a dispatch dated Thursday, said six people were killed Tuesday in Quang Nam-Da Nang province, 360 miles south of Hanoi where the wind was recorded at 72 mph.

In the nearby city of Hue one person was drowned and 15 others injured as 12 to 14 inches of rain swelled the Perfume River and flooded the city.

The report said more than 150 houses were heavily damaged along with thousands of acres of rice fields.

BANGKOK, THAILAND (SEPT. 21) UPI - Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen has asked the United Nations to invite representatives of all Cambodian factions to attend the current U.N. General Assembly session despite the failure of the Cambodians to agree on a delegation, official Phnom Penh radio reported.

The radio, in a broadcast Thursday night, said Hun Sen has sent a telegram to U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar and the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council describing the failure of this week's Supreme National Council meeting to name a joint U.N. delegation.

The SNC was created to try bringing peace to warring Cambodia. Its talks collapsed earlier this week after it could not find a way to establish a leadership for the council.

''I would like your excellencies to kindly invite the SNC members to participate in the present session of the U.N. General Assembly in order to solve at least one urgent and primordial question,'' Hun Sen said in a text of the telegram read on the radio.

The move appeared to be an effort to give the Vietnamese-installed government representation at the United Nations for the first time despite the impasse in the SNC.

The resistance has held onto Cambodia's U.N. seat despite the Vietnamese invasion that ousted the leading resistance group - the Khmer Rouge - from power in January 1979.

The 12-member SNC, which includes all four battling Cambodian factions, is the key to a comprehensive U.N. peace plan meant to end the fighting that has sputtered in Cambodia ever since.

The council was formally established and held its first meeting in Bangkok on Monday. It was scheduled to name a joint delegation to the United Nations, but the meeting collapsed amid differences over the chairmanship of the council.

LOS ANGELES (SEPT. 21) UPI - Actor Corey Feldman was released from jail early Friday following his second arrest this year on charges of heroin possession, authorities said.

Feldman, 19, of Beverly Hills, was arrested on several outstanding traffic warrants about 4:30 p.m. Thursday, and officers found a small amount of heroin during a booking search.

Feldman was released about 1:50 a.m. from Van Nuys Jail after posting $5,000 bail on the heroin count and paying the $729 fine on the traffic warrants.

The arrest occurred in front of a friend's home in North Hollywood where a neighbor had reported someone trying to break into a 1988 BMW. Police determined no crime had been committed when they found Feldman in his girlfriend's car, Lt. Gary Hallden said.

But police discovered Feldman had three outstanding traffic warrants worth $729 and arrested him and allegedly found two ballons containing 0.03 grams of heroin during a booking search at the North Hollywood police station, Hallden said.

The actor was arrested on a felony count of suspicion of possessing a controlled substance.

''It is our opinion it was for his own personal use,'' Hallden said.

On March 10, Feldman was arrested after police stopped him in downtown Los Angeles for a traffic violation and found heroin in his car.

He was charged with one felony count of possession of heroin for sale after police found 25 balloons of a powder believed to be heroin.

Following that arrest, Feldman underwent a drug rehabilitation program, said Feldman publicist Michael Levine.

Feldman is best known for his role in the movies, ''Stand By Me,'' and most recently ''The 'Burbs.''

Feldman has performed in movies and commercials since he was a child. He has had acting stints in the television series ''Mork and Mindy, ''''Mork and Mindy, TOKYO (SEPT. 21) UPI - Despite several weeks of intense closed-door discussions, the Japanese government and major political parties have failed to come up with a plan for sending Japanese troops to the Gulf, a government spokesman said Friday.

''We are trying our best to reach a conclusion at the earliest possible time '' said Taizo Watanabe, chief spokesman for the Foreign Ministry. ''But at this time, there is no authentic version at all.''

The target date for a firm proposal is Sept. 28, when Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu is to leave for New York and a meeting with President Bush.

''He (Kaifu) hopes to have the gist of the idea confirmed if possible by the time he departs for New York,'' said Watanabe, stressing that this was just a hope and may not be possible.

Japan has pledged to give $4 billion in Gulf aid but is feeling pressure to contribute human as well as financial resources.

But a proposal from Kaifu to send non-combat troops to the Gulf has bogged down in a debate over the possible violation of Japan's ''peace constitution.''

The constitution, written after Japan's defeat in World War II, renounces the use of force as a means of settling international disputes.

Government officials and politicians are working on a plan to send people to the Gulf without violating the Constitution.

Many different versions have emerged but most agree the force will number about 1,000, include at least some soldiers from Japan's Self Defense Forces and be strictly restricted to non-combat duty.

Surveys show most Japanese oppose sending troops to the Gulf.

After suffering a major election setback last year, the ruling Liberal Democratic Party is not in a position to ignore public opinion. Opposition parties, who control the upper house of the Parliament, are generally opposed to sending troops.

Kaifu, in traditional Japanese fashion, is trying to forge a consensus before presenting the plan formally.

''We want to give ample opportunity for discussion,'' said Watanabe.

But some doubt the slow building of a consensus will work in this crisis situation.

''They won't be able to do it in time,'' said Tetsuo Maeda, a military analyst.

Maeda believes the Gulf crisis will end before Japan can decide on whether to send non-combat forces.

''We may have a decision in time for the next crisis,'' he said.

The one thing Japanese decision were able to quickly agree on was that any force sent to the Gulf will not go to fight.

''There is no possibility they will be equipped with arms other than for self defense,'' Watanabe said.

And they may even be barred from carrying pistols for self defense, Watanabe added.

''Arms for self defense is being discussed,'' he said.

(SEPT. 21) UPI - Here is a roundup of the latest major events in the Persian Gulf crisis stemming from the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of the oil-rich emirate of Kuwait:

BAGHDAD, IRAQ - Saddam Hussein donned a field marshal's uniform and appeared on Iraqi television while a statement broadcast on his behalf lashed out at Arab efforts to bring peace to the gulf and said Iraq would go ahead with its battle of honor against U.S.-led forces. ''Every Iraqi must understand that the coming battle will be for the liberation of mankind and for the liberation of Jerusalem,'' said Saddam's statement, read on Iraqi television and radio.

TOKYO - Despite several weeks of intense closed-door discussions, the Japanese government and major political parties have failed to come up with a plan for sending Japanese troops to the Gulf, a government spokesman said Friday. The target date for a firm proposal is Sept. 28, when Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu is to leave for New York and a meeting with President Bush.

BEIJING - Iraq's Asian neighbors reinforced Baghdad's international isolation Thursday by expelling the Iraqi team from the quadrennial Asian Games.

WASHINGTON - The Pentagon said one soldier was killed when a Humvee, a jeep-type vehicle belonging to the Army's 82nd Airborne Division, rolled over during a training exercise. A military spokesman in Saudi Arabia said the off-road accident occurred Thursday morning. Two other soldiers were hurt and both were in stable condition. Identification of all three was being withheld.

PARIS - Iraq is expelling 11 diplomats from the French Embassy in Baghdad in retaliation for the expulsion of an equal number of Iraqi diplomats from France, the French Foreign Ministry said Friday. The ministry said Iraq informed it of the tit-for-tat measures Friday morning, a short time before 11 Iraqi diplomats were to be put on a flight to Amman as part of a package of measures announced by President Francois Mitterrand last week.

RALEIGH, NC - Another load of former hostages arrived in the United States from Iraq and Kuwait. A Pan Am flight loaded with 338 people touched down at North Carolina's Raleigh-Durham International Airport Thursday. The final flight out of Baghdad returning Americans to the United States is scheduled to arrive in Raleigh Sunday.

Investors hammered stocks lower Thursday on major global markets as recent soaring oil prices coupled with higher interest rates to increase the likelihood of a recession. Prices plummented in New York after falling to their lowest level of the year in several major capitals including London, Frankfurt, Tokyo and Taipei.

ANKARA, TURKEY - Iraqi President Saddam Hussein told Turkey's former Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit, in an interview published Thursday, that Iraq was prepared to withstand U.N. economic sanctions for several years. ''We believe we are in a position to harm the United States, in case of war,'' Saddam told Ecevit in an interview published in the Istanbul newspaper Milliyet. He said Iraq had fought Iran for eight years and could go on fighting for five or six years more.

WASHINGTON - A reluctant President Bush is under growing pressure from lawmakers to tap the nation's Strategic Petroleum Reserve now to calm oil markets before the Persian Gulf crisis leads to an actual energy shortage. Bush, who signed legislation Saturday giving him wider latitude to order emergency oil supplies drawn from the 600 million- barrel reserve, said this week he had no immediate plans to take such action.

STARKE, FL (SEPT. 21) UPI - James William Hamblen was executed in the electric chair Friday for the 1984 killing of a lingerie shop owner during a robbery.

Hamblen, 61, was declared dead at 7:13 a.m. at the Florida State Prison.

The Supreme Court had refused to block Hamblen's execution after the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta rejected Hamblen's argument that he should not be executed because he was mentally ill when he pleaded guilty to the killing of Lauren Jean Edwards.

Hamblen became the 140th person executed in the United States and the 23rd in Florida since the Supreme Court lifted its ban on capital punishment in 1976.

Hamblen was condemned for killing Edwards April 24, 1984, during a robbery at the ladies' boutique she ran in Jacksonville. Court records say he forced her into a changing room and shot her in the head after seeing her trip a silent alarm.

Hamblen drove to Florida from Texas after murdering his ex-girlfriend there, court records say.

Hamblen was one of three condemned prisoners whose executions were stayed earlier this summer while the courts considered whether the electric chair was malfunctioning.

Defense lawyers claimed the state risked subjecting inmates to a torturous death, violating the constitutional ban on cruel and unusual punishment, after flames and sparks shot out of the headpiece during the May execution of Jesse Tafero.

After the state tested the chair using a metal colander and length of tube to simulate a human head and ankle and declared it was working properly, the Supreme Court permitted its use in the July 27 execution of Anthony Bertolotti.

In seeking to stop his execution, Hamblen's lawyers argued that he had a long history of mental illness and should not have been permitted to plead guilty and waive his right to a lawyer during his trial.

TOKYO (SEPT. 21) UPI - Stock prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange rebounded Friday as domestic investment trusts placed large buy orders shortly before the close. Trading remained light.

The blue-chip Nikkei Average of 225 selected issues, which had declined in each of the last six trading sessions, including 123.19 points on Thursday, rebounded 174.85 points to 23,777.83.

The broader-based Tokyo Stock Exchange Price Index adedd 1.80 points to 1,769.77, following a 31.75 point decline Thrusday.

An estimated 430 million shares chnaged hands, compared with 408 million shares Thursday.

Advances outpaced declines 564 to 387, while 151 shares remained unchanged.

George Nimmo, manager of SBCI Securities said a rumor domestic investment trusts would place large buy orders at the close of trading led to a surge in the final hour.

Investment trusts bought to take advantage of the low prices, analysts said.

Before the rebound, the Nikkei hit a low of 23,049.99 as prices fell in reaction to the drop overnight on Wall Street and the increase in oil prices, Chris Schreiber, a broker with New Japan Securities said.

The Nikkei Average closed the morning session at 23,292.80 points and held around that level until the rush of buying in the last hour.

Schreiber said most buying focused on large capital issues, adding that his firm is promoting quality blue chips which he noted are in their bottom zones.

But he said he doubts this signals a major turn in the market.

''I don't think anybody is looking for a huge runup,'' Schreiber said. ''The problems hanging over the market haven't gone away. The biggest is the rise in oil prices and interest rates. It looks like things are heading for a slowdown.''

On the trading floor, electrical stocks, including Sanyo and TDK, ended higher.

Rubber, shipping, steel and real estate shares also gained while some financial shares eased.

BEIJING (SEPT. 21) UPI - There is much more than gold medals and national pride at stake at the 11th Asian Games.

Although Iraq's expulsion from the games has overshadowed the rest of the off-the-field maneuvering, some of the 36 participating nations and territories hope to use the games, which open Saturday, to improve political and economic relations with China.

Some countries that officially have poor relations with Beijing - or none at all - have sent both athletes to compete on the field and diplomats to maneuver with the Chinese leadership.

Pre-games meetings with foreign diplomats have been hailed by China, which is eager to improve its image after the worldwide condemnation of its brutal crushing of the nation's democracy movement in June 1989.

Vietnam's deputy prime minister is in Beijing, the first officially acknowledged high-level Vietnamese visit since 1979, when Vietnam and China fought a border war. Bilateral relations since then have been marred by Vietnam's long occupation of Cambodia.

According to Chinese officials, Vice Prime Minister Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap is in Beijing only to take part in the Asian Games celebrations, but diplomats say there is more to the trip.

''The line that Giap is here to observe the games is hogwash,'' a Western diplomat said. ''He came separately from the Vietnamese sports delegation and he is being treated as a state visitor.''

The diplomat said Giap may meet with Chinese Communist Party leader Jiang Zemin.

In contrast to Beijing's refusal to publicly acknowledge a political dimension to Giap's visit, Vietnam openly hopes it will improve relations between the Communist neighbors.

''We are striving to restore the friendly relations in the interests of the Vietnamese and Chinese people and for the sake of stability in Asia,'' a Vietnamese Foreign Ministry spokeswoman said in Hanoi Thursday. ''We wish (Giap's) trip will contribute to the early normalization of relations between the two countries.''

Diplomats say it is unlikely the countries will make any breakthrough during the games, but that Giap could come away with an agreement to regularize the booming local trade across the partially opened Sino- Vietnamese border.

South Korea is hoping to use its highly visible sponsorship of the games as an opportunity to further build trade relations with Beijing.

Seoul donated more than 200 cars to the games' organizing committee and South Korean companies say they have pledged several million dollars in sponsorship. Huge billboards advertising Korean products are up all over Beijing.

Trade between China and South Korea hit a high of about $3.1 billion in 1989, but analysts say that figure is expected to drop sharply for 1990, largely at the urging of communist North Korea.

It was widely speculated that South Korean President Roh Tae Woo would come to Beijing for the games, but Western sources say China discouraged such a move. China has repeatedly disavowed any intention to establish political ties with South Korea.

Officials from Taiwan, whose athletes are competing in their first Asian Games since 1970, say they hope the games will quicken the pace of gradually improving ties. Taiwan, competing as ''Chinese Taipei,'' has a 380-member delegation accompanied by a large press corps.

''The sporting events will increase people-to-people understanding,'' said Bang Chong-dan, director of Taipei's athletic delegation. ''Except for the political problems, mainland China belongs to all Chinese.''

AGRIGENTO, SICILY (SEPT. 21) UPI - A suspected Mafia hit squad ambushed and shot to death a prominent local magistrate Friday as he drove from his home to his office in southern Sicily, police said.

Police said the victim was Rosario Livatino, 38, who was involved in prosecuting Mafia cases in the area of Agrigento, a large market town near the south coast of Sicily.

The assassination took place at a time when the Italian government is engaged in a major crackdown on organized crime across southern Italy and Sicily.

Justice Minister Giuliano Vassalli has called the fight against the Mafia a ''national priority''.

Livatino was driving from his home at Canicatti, a hill-town some 20 miles northeast of Agrigento to his office when gunmen in a small Fiat car forced his Ford to a halt on a state highway outside Agrigento Friday morning.

The gunmen, joined by others on two motorcycles, opened fire on the magistrate's car. Livatino jumped out and tried to escape by leaping into a roadside ravine. But the gunmen riddled him with bullets from 30 feet away.

Police said they had no doubt the gunmen were from the local Mafia, which is highly active in the Agrigento region.

The gunmen made a getaway after the shooting and scores of Carabinieri (paramilitary national police), backed by helicopters, launched a manhunt over a wide area.

LAGOS, NIGERIA (SEPT. 21) UPI - Nigerian officials said Friday that the commander of the West African peacekeeping force in Liberia was replaced following the capture of Liberian President Samuel Doe from the Monrovia headquarters of the 5-nation force.

They said that Maj. Gen. Joshua Dogonyaro, a Nigerian, was appointed in place of the Ghanaian commander, Lt-Gen. Arnold Quainoo.

Quainoo came under fierce criticism when Doe was shot and captured by soldiers belonging rebel leader Prince Johnson's group when Doe came for talks to the force's headquarters two weeks ago. The president was later mutilated and killed.

Ghana's Deputy Foreign Minister, Ibn Chandas, said the incident was ''very embarrassing.''

But the appointment of Dogonyaro seemed to observers in Lagos unlikely to appease the National Patriotic Front of Liberia, led by Johnson's rival Charles Taylor.

Taylor has opposed the role of the West African peacekeeping force in part because of the presence of Nigerian soldiers in the contingent.

Taylor has accused Nigerian President Ibrahim Babangida of giving military and financial support in the past to Doe.

Diplomatic sources in the Nigerian capital said that the appointment of Dogonyaro is likely to herald an increase in the Nigerian contingent and the adoption by the force of a more offensive role.

Earlier this week, Nigeria sent an extra 1,000 troops to Freetown, Sierra Leone, en route to Liberia.

Diplomats said that Nigeria may send up to 20 Alpha light attack aircraft in order to provide air support in the event of further conflict with rebels opposed to the force's deployment. It appeared they might be based in Ghana.

But while the Nigerian government is hardening its posture on the three-cornered Liberian conflict, some Nigerians are urging the government to withdraw Nigerian soldiers from the force which is controlled by the seven nations of the Economic Community of West Africa (Ecowas).

A statement signed by the Nigerian Civil Liberties Organization, the Committee for the Defense of Human Rights, the Nigerian Union of Journalists and the National Association of Nigerian Students protested they were alarmed about reports that the peace-keepers are engaged in combat on the streets of Monrovia with Taylor's troops.

Herman Cohen, the U.S. Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs, was in Lagos Wednesday for a meeting with President Babangida. Cohen is on a Liberian fact finding mission in West Africa.

Cohen, who has made contact with both rebel factions in Monrovia said that both groups expressed a willingness to end hostilities and negotiate peace.

LIBREVILLE, GABON (SEPT. 21) UPI - President Omar Bongo's government, reacting to allegations of widespread fraud, annulled the vote in 62 of 120 constituencies during the first round of Gabon's first multi-party elections and postponed a second round of the contest until October, officials said Friday.

Prime Minister Casimir Oye Mba announced late Thursday that electoral officers had confirmed the election of 58 deputies who won by outright majorities in the first round of the polls held Sunday.

But Oye Mba said the first round would be held again Oct. 21 for the 62 other constituencies were the vote was canceled because of fraud and ballot-box rigging. The second round of the elections, the first since Gabon won independence from France, will be held Oct. 28 instead of next Sunday as originally scheduled.

The ruling Gabonese Democratic Party carried 36 of the 58 confirmed seats in the new National Assembly while the opposition National Reform Party garnered 14 seats, the opposition Gabonese Progress Party took 3, and the Gabon Socialist Party also had three.

Opposition leaders met with the prime minister Thursday evening to decide how to deal with the badly flawed first round of the polls. Oye Mba said the measures decided were agreed unanimously but some opposition leaders said there had been some disagreement.

The government said schools would remain closed until the October elections so that schoolhouses can be used as polling centers and to avoid possible violence near school children during voting.

Political parties will be allowed to present new candidates in the 62 remaining constituencies during the re-run Oct. 21, the prime minister said.

The election was widely seen by African specialists as a crucial step toward establishing multi-party systems in former French colonies of West Africa.

In the most serious incident marring the first round, some 20 people stormed the main polling station at city hall in the capital Libreville.

Among the elections annulled was one at the city of Ntoum, 24 miles east of Libreville, where the prime minister lost his seat.

Political analysts in Libreville said it was unlikely the ruling party would be able to win an absolute majority in the new National Assembly.

BEIRUT, LEBANON (SEPT. 21) UPI - President Elias Hrawi warned Friday he would order a military strike into the Christian enclave unless followers of maverick military leader Gen. Michel Aoun proclaim loyalty to his government.

''A decision to carry out a military operation has already been taken. It's no longer a speculation or media information,'' Hrawi said in a speech broadcast nationwide on radio stations.

The pro-Syrian president made the speech as he signed constitutional reforms contained in a national reconciliation accord worked out last October by the Lebanese parliament in Taif, Saudi Arabia.

Hrawi said the crisis will be resolved ''in a decisive fashion even if a military operation is required,'' hinting that the 20,000 troops loyal to him would launch a wide-scale offensive to topple Aoun.

The rebel general has refused to recognize Hrawi, who was elected president as an outcome of the Taif peace accord. He has also rebuffed the agreement on grounds that it failed to ensure a speedy and complete withdrawal of Syria's 35,000 troops from Lebanon.

Aoun, in a statement to the local media Thursday, said he doubted the Hrawi leadership would launch an offensive against him soon because the pro-Syrian troops lacked the technical capability to carry out such operation.

Hrawi warned that in the event soldiers under Aoun's command failed to shift loyalty to his leadership, ''the government would have to take the difficult decision by resorting to a surgical operation.''

''I will not be a witness to the disappearance of Lebanon,'' Hrawi said in his speech.

Hrawi's pro-Syrian army, led by Gen. Emile Lahoud, was reported to have reinforced positions around Aoun's enclave, amid mounting reports of a planned imminent offensive against Aoun's 15,000-strong force.

Hrawi said he would form a new government that ''would include all parties,'' a hint to possible participation of Aoun. ''The new government will have the task of dissolving militias and expand legitimate authorities to all Lebanese territories,'' he said.

Aoun was appointed as head of a transitional military government by former President Amin Gemayel Sept. 22, 1988, when the parliament failed to elect a new president.

Since then, the capital has experienced two rounds of heavy fighting sparked by Aoun's attempts to force Syria pull its forces out of Lebanon and to crush the rival 10,000-strong Christian Lebanese Forces militia of Samir Geagea.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (SEPT. 21) UPI - A verdict is expected next week in the case of Benigno Aquino, whose assassination in 1983 led to the downfall of Ferdinand Marcos and the rise to power of his widow President Corazon Aquino, court officials said Friday.

Forty people - 36 soldiers and four civilians - are facing charges of double murder for the slayings of Benigno Aquino on his return from three years of self-exile in the United States and of Rolando Galman.

Court clerk Maria Dolores Balajadia said the three-judge anti- corruption court hearing the Aquino case would announce its decision Sept. 28.

Galman was the alleged communist hit man who was gunned down moments after he killed Benigno Aquino, then the nation's foremost opposition leader, with a single bullet to the back of the head at the Manila airport Aug. 21, 1983.

The prosecution contends Galman was a scapegoat put up to the murder by the military in order to eliminate Benigno Aquino, who had said he was returning to the Philippines to persuade Marcos to restore democracy in the Philippines or face a civil war.

The Aquino assasination sparked widespread protests that culminated in a civilian-backed military revolt that ousted Marcos in February 1986 after 20 years in office. Marcos died in exile in Hawaii on Sept. 28, 1989.

After Corazon Aquino became president, the Supreme Court declared the acquittal of 25 soldiers and a civilian by a Marcos-appointed court in 1985 as a mistrial.

A new trial was begun in September 1986 and the list of accused was expanded. It was concluded in June.

BY ADAM KELLIHER - UPI

EASTERN SAUDI ARABIA (SEPT. 21) UPI - In a balmy hanger, U.S. mechanics toil over a Huey helicopter that still bears shrapnel holes from Vietnam, America's last large-scale war.

''It's a faithful machine,'' said one engineer, affectionately patting the fuselage of the UH-1H chopper as he worked on installing a new jet engine. ''If the airframe is good, you can keep building from the inside out, and it will keep flying forever.''

The 1966-registered aircraft had steel patches riveted over several panels that had been punched open by ground fire during some long- forgotten mission against Viet Cong guerrillas or the North Vietnamese army.

Engineers said recent maintenance on one Huey had yielded aluminum shims fashioned from crushed Vietnamese beer cans, the relics of an impromptu repair job more than a decade ago in Southeast Asia.

Although Black Hawks are now the Army's main utility helicopter, the deployment of the Hueys to Saudi Arabia as part of Operation Desert Shield gives cause to remember the circumstances of America's last large-scale military committment.

The Huey became almost a symbol of America's role in Vietnam. The bulbous aircraft often plunged into battles to whisk GIs into and out of thick jungle, rice paddies and firebases.

It was the workhorse chopper that signified American air superiority over the land that could never be pacified, despite the Pentagon's use of virtually every weapon and technique available.

But just as the Huey externally looks the same yet has a completely upgraded interior, the American military in Saudi Arabia in many ways is a different creature than the one that served in Vietnam.

The crucial change is that the force is entirely volunteer, and does not contain draftees reluctantly serving their time. Education requirements are higher.

It is also true that the military has lured many soldiers, sailors and airmen who joined mostly to get a steady job or pay their way through college rather than to fight a war.

Whether time-serving plodders or ambitious careerists, however, dedication is deeper and there is a reduced propensity for drug-taking and disciplinary problems or of the malaise that arose during the bitter Asian defeat in which more than 50,000 Americans died, officers said.

"They are a lot more disciplined and a lot smarter,'' Lt. Col. Glynn Pope, 45, a Vietnam veteran now commanding a forward unit of the 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized). ''We don't have anyone here who doesn't want to be here.''

Today's U.S. military does not have the same demographic sweep of the drafted force in Vietnam.

The ideal ''national melting pot'' platoon propagated by Hollywood - the decisive white Anglo-Saxon Protestant leader, the intuitive black sniper, the fiery Hispanic machine gunner, and the big brawny Anderson of Swedish descent - has become even more of a myth.

''You don't have a cross-section of America like you did then,'' Lt. Todd Newton, 25, of Corvallis, Ore., said in comparing his company of Marines with those of Vietnam. ''You now have kids more from the Midwest and the South, and kids who live around bases.''

Vietnam was also the last time the Pentagon dispatched thousands of personnel many miles from home on an extended mission, and many prosaic aspects of campaign life have been fogotten.

''We are relearning a lot of lessons that we learned in Vietnam,'' Marine Maj. Gen. John Hopkins said. ''You go along the mess line and see some kid taking five juice cans. You don't take five until everyone else gets four.''

Otherwise, the drive to rid Kuwait of Iraqi troops bears little similarity with Washington's decade-long attempt to shore up the South Vietnamese government.

If the Americans move into Kuwait, they will not be confronted by that most undefeatable weapon, a mobilized and highly motivated citizenry, but should be greeted as liberators.

The phrase ''another Vietnam'' really refers to being bogged down in a politically distasteful and seemingly unwinnable war.

COLUMBIA, MD (SEPT. 21) UPI - San Antonio Spurs guard David Wingate faces six counts of second-degree rape, sexual contact and assault and battery for allegedly attacking a 17-year-old girl Sunday.

Wingate, 26, who was indicted Thursday by a Howard County grand jury, faces up to 20 years in prison if convicted.

BEIJING (SEPT. 21) UPI - Xu Xiangqian, a once out-of-favor soldier who became one of only 10 Chinese communist generals elevated to the exalted rank of Revolutionary Marshal, died Friday at the age of 88.

Xu, who also served as vice premier and defense minister in the 1970s but held little influence recently, died in his sleep of an unspecified illness, state-run national television news reported.

Xu's death came on the eve of the Beijing Asian Games, China's first international sporting spectacle, but Western observers said they doubted it would prompt the kind of spontaneous political outpouring that followed the April 1989 death of former Communist Party chief Hu Yaobang.

The observance of Hu's death grew into the nationwide pro-democracy movement that was crushed in June 1989.

''I doubt it will affect anything,'' one Western diplomat said of Xu's death, noting that Xu had been out of the political limelight through much of the past decade.

Xu's death left Nie Rongzhen as the only living marshal, a title held by the communist luminaries Zhu De and Peng Dehuai as well as Lin Biao, an heir-apparent to chairman Mao Tse-tung who died in a mysterious plane crash in 1971. Xu earned the rank in 1955.

Xu was born in Shanxi province in 1902 and as a youth became fascinated by the revolutionary ideas sweeping China.

He secretly left his family in 1924 to enroll at the Whampoa military academy and in 1927 joined the Chinese Communist Party, for which he worked as an underground activist against the rival Chinese nationalists.

Beginning in 1929, Xu needed less than three years to build a ragtag band of 200 communist guerrillas into the 30,000-strong 4th Area Army, and his star as a Communist Party favorite began to rise.

In mid-1935, Xu's army was forced to evacuate its northern Chinese base but soon merged with other armies making the legendary Long March during which much communist military strategy was forged.

Xu soon fell out of favor, however, due to his association with the 4th Area Army's political commissar, Zhang Guotao, and underwent a period of self-examination and confession in the Yanan revolutionary base.

Xu fell ill with tuberculosis and was sent for treatment to the Soviet Union, where he remained for 10 years. Xu was given a warm welcome on his return to China after the communist revolution in 1949.

He was promoted to the Communist Party Politburo in 1966 during the first phase of China's radical and destructive Cultural Revolution but lost his position to political infighting, only to have it restored in 1977.

An ardent leftist who believed in the politicization of the army, Xu published an article in the flagship People's Daily in 1977 titled, ''Always uphold the principle that the party commands the gun.''

COLOMBO, SRI LANKA (SEPT. 21) UPI - Authorities slapped an indefinite curfew on the troubled northern Jaffna peninsula Friday as continued fighting throughout the country left at least 39 Tamil militants dead, a senior military official said.

The curfew was imposed to help security forces battle the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, a powerful Tamil separatist group fighting to establish an independent homeland for the nation's minority Tamil population, the official said.

In one attack Thursday evening in the Vasavilan and Kattuwan areas of the northern Jaffna peninsula, military helicopters bombed rebel bunkers, killing at least 30 guerrillas, the official said.

Security forces killed three other rebels Thursday as they attempted to escape from the island of Mandaithivu in a boat, the official said.

In a separate incident in the eastern district of Batticaloa, about 135 miles east of Colombo, three rebels were killed when they clashed with security forces, the official said. No further details were immediately available.

At least 2,600 soldiers, rebels and civilians have been killed since fighting erupted in mid-June when the Tigers staged simultaneous attacks on four military installations in the eastern part of the country.

Although the government has claimed victories in the eastern province, the military has encountered stiff resistance in the north where the Tigers are in control.

The rebels kept a 17th century Dutch fort under seige from the time that fighting broke out until Sept. 13, when security forces battled their way into the military installation to relieve about 200 troops who had been trapped.

Despite a massive military offensive in the area, the government has failed to crush the rebels.

The Tigers have been fighting since 1983 to establish an independent Tamil homeland in the north and east of the country. But the situation had remained relatively quiet for a year before the latest outbreak of warfare.

The minority Tamils, who are mostly Hindu, insist that a separate state is necessary because of years of alleged discrimination by the majority Sinhalese who are predominantly Buddhist and control the Colombo government.

OTTAWA (SEPT. 21) UPI - Canada's Parliament, a bizarre conglomeration of Quebec separatists, right-wing reformists and ruling Conservatives, resumes work Monday amid a growing feeling that no one is in charge of the country anymore.

''We probably have the most unstable political environment I can remember,'' Roger Gibbins, a political scientist at the University of Calgary in western Canada, said in an interview Friday.

Gibbins said a lack of national leadership, notably the refusal of Conservative Prime Minister Brian Mulroney to play any decisive role in several major crisis confronting the country, has thrust Canada's political system into ''total confusion.''

''The public,'' he said, ''is looking on in bewilderment, dismay and anger at that state of confusion.''

Mulroney all but disappeared from the political scene in June after the collapse of the so-called Meech Lake accord, a constitutional amendment that would keep Quebec in Canada by granting it special powers to promote its French language and culture.

The accord required the consent of all provinces before June 23, but failed when Newfoundland and Manitoba refused to vote on it before the deadline.

The failure of Mulroney's key initiative, one in which he had a huge personal and political stake - Quebec has been one of the most solid supporters of the Conservative Party in the last two elections - was a huge blow.

Since then, Mulroney has reeled from one crisis to another, unable to arrest his Conservative Party's loss of public support and unable to avoid personal questions surrounding his health.

Recent opinion polls gave the Conservatives just 14 percent support, far behind the opposition Liberals and left-wing New Democratic Party. But Canadians apparently aren't happy with those alternatives either. More than one-third of those polled said none of the three parties should be running the government.

During the summer, Mulroney allowed a minor land dispute involving Quebec Mohawks to run out of control before conceding to the province's request to send in soldiers.

His government has done virtually nothing to arrest the country's slide toward a recession that some economists claim will be harder on Canadians than the last one in the early 1980s. In an effort to curb inflation, the government allowed interest rates to increase far beyond those in the United States.

The proposed seven percent Goods and Services Tax, another key plank of the Conservative administration, is in trouble in the Upper Chamber of Parliament, where the Liberal majority has promised to challenge it, and may not be implemented as planned next Jan. 1. Eighty-five percent of Canadians oppose such a tax.

In an effort to avert its defeat, Mulroney began filling vacancies in the appointed Senate with Conservative Party supporters. He outraged Canadians earlier this month by naming to the Senate former Newfoundland Premier John Buchanan, who is currently under police investigation for possible acceptance of kickbacks and misuse of public funds.

Some political observers believe the appointment reflected Mulroney's complete disillusionment with political life while signalling his intention to retire before the next federal election.

Meanwhile, Mulroney's efforts to improve his government's popularity by introducing a new agenda will be restricted by the presence of new parties in Parliament with broad regional support.

The Reform Party, which favors radical economic reforms, the creation of an American-styled Senate and referendums on all key policies is the most popular political force in Alberta, traditionally a Conservative stronghold, and second to the Liberals across the three prairie provinces. The party hopes to field candidates across the country in the next election.

The Bloc Quebecois, which has nine members in the elected House of Commons - most of them were former Conservatives and Liberals who formed their own group when the Meech Lake Accord failed - has promised to use Parliament to fight for Quebec's separation from Canada. The BQ is enormously popular among nationalist Quebecers who favor such a split.

Nor can the Conservative government ignore the rise of the New Democratic Party which swept to victory in Ontario's provincial election earlier this month.

EAST BERLIN (SEPT. 21) UPI - Twenty-four prisoners staged a protest on the roof of an East Berlin prison Friday, saying they will only come down if a general amnesty is granted on Oct. 3 German unification, officials said.

The inmates said they wanted an amnesty because many sentences handed down under the communist government ousted last fall were unnecessarily harsh and should be reviewed.

''We are guilty, but criminal offense and penalty must correspond,'' said Peter Trenn, one of the mutineers at East Berlin's Rummelsburg prison told the East German news agency ADN.

The 24 inmates said they were acting in solidarity with four prisoners who have been staging a sit-in since Wednesday just below the roof at the Brandenburg prison, just outside Berlin.

Interior Minister Peter Michael Diestel, of East germany's Christian Democratic Union, and Manfred Stolpe of the opposition Social Democratic Party visited the four prisoners Thursday.

''We demand a re-examination of our sentences,'' the three convicted murderers and one arsonist said in a statement.

''We don't want to blackmail anybody, but we see no other possibility than to take this action to illustrate our problem,'' the statement said.

The prisoners had threatened to commit suicide by jumping off the building's roof if their demands were not met within 24 hours, but dropped the threat early Friday.

A third prison revolt by 12 inmates in the small East German town of Graefentonna ended a few hours after it began Thursday. The mutineers left the roof of the building after prison authorities promised to convey their demands to Diestel.

A number of East Berlin prisoners have also asked for guarantees that they will not be transferred to West Berlin prisons, saying they fear they may catch AIDS there.

HOLLYWOOD (SEPT. 21) UPI - In a stealthy, early morning protest over the deployment of U.S. troops to Saudi Arabia, a group of artists Friday altered the landmark HOLLYWOOD sign to read ''OIL WAR.''

''We did it to bring attention to the potential war situation in the Middle East,'' said a spokesman for Artists for Social Responsibility who would only identify himself as ''Danny.''

Danny said 10 group members took about three hours to alter the sign, using harnesses to climb the letters. Witnesses said police pulled down the sheeting that had been draped over the 50-foot letters before 6 a.m.

''This is what we do - we do envirnmental art,'' Danny said.

The group claims to have altered the sign several times before in reaction to current events.

They commemorated the decriminalization of marijuana with ''HOLLYWEED,'' the trial of Oliver North with ''OLLYWOOD,'' and the visit of Pope John Paul II to Los Angeles with HOLY WOOD,'' Danny said.

But their latest effort was not meant have the humor of the other signs.

''We seriously believe we should be spending money on alternate energy sources becoming more energy self-sufficient rather than going to war so we can have cheap oil that does nothing but pollute the environment,'' he said.

If only one person sees the sign, Danny said, he hoped it would be George Bush during his stopover to campaign for Sen. Pete Wilson.

The president left town Wednesday morning.

BANGKOK, THAILAND (SEPT. 21) UPI - Cambodian resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk offered a key concession Friday to resolve differences that deadlocked a Cambodian council meeting and threatened efforts to end the 11-year conflict in Cambodia.

Sihanouk, in a statement issued from Beijing, said he was willing to allow the Vietnamese-installed government of Prime Minster Hun Sen to take an extra seat on a joint ''Supreme National Council'' if the government agreed to let Sihanouk join as council chairman and additional member.

This concession appeared to fulfill demands Hun Sen that any formula for Sihanouk's becoming chairman should not give the three-party resistance more seats on the council than the government.

Currently both sides have six representatives on the council, which is intended to be the symbol of Cambodian sovereignty and the key to a U.N. peace plan.

In a news conference in Bangkok Wednesday, Hun Sen said he would accept Sihanouk as an additional council member if his side also got a seventh.

It was not immediately clear whether the Khmer Rouge, the most powerful of the three resistance groups, would go along with Sihanouk's concession.

Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan earlier said the next step should be the rapid convening of an international conference on Cambodia to work out the details of the peace plan which includes turning over major powers to an interim U.N. authority.

Sihanouk said he offered the concession ''not because of any personal ambitions I may have,'' but to avoid the wrath of the international community which has worked for a settlement and to keep his people from giving up hope for peace.

Thursday night, Phnom Penh radio reported that Hun Sen had sent a telegram to the U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar and the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council describing the failure of the SNC meeting to name a joint U.N. delegation.

''I would like your excellencies to kindly invite the SNC members to participate in the present session of the U.N. General Assembly in order to solve at least one urgent and primordial question,'' Hun Sen said in a text of the telegram read on the radio.

The move appeared to be an effort to give the Vietnamese- installed government of Cambodia representation at the United Nations for the first time despite the impasse over the SNC chairmanship.

The tripartite resistance has held onto Cambodia's U.N. seat despite the Vietnamese invasion that ousted the leading resistance group - the Khmer Rouge - from power in January 1979, after it had butchered more than 1 million Cambodians.

The council was formally established and held its first meeting in Bangkok on Monday. It was scheduled to name a joint delegation to the United Nations, but after three days of talks, the meeting collapsed without agreement on the chairmanship.

Son Sann, the president of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front, and a member of the council, said in a statement released Friday that he has formally asked Thailand to provide the venue for another council meeting in Bangkok.

The statement said Son Sann ''calls on all the other members of the SNC to support this request, to put aside their difference, to think only of the supreme interests of the Cambodian Nation.''

Thai government spokesman Suvit Yodmanee said Thailand welcomed Sihanouk's concession, but would agree to host a new meeting only if all parties gave assurances of progress.

''It' s a Cambodian issue really. But if they can agree on that format, it would be good and constructive,'' he said.

He said Thailand would wait to hear from all factions before deciding on Son Sann's request.

''We must be confident that they unanimously agree to request us to hold the meeting, and then we will host it at once,'' he said.

Kraisak Choonhavan, son and key advisor of Thai Prime Minister Chatichai, said Thailand would like to see the next meeting in the terms of a signing ceremony for an agreement worked out in advance.

Kraisak, criticized for playing too large a role in this week's council meeting, said Thailand would be wary of getting involved in any further Cambodian negotiations.

PAINESVILLE, OH (SEPT. 21) UPI - A judge Friday sentenced religious cult leader Jeffrey Don Lundgren to death for killing a five-member family belonging to his cult.

Common Pleas Judge Martin Parks, in issuing the sentence, followed the recommendation of a Lake County jury. The other option was life in prison.

Defense lawyer Charles Grieshammer pleaded Thursday for the judge to spare Lundgren's life, saying the Independence, Mo., native believed he was following God's will when he the Dennis Avery family, which included children ages 15, 13 and 6, to death.

Lundgren, 40, a one-time lay minister in the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, was convicted Aug. 29 of aggravated murder for the 1989 killings.

The murders were committed in April 1989 but the bodies were not uncovered in a Kirtland barn east of Cleveland until Jan. 3-4, after a member of Lundgren's former cult went to authorities in Kansas City.

The cult had broken up in December - after moving to near Davis, W.Va., and later Chilhowee, Mo. - and 13 former cult members were arrested near San Diego Independence, Mo., and Bay City, Mich.

Grieshammer said the Reorganized Church, which Lundgren broke away from to start his cult, is based on the belief that the second coming of Christ is near, and he said there is a belief there will be a prophet to lead the church.

''You ended up with a man who felt he was the final prophet,'' Grieshammer said. ''Jeffrey Lundgren and his followers went over the edge. Jeffrey Lundgren lost touch with reality. There is no doubt about it.''

Grieshammer said he was not trying to say Lundgren was innocent by reason of insanity.

''The penalty we are asking for is a horrible penalty,'' Grieshammer said. ''To send Jeffrey Lundgren to prison for the rest of his life, to reside in an 8-by-10-foot cell, that is a horrible punishment. It is the second most horrible punishment we have but it is what Jeffrey Lundgren deserves.''

Lake County Prosecutor Stephen LaTourette said Lundgren killed the Avery family because Dennis Avery, the father, was lazy and his children were unruly.

''Believing you are a prophet of God or even being a prophet of God is no excuse for murder,'' LaTourette said. ''The evidence has shown that Jeffrey

Lundgren didn't believe he was doing God's will but rather he was doing his own will.

''Not only is he no prophet. He is a false prophet, a liar. He has pulled the wool over the eyes of many good people,'' the prosecutor said.

Also facing a possible death penalty is Jeffrey Lundgren's 19-year- old son, Damon Lundgren. He was convicted of four counts of aggravated murder Tuesday.

Two other cult members, Ronald Luff and Daniel Kraft, are awaiting trial on the same charges.

Lundgren's wife, Alice, was convicted Aug. 1 of 15 lesser charges and has been sentenced to life in prison.

Five cult members pleaded guilty and agreed to testify.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (SEPT. 21) UPI - Mangosuthu Buthelezi, leader of the Zulu movement Inkatha and chief minister of the Zulu homeland, conditionally agreed Friday to peace talks next month with Nelson Mandela and the African National Congress.

Buthelezi, in a lengthy statement from the capital of the self- governing Zulu territory in strife-torn Natal province, said he would accept the ANC's invitation, announced Thursday night, for an Oct. 5 meeting, assuming, he said that the ANC's ''intentions were genuine.''

''In these delicate times in which so much is at stake, I will leave no stone unturned which could lead to the dimunition and, hopefully, to the cessation of violence,'' said Buthelezi, 62.

In an invitation that circumvented opposition to a direct meeting between Mandela and the Inkatha leader, the ANC's National Executive Committee Thursday asked Buthelezi to attend a meeting of all the leaders of South Africa's nominally independent black homelands.

Senior ANC leaders have consistently objected to direct talks between Mandela and Buthelezi, fearing such a summit would give unwarranted political leverage to the leader of the rival Zulu movement.

Thursday's diplomatic sidestepping did not escape Buthelezi, who noted he would have to ''explore'' whether this represented ''a continuing deliberately strategized attempt to deny me my prime political identity as president of Inkatha Freedom Party.''

But it appeared he ultimately would agree to meet Mandela within the context of a homeland leaders' summit ''if I find that the intentions were genuine.''

''But I will certainly go as president of Inkatha,'' Buthelezi said.

Supporters of the ANC and Inkatha, ideologically at odds since the 1970s, have fought a long battle in the Indian Ocean province of Natal. More than 4,000 people have died in the province since 1987. The conflict spread to black townships surrounding Johannesburg early last month.

In the ensuing urban violence - the worst in the country's history - more than 750 people were killed.

Since the eruption of violence around Johannesburg, the ANC had accused Inkatha of plotting the mayhem with the help of elements in the state security forces in a bid to increase its political leverage in upcoming power-sharing negotiations.

The government forged ahead with its controversial security measures intended to crush the fighting Thursday, encircling Zulu migrant worker hostels with razor wire and announcing the imposition of a 9 p.m. to 4 a.m. curfew starting next Tuesday in five black townships, including Soweto.

The measures are part of Operation Iron Fist, which was announced by police last Saturday and endorsed by President Frederik de Klerk and his Cabinet Wednesday. Since last weekend, only scattered incidents of violence have been reported and few deaths.

EAST BERLIN (SEPT. 21) UPI - About 3,000 people in the small East German city of Potsdam have dropped out of the Protestant church in the last two weeks to avoid paying church tax, a West Berlin daily reported Friday.

East Germans are deserting the church, which was a major force behind the peaceful revolution last fall, in fear of a West German church tax that will go into effect after the Oct. 3 unification, the Berliner Morgenpost said.

''It is a catastrophe,'' said Martina Suske, director of the Potsdam registrar's office, where people can get the necessary forms to drop out of the church.

''I would say that 3,000 people have left the church in Potsdam in the last 14 days. These people act as if they cannot get out of church quick enough,'' she said.

Unlike the United States, where church and state are strictly separated, West German churches are financed through a state tax of up to 9 percent based on individual income.

In East Germany, the churches used to take fairly low fees from their members directly.

After German unification, West German tax laws will also apply to what is still East Germany, including the church levy. Many East German church-goers fear they will have to pay far more than they did in the past.

Church officials said they were disappointed because the church had played a major role in ousting the Communist government last year, offering shelter and support to dissidents and protesters.

''The churches are empty again,'' said Christoph Teltschow, Superintendent of an East Berlin church district.

The church will have to readjust and find a new role in society, now that it is no longer needed as a safe haven for political dissidents, he said.

MIAMI (SEPT. 21) UPI - The 12th tropical depression of the Atlantic-Caribbean hurricane season formed Friday off the coast of Africa, while another system continued on a northwesterly track across the ocean.

At 6 a.m. EDT, tropical depression No. 12 was centered near latitude 13.2 north, longitude 33.4 west, or about 575 miles west southwest of the Cape Verde Islands.

The depression was moving toward the west near 9 mph, with that motion expected to continue for the next 24 hours. Forecasters at the Hurricane Center said they expect the system to turn toward the northwest during the next 48 hours.

Maximum sustained winds were near 35 mph and some increase in strength was likely during the next 24 hours.

The other tropical depression was centered at latitude 18.1 north, longitude 50.3 west, or about 725 miles east of the Leeward Islands. It was moving northwest near 5 mph and that motion was expected to continue for the next 12 hours.

Its winds have held near 35 mph over the past 48 hours and little strengthening was anticipated during the next 24 hours.

If its circulating winds reach 39 mph, it would become Tropical Storm Josephine, the 10th named storm of the 1990 Atlantic-Caribbean hurricane season.

Four storms - Bertha, Diana, Gustav and Isidore - have developed into hurricanes with winds of more than 74 mph so far this season. But none caused significant damage to land. The hurricane season runs June 1 to Nov. 30.

BUCHAREST, ROMANIA (SEPT. 21) UPI - A military court Friday convicted Nicu Ceausescu, the youngest son of former dictator Nicolae Ceausescu, of murder charges stemming from the use of deadly force against anti- government protesters during Romania's December uprising.

Ceausescu, 39, sat impassively as a judge read the verdict and immediately sentenced him to 20 years imprisonment. Once a playboy and gambler who lived in high style while his father was in power, he now suffers from a liver disease and appeared pale and gaunt in the courtroom.

The military tribunal in Bucharest also banned Ceausescu from public office for 10 years after his prison term ends and ordered him to pay the equivalent of $260 in court costs.

There were angry murmurs in the courtroom when the judge said Ceausescu would be given back his personal possessions, trappings of his wealthy lifestyle that were confiscated after his father was overthrown Dec. 22.

Defense lawyer Paula Jacob said Ceausescu would appeal.

''I'm convinced he's an innocent man,'' she said. ''I am confident he will win the appeal.''

Ceausescu was accused of ordering security troops to fire on anti- government demonstrators during the December uprising in Sibiu, where he was Communist Party boss. About 90 people died during the clashes in Sibiu, the scene of some of bloodiest fighting in the revolution.

The original charge of genocide was later downgraded to ''aggravated murder,'' which could have brought a maximum penalty of life imprisonment. The death penalty was outlawed in Romania following the firing squad executions of Nicolae Ceausescu and his wife, Elena, on Christmas Day.

The youngest and reportedly favorite son of the dictator was released from prison at the end of his trial Aug. 23 because of poor health. He is said to suffer from a severe form of cirrhosis of the liver.

During the trial, Ceausescu admitted telling security officials in Sibiu to use force against protesters, but said he made the remark while drunk and later retracted it.

Jacob maintained Ceausescu had a falling out with his father in the last years of his rule and tried to persuade the elder Ceausescu to soften his hard-line policies.

Disagreements between father and son ultimately resulted in Nicu's transfer to Sibiu, 100 miles west of Bucharest, she told the court in July.

''(In the) last years, he told his parents the cold and hunger can't go on, but close advisers assured them things weren't so bad,'' Jacob said.

Once regarded as one of the most hated men in Romania, Nicu Ceausescu enjoyed a surge in popular sympathy in late summer, in part because of his dramatic testimony in his own defense in the early days of the trial and partly because of newspaper stories about his illness.

A number of other Ceausescu family members are still awaiting trial, including Nicu's sister, Zoia, and adopted older brother, Valentin, who face charges stemming from their alleged misuse of state property during their father's 25-year rule. Both have been released from prison pending trial.

NORFOLK, VA (SEPT. 21) UPI - A sailor who said he fled the Navy because he feared the nuclear-powered submarine USS Finback was unsafe has been arrested by agents with the Naval Investigative Service.

Petty Officer 2nd Class Jason Jensen, 23, who the service listed as a deserter was in custody Friday at Norfolk Naval Base. The machinist's mate from Las Vegas left the service in June, saying he was worried about the potential for an accident involving the Finback's reactor or other equipment.

Jensen and several other sailors allege personnel training records and water purity checks related to the Finback's steam plant were falsified. Navy officials have acknowledged job qualification cards for eight sailors were falsely certified and are investigating the allegations.

Spokesmen for the Navy's Atlantic Fleet Submarine Force have denied the problems jeopardized the safety of the submarine and its crew, which is based in Norfolk.

NIS agents arrested Jensen Thursday at a local motel. He told reporters he had spent the past few months in the Midwest and Canada, hiding for a time in Vancouver, British Columbia, with members of the environmental group Greenpeace.

He said he had returned to Norfolk with the intention of surrendering.

''I only regret the decision in that I didn't stay and fight,'' Jensen told The Virginian-Pilot of Norfolk. ''Beforehand I didn't have the moral strength or the drive to stand up to (the alleged improprieties) when they happened.''

The sailor said he expects to undergo court-martial proceedings but hopes he will be charged with no more than unauthorized absence. If convicted of such a charge, he could face time in prison, loss of rank and pay, and a dishonorable discharge.

Lt. Cmdr. Dave Morris, a spokesman for the Atlantic Fleet Submarine Force, said charges were pending. Jensen could face a court-martial or a less severe type of punishment, known as a captain's mast, he said.

NEW DELHI, INDIA (SEPT. 21) UPI - A plan to promote equality among India's social and religious castes by reserving federal jobs for the underprivileged has sparked a rebellion by higher classes, including a rampage by students in a state capital Monday.

Students in Chandigarh, 135 miles north of New Delhi, torched government vehicles and hurled stones at police in a wave of violence that led officials to clamp an army-enforced curfew on part of the city.

At one point during the protests, police who were attacked by stone-throwing youths opened fire on demonstrators with live ammunition and wounded at least 11 people, including eight policemen trapped in the line of fire, authorities said.

The outburst came as part of a continuing protest throughout much of the country over the government's decision to reserve 27 percent of all federal jobs for the so-called backward classes.

High-caste youths oppose the program because it will restrict their ability to enter government service. They also claim it will enshrine the caste system in law, increase government inefficiency by ignoring merit and fail to improve the social condition of the underprivileged.

Proponents of job reservation say it will give lower-caste citizens, who represent about 54 percent of India's 830 million people, a better opportunity to obtain government jobs, which traditionally have been dominated by the upper castes.

Protests were reported across the northern part of the country, from the far eastern state of Assam, where stone-throwing youths clashed with baton-wielding policemen, to western Rajasthan, where authorities shut down schools because of the demonstrations.

In New Delhi, thousands of high-caste students blocked traffic to oppose the job reservation scheme and to protest alleged brutality by police, who have used batons and tear gas to disperse demonstrators in recent days.

Tensions have been high in the capital since Wednesday, when two students doused themselves with kerosene and set themselves ablaze in a protest over the job reservation scheme. On Thursday, angry students damaged nearly two dozen vehicles.

Members of the New Delhi branch of the Hindu-chauvinist Bharatiya Janata Party also accused the police of brutality Friday and announced they would begin a revolt against the minority National Front government of Prime Minister V.P. Singh.

A small band of protesters waved party flags, chanted anti-government slogans and squatted in the street, blocking traffic near the Parliament building for about 45 minutes.

The Singh administration governs with the support of the national branch of the Bharatiya Janata Party, and a spreading revolt within the organization could threaten to bring down the government.

Also Friday, the Supreme Court declined to issue a stay of the government's decision to implement the job reservation scheme despite the violent protests that have erupted. But the court hinted the government should voluntarily put the plan on hold.

''When the matter is pending judicial decision, the government should modulate its action taking into consideration the prevailing situation,'' the Press Trust quoted the Supreme Court as saying.

Under Hinduism's complex caste system, followers are born into different levels of society, the lowest of which are restricted to the most menial jobs.

The plan would not affect the harijans, or untouchables, who are at the bottom of the caste system. Since the 1950's, 22.5 percent of all government jobs have been reserved for the harijans and for some tribal peoples.

Much like American affirmative action programs, the job reservation system was created to make up for years of discrimination and oppression of certain groups.

The largest outburst of violence Friday came in Chandigarh, which serves as the capital of both Punjab and Haryana states. Protesters fought pitched battles in a dozen places around the city.

About 3,000 demonstrators torched an official vehicle and tried to hijack another near the main government office building. Police tried to disperse the crowd with batons and tear gas, but were attacked by stone-throwing youths.

Police then opened fire with live ammunition. At least 11 people were wounded by the gunfire, including eight policemen trapped in the line of fire.

Police also fired tear gas and rubber bullets to disperse a crowd of about 3,000 demonstrators who surrounded the government- run hotel Shivalik and tried to set it ablaze.

(SEPT. 21) UPI - Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein appeared on state- run television in a field marshal's uniform, as a statement in his behalf was broadcast to the nation. In the statement, Saddam rips Arab efforts to bring peace to the Persian Gulf region and says his nation will prevail against what he termed the ''evil dwarfs'' arrayed against it because of the invasion of Kuwait.

The Saddam statement broadcast today warns his countrymen that a battle for the nation's honor looms. Some analysts are calling the statement the toughest since Saddam's forces invaded Kuwait on August 2nd. Saddam was shown late yesterday chairing government meetings in Baghdad. The statement told Iraqis NOT to worry about the outcome of any clash with the forces massing in Saudi Arabia because God is behind the Iraqi army.

The United States says it is willing to discuss the Philippine proposal to take over four smaller bases at the same time as the sprawling Clark Air Base when the U-S leases expire in September 1991. The four days of talks in the second round of negotiations ended today.

Lebanon's president says he will order a military strike to oust maverick military General Michel Aoun. Pro-Syrian President Elias Hrawi hinted in a nation-wide radio broadcast that the 20-thousand troops loyal to him would launch a wide-scale offensive to topple Aoun. The rebel general has refused to recognize Hrawi, who was elected president as part of a peace accord.

WARSAW (SEPT. 21) UPI - In a move unimaginable just a few years ago, the Polish government may send a small contingent of soldiers to join the U.S.-led multinational forces in the Persian Gulf region, a newspaper reported Friday.

Polish and American officials have held confidential talks, and the Polish government is considering the possibility of sending troops to the gulf as a gesture of support, the independent daily Zycie Warszawy said.

Such a troop deployment would be significant because never before has a Warsaw Pact nation sent military personnel to join a Western-led military operation.

The soldiers would act within the framework of multinational forces overseeing the military blockade of Iraq, Zycie Warszawy reported, quoting ''sources close the American State Department and Defense Department.''

Polish government spokeswoman Malgorzata Niezabitowska, when asked about the report at her weekly news conference, declined to discuss the matter. ''I dont have anything to say this moment,'' she said.

The news of a possible Polish troop deployment came one day after the official Polish news agency PAP reported about a short visit by the head of U.S. military intelligence, Gen. Harry E. Soyster.

According to PAP, Soyster had talks with the Polish armed forces general staff and visited two units, including the 6th Airborne Brigade, based in the north of Poland.

Poland has backed the United Nations resolutions and sanctions against Iraq following its Aug. 2 invasion of oil-rich Kuwait. Almost all 900 Polish nationals have been evacuated from Kuwait, but some 2,000 Polish workers still remain in Iraq.

Niezabitowska said Poland is seeking the compensation ''within the international solidarity of nations'' for damages it suffered because of joining the sanctions. The government estimates Poland's losses at $2.5 billion.

Polish citizens have been enduring tough economic reforms as their nation makes a transition from a state-controlled economy to a free- market system. The sanctions against Iraq have cut off Poland from a major oil supply source.

BONN (SEPT. 21) UPI - The U.S. Air Force will join Germany in celebrating unification on Oct. 3 because freedom and democracy is part of the American way of life, the Air Force's European commander said Friday.

''We are very proud of the fact that American service members and civilian employees who have served and are currently serving in the European theater are in no small measure responsible for the demise of the cold war and the unification of Germany,'' said U.S. Air Force Europe Chief of Staff Maj. Gen. Bruce J. Lotzbire.

He said that Gen. Robert C. Oaks, the Air Force European Commander in Chief, has told commanders to give their staff the day off because ''this unification is truly a celebration of freedom and democracy - a way of life so near and dear to the American heart.''

''The U.S. air forces in Europe will join Germany in celebrating its unification Oct. 3,'' an Air Force statement said.

Officials said that on Oct. 3, the air force will only carry out flight missions essential to ''Operation Desert Shield,'' the military activities in the Persian Gulf and exercises within the Western military alliance NATO.

The U.S. Air Force has about 92,700 servicemen stationed in Europe.

Major unification celebrations will be held in Berlin, where fireworks, church bells and speeches will mark the historic day.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 21) UPI - The stock market was slightly higher at midday Friday in trading that was heavy at the opening and had since slowed, but was expected to surge near the close because of the expirations of futures and options.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which sank 39.11 Thursday, was up 4.95 to 2523.27 at noon EDT.

Advances and declines were even at 674 each among the 1,879 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape.

Volume amounted to about 105,000,000 shares at noon, compared with 145,100,000 in the same period Thursday, but about 57 million shares changed hands during the first half-hour of trading.

The quarterly "triple-witching hour" expirations of stock-index futures, options, and options on individual stocks typically boost volume at the opening and close of trading, when the various instruments expire and investors offset those positions with trades in the stock market itself.

Futures and options expire every month, but the quarterly expirations generate much more volume since the Standard & Poor's 500 stock index futures, which account for almost 80 percent of all index futures volume, expire at that time.

September futures on the S&P 500 along with other futures and options, were settled at the opening and futures on the Major Market Index, as well as other September contracts, will expire at the close.

Analysts said there are signs that the expirations at the close will generate more buying than selling, just as those at the opening did. In fact, they said the expiration-related buying probably saved the market from declines which they said could have been sparked by a rise in oil prices because of escalating tensions in the Middle East.

In early trading, November oil futures were up $1.42 a barrel to $34.84 after Iraq sent 18 Western diplomats packing Friday in a tit-for-tat response to Europe's expulsion of Iraqis, and warned there will be no retreat until the conflict reaches an "honorable end."

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein had donned a military uniform and appeared on Iraqi television late Thursday while a statement broadcast on his behalf lashed out at Arab efforts to bring peace to the gulf.

The statement, described by analysts as the toughest from Saddam since he invaded Kuwait seven weeks ago, warned Iraqis that a battle was looming and that it would be a fight to liberate Jerusalem.

On the trading floor, Pepsico was the most active issue, down 1/2 to 22 1/4. General Electric followed, up one to 56 1/8. Exxon was third, up 1/4 to 51 3/8 as oil prices surged.

Among the other blue chips, AT&T was up 1/2 to 31, IBM was up 1/8 to 107 7/8, Merck was up 1/4 to 76, and General Motors was down 3/8 to 36 1/2.

Prices were lower in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. Hillhaven led the Amex issues, off 1/8 to 1 3/8.

LONDON (SEPT. 21) UPI - Stocks rebounded slightly Friday in moderate trading on the London International Stock Exchange, buoyed by bargain hunting in blue chip stocks.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which plummeted 48.9 points Thursday to its lowest level in 17 months, rebounded 8.6 points at 2,025.5. The narrower top 30 industrial average gained 6.2 points at 1,537.3.

The FT-100 index fell below the psychologically-important 2,000 point barrier early in the day, but managed to claw its way back on the strength of buyers in blue chip stocks at lower levels. Volume amounted to around 553 million shares compared with 518 million shares changing hands on Thursday.

Activity in the futures markets indicated investor confidence that a turnaround in shares may be upcoming in the medium-term. On the local economic front, news that Britain's gross domestic product showed a rise of 0.3 percent from the first quarter, had little impact on the market.

Secondary stocks continued to suffer from the after-shocks of Thursday's 49 point drop, especially property and construction firms, which have seen widespread poor performance reports issued recently.

Leisure group Brent Walker saw its share prices recover slightly after an early slump caused by fears of a fallout between the group and Grand Metropolitan, co-owners of bookmaking operators William Hill.

The dispute is over compensation Brent Walker claims it is due because of low profits at William Hill.

But, Brent Walker issued a statement saying it expects a profit report due out next week to show growth, and the stock eased 36 cents to $2.07.

Cookson rebounded 26 cents to $1.23 after plunging 65 cents a share on Thursday.

CLEVELAND (SEPT. 21) UPI - An Ohio company closed this week by the U.S. Customs Service for alleged links to the Iraqi military had been under investigation for more than a year, it was reported Friday.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer newspaper said federal investigators were aware of Solon, Ohio-based Matrix Churchill Corp.'s links to Iraq for more than a year, but their hands were tied until Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, and President Bush's subsequent order freezing Iraqi assets in the United States.

Matrix Churchill, a subsidiary of a British company controlled by the Iraqi government, was closed Monday by the U.S. Customs Service.

Federal authorities said Matrix Churchill was a central U.S. component in an array of linked companies throughout the West, a network run by a handful of Iraqis working for Saddam Hussein's son-in-law.

The same day federal agents seized Matrix Churchill, the British government expelled 23 Iraqis from the country, including an executive with links to Matrix Churchill's parent company.

The newspaper said in both cases, governments began cracking down on problems that had long troubled their national security experts, even though they have been unable to accuse anyone of breaking any laws.

Abdul Qaddumi, Matrix Churchill's secretary and a Jordanian-born American, said the company had done nothing illegal.

Pentagon officials and national security experts said the United States and its allies have for years been preoccupied with the task of cracking down on the exports of weapons or arms parts, while ignoring, for the most part, the legal sales of high-technology parts such as Matrix Churchill's machine tools.

The company's machine tools, which can shape metal within an accuracy of 10 one-thousandths of an inch, can play an important part in manufacturing a wide variety of items - from auto parts to missile parts.

In the United States, such ''dual-use'' technology enjoys a free flow even to potential enemies, because the Commerce Department has approved otherwise questionable licenses for companies whose products appear to have commercial applications.

Officials told The Plain Dealer the practice continues, often over the objections of the government's national security experts, and overlooks the fact that leaders such as Iraq's Saddam Hussein increasingly have tried to purchase not simply bomb parts but machines to make the machines that make the bombs.

During the last five years, the Commerce Department has granted 486 licenses for exports of sensitive U.S. technology to Iraq, worth some $720 million.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 21) UPI - Patients who cannot take standard treatments for certain AIDS-related infections will be given easier access to an experimental drug, a drug company said Friday.

Astra Pharmaceutical Products Inc., the Westborough, Mass. subsidiary of Sweden's A.B. Astra, said it will provide the drug foscarnet free to people infected with the AIDS virus who are not helped by or cannot tolerate existing drugs for herpes and cytomegalovirus infections.

Currently, the standard treatment for cytomegalovirus infections, which can threaten sight, damage the brain or cause fatal pneumonia, is ganciclovir. However, that drug should not be taken along with AZT, the only government-approved drug to directly fight the acquired immune deficiency syndrome virus, because they both suppress production of white blood cells.

The major side effects of foscarnet, which is administered intravenously, are kidney toxicity, mild anemia and changes in blood calcium levels, the company said.

Herpes infections are generally treated with a drug called acyclovir. However, some patients who develop resistance to the drug may be helped by foscarnet, which has the brand name Foscavir.

To qualify for the expanded distribution plan, patients must also be unable to take part in more traditional tests that the Food and Drug Administration requires for drug approval, company officials said. Doctors of patients who may be eligible for foscarnet should call Astra at 1-800-388-4148.

MANCHESTER, NH (SEPT. 21) UPI - Officials of BankEast Corp. said Friday they may be forced to seek bankruptcy court protection from creditors who are demanding immediate payment of $13 million in debentures.

But they reassured depositors that the dispute will not affect the holding company's banking, mortage or trust subsidiaries.

Senior Vice President David Blake said negotiations with Phoenix Mutual Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn., and John Alden Life Insurance Co. of Miami are continuing to avert a bankruptcy filing.

''We've been in technical default on the agreement since the end of last year when our capital ratios fell below those required (by the creditors),'' Blake said. ''We've made every interest payment on schedule and principal payments don't begin until 1992.''

State Banking Commissioner Roland Roberge said he was aware of the BankEast dispute, but he declined comment on it.

The two insurance companies hold $13 million in subordinated debentures. Blake said they accelerated the maturity of the debt to, in effect, demand immediate payment in full.

''If they persist in their demands we may seek U.S. Bankruptcy Court protection, but we don't see that as a likely possibilty,'' he said, noting that the two insurance companies would be classified as unsecured creditors in any bankruptcy proceeding.

Blake said the dispute does not affect BankEast despositors or other customers.

''This is a holding company issue,'' he said. ''It is not a bank issue or a mortgage company or trust company issue.''

BankEast Corp. is New Hampshire's eighth-largest bank holding company with assets of $1 billion.

PARIS (SEPT. 21) UPI - A strike by garbagemen in the French capital left Paris Mayor Jacques Chirac steaming Friday as the city was forced to resort to emergency measures and trash haulers blocked access to incinerators. "This strike is not only illegal but also condemnable because it has taken on a completely inadmissable form," Chirac said.

Strikers are "not content to leave their vehicles in the garage but have also blocked access to three incinerators and two transfer stations" used to store garbage until it is burned.

The strike since Sept. 18 in 14 of the city's 20 districts has sidewalks crowded with barrels and the odor of waste wafting across the City of Light as the haulers, led by the Communist-dominated General Confederation of Labor, press their demands for more wage increases.

The protest involves 90 percent of the 600 drivers and loaders that haul trash in Paris. A 24-day strike by garbage men in May forced the city to increase pay by $30 a month.

Chirac announced that in nine districts the city is providing free plastic garbage bags, while in others containers have been installed for trash disposal.

LONDON (SEPT. 21) UPI - The international watchdog group Amnesty International Friday protested the Sept. 13 execution of 27 soldiers by the Nigerian government, branding the convictions too speedy, suspect and shrouded in secrecy.

The London-based human rights group said it was concerned that the convictions following secret trials before a government-controlled tribunal, would not stand up to public scrutiny.

The prisoners were executed for allegedly taking part in a failed coup attempt in April against the military government of President Ibrahim Babangida.

''They had no right of appeal and were executed the day afterthe court's verdicts were submitted to the government for approval,'' Amnesty said.

The speed at which the government reviewed the convictions suggests that a thorough examination of the court records did not take place, Amnesty officials added.

The prisoners were not given a chance to appeal and the public not made aware of their death sentences until two days after their executions, Amnesty alleged.

The special military court, presided over by an army officer who was a member of the government, sentenced 29 people to death but the date of conviction and sentencing was not made clear in the official announcement on September 15.

No independent observers were allowed into the trials and consequently no detailed assessment of the fairness or defects of the trial was available, Amnesty stated.

Defendants were not allowed to choose their own defense counsel, who were military officers and employees of the government. Amnesty officials said it was not clear if the accused had sufficient time to prepare their defense properly.

The 27 executions came less two months after the execution of 42 others also convicted of involvement in the same coup attempt. This brings the total of executions connected with the coup attempt to 69.

Both the July and September executions took place immediately after the Armed Forces Ruling Council rejected petitions for clemency and confirmed the death sentences, Amnesty said.

In a related move, the British government announced Thursday that it had formally protested to Nigeria over the executions of the 27 soldiers and about Nigeria's apparently pro-Iraqi stance in recent weeks.

Lynda Chalker, Britain's prime minister of state, has cancelled a planned visit to the country in early October, British officials said.

A spokesman for the British High Commission in Lagos stressed that many of the 27 soldiers executed had been sentenced as a result of a re- trial and that at the first hearing they had been acquitted and discharged.

But, Britain was also angered at the treatment given by the Nigerian government to visiting envoys from Iraq and Kuwait. President Babangida met with a special envoy of Saddam Hussein last Friday, the same day that Iraqi troops were forcing their way into western Embassies in Kuwait.

A Nigerian government statement failed to label Iraq as the aggressor in the invasion of Kuwait and made no mention of the violation of diplomatic premises or the holding of western hostages, the high commission complained.

A visit by the Kuwaiti minister for information was given little prominence by the government, although President Babangida did re-affirm Nigeria's committment to United Nations sanctions against Iraq.

Reliable diplomatic sources in Lagos also confirmed that the West German government has withdrawn an invitation made to Babangida to visit Germany later this year.

BELGRADE, YUGOSLAVIA (SEPT. 21) UPI - In a major crackdown on ethnic Albanians, Serbian authorities in Yugoslavia's southern Kosovo province have arrested six ethnic Albanian government members on suspicion of plotting against the state, a Kosovo court said Friday.

The district court in Pristina, the Kosovo provincial capital 200 miles south of Belgrade, said the Kosovo District Attorney ''opened criminal proceedings against former officials'' who had been ousted by Serbia's communist rulers for disobedience.

Police in Pristina arrested the six members of the former Kosovo provincial government: Prime Minister Jusuf Zejnulahu, Interior Minister Jusuf Karakushi, Traffic Minister Seljadin Skeja, Science and Culture Minister Muhamet Bicaj, Labor and Health Minister Lek Vuksami, and Cabinet member Isa Mustava. Also arrested was Agim Malja, the dismissed manager of the closed Albanian-language Pristina Radio and Television Station, the court said.

In its statement, the Pristina court said the seven men were placed under investigation on suspicion of ''forming a group aimed at changing in an anti-constitutional way the borders of Serbia and declaring Kosovo a republic.''

The District Attorney suspects the seven formed a group to plot ''hostile activities'' against Yugoslavia and endanger its territorial integrity.

On July 2, a majority of the ethnic Albanian members of the Kosovo provincial assembly signed a declaration pronouncing Kosovo independent from the Serbian republic, the largest of Yugoslavia's six states.

On July 5, Serbia's leadership in Belgrade suspended the predominantly ethnic Albanian provincial administration, dissolving its assembly and the government and taking complete control of the Kosovo administration.

On Sept. 13, the majority ethnic Albanian members of the dissolved Kosovo provincial asembly announced the adoption at a secret meeting in a Kosovo village of a constitution for their self-proclaimed republic of Kosovo.

Earlier in September, about 150,000 ethnic Albanians staged a one-day strike protesting alleged human rights violations by Serbias authorities.

In Serbia's clean-up campaign, more than 16,000 ethnic Albanians, including 2,000 police, have been laid off for refusing to work under the Serbian rule or participating in the strike, officials of the Kosovo independent trade unions have said.

Serbian police carried out search for illegal weapons and ammunition hidden by ethnic Albanians in mid-September when four villagers were killed and many injured in gun battles with police in Kosovo province, where 1.75 million ethnic Albanians outnumber 250,000 Serbs who account for 8.5 million and make up nearly 40 percent of Yugoslavia's 23 million people.

Kosovo is cherished by Serbs as the cradle of their culture and Christian Orthodox religion. Serbs and Moslem ethnic Albanians in Kosovo have accused each other of mistreatment and persecution for decades, and periodically ethnic violence has errupted.

Earlier this year, at least 32 ethnic Albanians were killed and more than 300 injured in clashes with Serbian police in Kosovo.

Baghdad today expelled 18 Western diplomats in a tit-for-tat response to Europe's expulsion of Iraqi envoys. Iraqi President Saddam appeared on Iraqi television in military uniform and a statement read in his behalf said Baghdad won't retreat. He warned Iraqis to prepare for war. It was his toughest statement since he invaded Kuwait.

The Philippines today ended four days of talks on U-S bases in the country, saying it wants to take over four smaller facilities along with Clark Air Base when their leases expire next year. A U-S spokesman says there were NO agreements reached, but Washington is willing to discuss the proposals. U-S basing rights in the Philippines will end with the September 1991 expiration of a 1947 pact.

(SEPT. 21) UPI - Canada's Parliament goes back to work on Monday in what one political scientist calls probably ''the most unstable political environment'' in some time. He cited growing public anger over the refusal of Conservative Prime Minister Brian Mulroney to play any decisive role in several major crises confronting the country.

This time the mischievous, spike-haired Bart appeared in a Madison, Wisconsin, court where a 41-year-old man let the character do his talking. MOSCOW (SEPT. 21) UPI - A dispute over jurisdiction between two local government bodies has closed one of the two Pizza Hut restaurants that opened with great fanfare 10 days ago, a restaurant spokesman said Friday.

''We apologize to our customers for the temporary closure by the Soviet authorities of our restaurant,'' said a sign posted on the door of the flagship Moscow Pizza Hut on Kutuzovsky Prospect about a mile from the Kremlin.

Andrew Rafalat, the deputy general director of the joint venture running the Soviet Pizza Huts, said the restaurant was closed by officials from the Kievsky regional council in a jursidiction dispute with the Moscow city council.

Rafalat said he could not disclose the specific reason given for the shutdown, which was ordered with just an hour's notice Thursday. He said he hoped to reopen Tuesday next week.

''It's more of an internal issue on the Soviet side,'' Rafalat said. ''Its a difference of jurisdiction that they are resolving. We are keeping the restaurant closed until they can get it straightened out.''

There have been increasing numbers of disputes about jurisdiction over business in the Soviet Union as the country moves toward major economic reforms - from the Russian republic claiming the central government has no right to export raw materials from its territory to local issues including the Pizza Hut.

Western businessmen have complained in recent months they often do not know who is in charge amid the disputes between the central government and the republics, between the republics and autonomous regions and cities and between cities and city districts.

''This is part of our familiarization with the Moscow marketplace,'' Rafalat said with a laugh.

The location of the Pizza Hut falls under the jurisdiction of the Moscow city council, which is the Soviet partner with Pizza Hut owner Pepsico in the joint venture, but it also is within the smaller Kievsky region that has its own council seeking to exert control.

The sign on the door suggested that ''while we resolve our issues'' customers go to the second Pizza Hut in a different region of Moscow, which was not affected by the shutdown.

The takeout window at the Kutuzovsky restaurant was selling pizza Friday to use up dough and other ingredients that had already been prepared, but Rafalat said that was allowed so the closure did not result in a waste of food.

Since its grand opening Sept 12, the now-closed Pizza Hut has had three- to five-hour lines of Moscow residents waiting for tables in the section of the restaurant where meals can be purchased for rubles. A separate hard currency section catering to foreigners has also done good business but there has generally been no wait for a table.

Rafalat said the restaurant has been serving ''several thousand'' customers each day and the reviews from the Soviet diners have been generally good.

SALT LAKE CITY (SEPT. 21) UPI - Mormon Church President Ezra Taft Benson continued to improve Friday following brain surgery to remove two blood clots, church officials said.

The 91-year-old spiritual leader to the world's 7.5 million Mormons was in serious but stable condition two days after the surgery ''and will remain for at least another day (in intensive care),'' church spokesman Don LeFevre said.

Following the 2 1/2-hour operation Wednesday at LDS Hospital, neurosurgeon Bruce Sorensen had said Benson would probably remain in the intensive care unit for two days and could be sent home ''in seven to eight days.''

''President Benson was conversing more today with the hospital staff, those who are working with him, and the doctors are pleased with his progress,'' said LeFevre.

Sorensen said the doctors found two large blood clots, one on either side of Benson's head, that had been causing his severe headaches and difficulty in swallowing. One was drained off through a small hole drilled in the right side of his skull, but a ''solid clot'' on the left side required doctors to cut ''a fist-sized hole'' in Benson's skull.

The agriculture secretary in the Eisenhower administration was hospitalized Tuesday. He was the first Mormon to serve in a presidential cabinet and the first clergyman in 100 years to serve in such a post.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 21) UPI - Prince Bandar bin Sultan, the Saudi Arabian ambassador to the United States, said Friday he did not foresee a confrontation over an arms sales package with the United States, but did not rule out purchasing weapons elsewhere to meet his country's military needs.

Bandar also indicated that the proposed arms to help Saudi Arabia to bolster its forces against the threat of an invasion by Iraq could be split into two sales - one covering weapons needed immediately, the other for needs farther in the future.

The Saudi ambassador cautioned reporters not to place ''too much emphasis on this package,'' saying that negotiations on the sale of sophisticated arms to Saudi Arabia was an ''unrolling thing.''

President Bush met with congressional leaders Friday to discuss the status of the U.S. operation in the Persian Gulf and House Democratic leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri said there was passing mention of the arms sale, adding Bush did not mention cutting the package.

''The administration will consider what they actually want and then we will deal with it in the proper course,'' Gephardt said. ''I think an arms sale to Saudi Arabia is appropriate. It's a question of how much and what kind of things.''

White House deputy press secretary Roman Popadiuk said the administration had hoped to send a proposed Saudi arms package to Congress Friday, but that it had not yet reached a decision on the size or scope.

Popadiuk declined to predict when the package would be ready, but said Bush told House and Senate leaders ''that congressional support for friends is as important as congressional support for Desert Shield.''

''The president pointed out that we cannot pledge support for Saudi Arabia while we deny it the means to defend itself,'' the deputy press secretary said.

Initial reports that the administration was considering an arms sale of over $20 billion - including highly sophisticated weapons systems - drew opposition from some quarters on Capitol Hill and from Israel. Since then there has been speculation that the proposed sale would be reduced.

Bandar, speaking to reporters after a two-hour breakfast meeting with the Senate Intelligence Committee, tried to dismiss talk of any fight between his country and the United States on the sale of arms.

''I have heard a lot of the $20 billion package and $25 billion package and that it will be scaled down,'' Bandar said. ''The truth of the matter is there is not a single package there.

''There is requirements for my country ... and we will come up with whatever is appropriate for priorities, for what we now need and what could be done later,'' he said. ''It's very important you don't put too much emphasis on this package.

''We are not having an AWACSs fight here or an F-15 fight,'' the ambassador said. ''That is not the case, nor is it the spirit this package is being dicussed in the administration or the Congress,'' Bandar said. ''I didn't sense that confrontation there.''

Bandar added, ''I realy believe people are reading much more into this package that we Saudis. There are requirements for my country, for our armed forces, that will be fulfilled.

''We would always prefer to fulfill it in the United States. These weapons are not toys. They cost billions of dollars. We would prefer to recycle those billions of dollars into the United States - one, because you are a friend and two, because you make the best equipment in the world, and three, it's only fair due to enegry prices and other things,'' Bandar said.

Bandar rejected fears that a massive arms sale would destabilize the delicate situation in the Middle East, adding that AWACS and the F-15s obtained only after bitter protests were never used to upset the balance.

Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., said the arms sale was not a major topic at the breakfast, adding, ''I hope we won't allow ourselves to be stampeded into some kind of fight.''

Boren said Congress will have to make sure that the weapons contained in any sale ''are not destabilizing'' and see ''if all these items are necessary.''

But Boren said both Saudi Arabia and Israel were approaching the arms sale in a different, more restrained manner than previously.

Boren said that Moshe Arens, Israel's defense minister with whom he met earlier in the week, did not have a ''totally negative attitude'' on the proposed sale. Israel is seeking increased military sales to offset the proposed purchased by Saudi Arabia.

(SEPT. 21) UPI - Iraq today answered Europe's decision to kick out several Iraqi envoys. Baghdad sent 18 Western diplomats packing... including three Britons, 11 French and four Italians. British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd says he believes that the remaining staff in Baghdad will be able to carry on with the duties of the Embassy. A French official describes the action as ''totally abusive.''

The leader of South Africa's Zulu movement Inkatha today conditionally agreed to peace talks next month with Nelson Mandela and the African National Congress. Mangosuthu Buthelezi says he will meet with the A-N-C on October 5th only if the A-N-C's ''intentions are genuine.'' The talks are aimed at ending black violence that has left 750 people dead since early August.

The strain of the Persian Gulf crisis prompted the Philippine government today to raise the price of gasoline and other petroleum products by an average of 29 percent. (SEPT. 21) UPI - In the Philippines, 40 people- including 36 soldiers and four civilians- are facing double murder charges in the 1983 slayings of opposition leader Benigno Aquino and his alleged hit man. SOFIA, BULGARIA (SEPT. 21) UPI - Prime Minister Andrei Loukanov, saying unnamed forces were trying to destabilize the country and spark civil war, vowed Friday to unveil a 100-day emergency program of radical economic reform next month.

Loukanov's pledge to the National Assembly came hours after the Parliament confirmed his new one-party Cabinet and on the eve of a critical Socialist Party congress, at which pro-Loukanov moderates are expected to consolidate their control of the revamped Communist Party.

''The government has been receiving information that actions are being prepared to destabilize the situation in Bulgaria,'' the prime minister said in a speech.

''There are forces in the country who take advantage of every manifestation of public discontent to implement their scenario for deepening the confrontation, for destabilizing the country and for a civil war,'' he said.

Loukanov offered no details, but said the seriousness of the situation demanded that his government ''take over its responsibility right away.'' He said he would submit to the Parliament by Oct. 9 a 100- day plan to stabilize the economy through deep reforms.

The Parliament approved Loukanov's list of Cabinet nominees after a stormy late-night debate that ended early Friday. Only 219 of the 400 deputies cast ballots, as the entire caucus of opposition Union of Democratic Forces boycotted the vote.

Loukanov said he was forced to name only Socialist Party members to his cabinet because the opposition parties refused his invitation to join in a coalition government.

Stoyan Ganev, spokesman for the UDF, said the opposition umbrella group had insisted on control of key ministries and the acceptance of opposition views on economic reform as conditions for joining a Socialist-led coalition. The UDF also insisted that the government include no discredited political figures from the Communist Party's totalitarian past.

The Socialists' 39th Party Congress, which opens Saturday in Sofia, is seen as a chance for Loukanov and other moderates to oust old-guard Communists who were linked to former dictator Todor Zhivkov.

The congress takes place against a backdrop of a severe economic crisis in the country and deep divisions within the party.

Although the Socialists won a majorty in the parliament in the June elections - Bulgaria's first free balloting in almost half a century - the party's leadership now finds itself under pressure from the democratic opposition, conservative forces within the party and ultra- right wing groups in society.

Moderates say they hope to use the congress to complete the transition of the BSP into a Western-style social democratic party.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 21) UPI - Syndicated columnist Jack Anderson was hit on the head with a pipe and robbed of about $100 by a mugger in an alley just moments after he left his office, a spokeswoman said Friday.

Spokeswoman Opal Ginn said Anderson, 67, left his office about 4:30 p.m. Thursday and headed down the alley to get to his car when a man in his 20s approached him, said ''Good Afternoon Sir,'' then hit him on the back of the head. The man then demanded all his money.

''Jack gave him about $100 from his pocket and said the man raised the pipe as if to strike him again when a woman began to scream,'' Ginn said.

Anderson returned to his office after the attack, and Ginn phoned police.

''I dialed 911 and the police put me on hold. I held for approximately five minutes, then I'd say it took about 15 minutes before the police arrived. By that time the man could've walked across the river,'' Ginn said.

Ginn said Anderson refused hospital treatment and his son drove him home.

''No skin was broken,'' she said. ''He had no blurred vision or broken skin, just a large bump on his head.''

She said Anderson, who has been a columnist for four decades, moved to his office on P Street about three years ago.

RENO, NV (SEPT. 21) UPI - Attempts by a U.S. Bankruptcy trustee to reopen Nevada's largest brothel to make money for Uncle Sam have failed and the bordello remained closed Friday.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge James Thompson Friday took Joe Conforte's Mustang Ranch in Storey County near Reno, Nev., out of the hands of the court-appointed trustee and gave the Internal Revenue Service the responsibility of deciding how to collect millions of dollars in back taxes.

It was not immediately clear what the IRS intended to do. IRS manager Diedre Pagni in Reno said the assets of Conforte were protected by the federal Bankruptcy court.

Trustee Jeri Coppa had proposed reopening the brothel immediately to increase the chances of its sale by the government. However, she ran into a myriad of legal roadblocks, including the lengthy process of obtaining a Storey County brothel license.

The Mustang Ranch was closed Tuesday when the court placed the bordello in Chapter 7 bankruptcy at the request of the IRS - normally the first step toward liquidation.

Conforte operated the 105-room bawdy house under the protection of Chapter 11 bankruptcy for the past four years. But the IRS said Conforte failed to make $75,000 a month payments on back taxes and the agency moved to foreclose on the property through Chapter 7 proceedings.

Coppa said Friday, following a closed hearing in the judge's chambers, that she faced a problem in keeping the legal prostitutes at the brothel unless it could be reopened immediately. Coppa expressed concern about insurance, personal liability and the fact there was no operating capital. Coppa said the till at the brothel was empty when she took over and that she suspected that up to $7,000 was missing.

CAIRO (SEPT. 21) UPI - Iraq, again escalating tension on the diplomatic and propaganda fronts of the Persian Gulf standoff, sent 18 Western diplomats packing Friday in a tit-for-tat response to Europe's expulsion of Iraqis and warned there will be no retreat until the conflict reaches an "honorable end."

Baghdad also complained Friday that two planes had violated its air space, the third such complaint since the gulf crisis began seven weeks ago when Iraq invaded neighboring Kuwait.

The developments seemed more ominous coming on the heels of a get- tough speech by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, who warned his nation Thursday night that it was close to war and that any fight would be a fight for Arab honor and the liberation of Jerusalem.

Japan, meanwhile, said Friday it had failed to come up with a plan to send soldiers to join the U.S.-led multinational force in the gulf, but Poland reportedly was considering sending a small contingent of troops to the region.

In retaliation for the expulsion of three American diplomats from Baghdad, the State Department Friday ordered the staff of the Iraqi embassy in Washington reduced from 19 to 16. A military attache and two other diplomats have been given a week to leave the United States, the same time limit given American and other foreign diplomats expelled Friday by the Iraqi government.

European officials said Iraq sent three British, 11 French and four Italian diplomats packing, apparently in retaliation for the expulsion from those European countries of Iraqi diplomats earlier this week.

''The expulsion is a reaction to what we did to them,'' said British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd. ''I am keen that the rest of the (embassy) staff in Baghdad should be able to carry on with their job helping the British community.''

London, Paris and Rome had expelled Iraqi diplomats and military students following a weekend raid by Iraqi soldiers on several Western embassy compounds in Kuwait.

Egypt said Friday it was closing the Iraqi military attache office in Cairo and asking its personnel to leave the country within seven days, according to the semi-official Middle East News Agency.

Butros Ghali, minister of state for foreign affairs, said Cairo was closing the office and expelling two other diplomats from the Iraqi embassy in response to the closure by Iraqi authorities of the Egyptian military attache office in Baghdad.

Egypt is currently deploying an extra 15,000 troops to Saudi Arabia to join the Western-led forces in protecting the kingdom against possible aggression from Iraqi troops massed at the Kuwaiti border. Egypt, the Gulf states, Morocco and Syria have all sent Arab troops to join the force.

Japan, however, said Friday that the government and political parties could not agree on a plan to send personnel to the region. Tokyo has pledged $4 billion to help offset the cost of the massive military buildup, but has been under increasing international pressure to provide troops as well.

In a move unimaginable just a few years ago, the Polish government may send a small contingent to join the U.S.-led forces as a gesture of support, the Polish newspaper Zycie Warszawy reported. Never before has a Warsaw Pact nation sent military troops to serve alongside Western forces.

Government sources told the newspaper the United States and Poland had discussed the possiblity, but officials declined comment on the report.

Iranian President Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani said Friday he would be willing to help bring peace to the area, but only on the condition Iraq withdraws its troops from Kuwait, which it invaded Aug. 2.

The last U.S.-chartered flight out of Kuwait was tentatively expected Saturday State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said in Washington.

With that flight, she said, the U.S. embassy in Kuwait believes that every American who is able to leave and wants to leave will have been evacuated.

So far, about 1,700 Americans, mainly women and children, have been airlifted out of Kuwait. Another 1,200 Americans remain in the emirate and there are 120 in Iraq, including diplomatic personnel.

One more American was picked up in Kuwait by Iraqi troops, bring to about 84 the number of American men held by Iraqi authorities. Iraqi authorities have been rounding up Western men and taking them to key economic and military installations, where they are kept to guard against attack by Western forces.

Saddam, wearing a military uniform, appeared on Iraqi television Thursday as a statement broadcast for him blasted Arab efforts to end the gulf crisis.

The statement, described by analysts as the toughest by Saddam since he invaded Kuwait seven weeks ago, warned Iraqis that a battle was looming and that it would be a fight to liberate Jerusalem.

He was shown on television in his capacity as chairman of a joint meeting of the Revolution Command Council and the Ruling Baath Arab Socialist Party.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 21) UPI - NASA has apparently taken a cue from the Soviet space program in designing an experimental spacecraft, Aviation Week and Space Technology reported Friday.

The HL-20 Personnel Launch System, a small, winged craft that could ferry 10 astronauts at a time to and from a space station, resembles a space plane the Soviets tested from 1982 to 1984, the magazine reported in an issue to be released next week.

''Their work stimulated our interest,'' William Piland of NASA's Langley Research Center in Hampton, Va., told the magazine. ''We had a very keen interest in that configuration.''

NASA has spent years ''gloating'' about the Soviet Buran spacecraft's striking similarity to NASA's space shuttle, the magazine said.

''I'm not aware of the U.S. ever designing one of its spacecraft on a Soviet design,'' said Marcia Smith, a specialist in aerospace policy for the Congressional Research Service, told United Press International.

Piland noted, however, that the Soviet craft ''seems to have evolved'' from U.S. designs, the magazine said.

NASA is exploring a variety of alternatives to the space shuttle that would allow the shuttle to be reserved for carrying large payloads.

A mock-up of the HL-20, built by North Carolina State University, is 29 1/2 feet long and has a wingspan of 23 1/2 feet, the magazine said.

The craft would weigh about 24,000 pounds and its wings could be made to fold so it would fit in the space shuttle payload bay to assure that crews could return to Earth from the space station if a shuttle were unavailable, the magazine said.

It could also be used for missions to repair satellites or rescue stranded space crews, it said.

ORLANDO, FL (SEPT. 21) UPI - Sea World officials were puzzled Friday by the sudden death of the park's only male killer whale.

A necropsy was performed Thursday night on the whale, named Kanduke, but tissue analyses that should reveal the cause of death were expected to take four to six weeks.

''We're still evaluating all the lab results and the results of the necroposy. Most of the results at this point are preliminary and inconclusive, and it's going to be four to six weeks,'' said Frank Murru, curator at Sea World Florida.

Kanduke, which like all killer whales at Sea World parks performed under the stage name Shamu, died Thursday at 5:40 p.m., said Sea World spokesman Nick Gollattscheck.

''It was very much unexpected that this illness occurred. We really weren't prepared for his death. It came on very, very suddenly,'' Murru said. ''He was I guess, noticed to have a slowdown in activity and a decrease in appetite beginning ... on Tuesday.''

The 22-foot-long, 10,000-pound killer whale believed to be in his mid- to late 20s, last performed at the park Monday, Gollattscheck said.

The death leaves Sea World Florida with four female killer whales - two of them calves that were fathered by Kanduke - and no males.

The four Sea World parks - in California, Texas, Ohio and Florida - now have 13 killer whales, just one of them a male.

Murru and Brad Andrews, assistant zoological director for all the Sea World parks, said there was no pressure to bring another male to the Orlando park soon and no decision had been made on whether to do that.

''Right now our major concern is to concentrate on finding out what caused the death of the animal, and we will evaluate the impact on our breeding programs in the near future,'' Murru said.

Kanduke was captured in Pedder Bay, British Columbia, Canada, in 1975 and was brought to Orlando in January 1987 after being displayed at Marineland Canada in Niagra Falls, Ontario.

MOSCOW (SEPT. 21) UPI - Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev urged Parliament Friday to get moving and approve a plan for a radical transition to a free-market economicsystem, the "most difficult choice" of the perestroika era.

But legislators, who listened in hushed silence to Gorbachev's exhortations, put off until Monday a vote that could change how the the Soviet Union does business.

Gorbachev said the lawmakers now had the chance to "once and for all end the total state monopoly ownership that is ruining us" and adopt a system based on the concept of private property.

"It is the most difficult choice," Gorbachev told the serious-faced deputies. Some just shook their heads at Gorbachev's glib use of explosive language in a state that has enshrined state ownership as the basis of its economic system for 72 years.

He urged the deputies not to waste time discussing and refining their plan. "We have no more time. There is no more time - all the more so because we see in what a situation people are in now," he said, referring to shortages in consmer products ranging from bread to cigarettes and asprin. "We have to work at solving this problem, solve it and move ahead," he said.

Gorbachev came out strongly in favor of a 500-day plan, a proposal first broached by Boris Yeltsin, whose Russian republic has already adopted the formula and vowed to implement it no matter what Gorbachev's central leadership does.

But the Soviet president said the Parliament is free to incorporate ideas from the government's alternative plan - a sop to Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov, whose own gradual formula was shelved in June and whose resignation Yeltsin wants.

Gorbachev steered clear of details of the 500-day formula that would hurtle the country into a free-market system, end bailout subsidies to failing enterprises and cause unemployment that some publications estimate could reach 20 million. "We are entering the market, entering it. The real market is maybe five or ten years away," Gorbachev said, gesticulating as if to calm fears.

Whatever is adopted - the Shatalin plan named after its architect, economist Stanislav Shatalin, or the presidential plan - it will mark a turning point. Except for defense and some other vital sectors, the 15 republics will eventually be responsible for their own economies. The blueprint envisions the eventual end of central industrial ministries, which have directed all economic enterprises.

Enterprises, plants and factories as well as collective farms will be "privatized" during the 500 days, which Gorbachev explained should not be taken literally as a timetable.

Some of the goals are stupifying, such as bringing the budget deficit down to $8 billion. The deficit last year was $192 billion, and efforts to halve it as planned this year are in tatters because of the unceasing printing of rubles.

Whatever plan is adopted, Gorbachev said he opposed the resignation of the Ryzhkov government. "And not because I am president today, and Ryzhkov is premier. No, because if at this crucial turning point, if we start reshuffling throughout the system, throughout the country, it will be a present to all sorts of pretenders to power and ambitious individuals who are prepared to exploit the country and our difficulties."

NEW YORK (SEPT. 21) UPI - Barringer Instruments Inc. Friday unveiled a new highly-sensitive explosives detector to counter terrorist bombings whose threat has been mounting with the tension in the Middle East.

The system, called Ionscan, is based on the ion mobility spectrometry technology which can identify a wide range of substances based on an analysis of the specific speed of ions released by the objects.

The Ionscan can "sniff" explosives, including plastic explosives which usually go undetected through traditional X-ray machines, and can also detect narcotics.

"Ionscan could prevent modern tragedies such as airline hijacking or bombing," said President Robert Melnick, pointing to renewed fears of terrorist threats linked to the Middle East crisis.

The detection system includes a small, portable vacuum cleaner which can collect dust from clothes, suitcases or containers. Samples of the dust is collected on a film which is inserted in the ionization machine which charges and analyzes the particles.

Because the chemical structure of each explosive is unique - like a true "fingerprint" - its ions travel at a specific speed, quickly identified by the Ionscan.

No explosive, including bullets, can be handled without leaving minute particles on its container, and Ioscan, which takes not more than six seconds to analyze a sample, can trace a wide range of substances, even when concealed in a case inside the trunk of a car or inside a container. "Ionscan can be used at border crossings, airport and maritime terminals," Melnick said.

Ionscan is priced at about $65,000, cheaper than less sensitive units and is in the same price range as airport X-ray equipment. "Explosives and plastics or drugs cannot be spotted by X-ray machines," Melnick added.

One problem often found with ionization detection equipment is their high level of sensitivity can trigger false alarms. But Melnick said Ioscan can be programmed to respond only to certain levels. Ionscan's prime application could be for the detection of narcotics, since drug substances also release specific particles.

Barringer, based in Morristown, N.J., has already presented the system to several Canadian agencies, including the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and is taking Ioscan to U.S. law enforcement agencies and private companies concerned about security.

ATLANTA (SEPT. 21) UPI - Architect and developer John Portman said Friday his company was "not surprised or unduly concerned" about a lawsuit filed against the Portman Co. by Chemical Bank, alleging default on a loan.

Chemical Bank filed suit in Fulton State Court alleging that Portman defaulted on $5 million that was due Sept. 1 on a revolving line of credit. The Portman Co. had said earlier that it is working on forming a collateral pool of assets for its unsecured creditors.

"Negotiating a collateralization plan for a firm of our size and scope is very complex and time-consuming," said Dennis Glass, executive vice president and chief financial officer of the Portman Co.

"We are working with more than 20 separate lenders, so it's not unexpected that there will be some reasonable disagreement among them," Glass said. "In fact, in negotiations like this, it is a common tactic for one or more lenders to file suits while the collateralization plan is being developed. At that same time, it's customary for lawsuits such as this one to be dismissed as the plan comes together. We would expect that to be the case here also."

The company said it expects the collateral pool agreement to be agreed on in principle shortly. On Aug. 31, the West German DG Bank Genossenschaftsbank, filed suit alleging that Portman failed to pay $3 million on a 90-day loan it made to him by June 1.

Portman also missed a September payment on a $332.5 million mortgage on Peachtree Center held by Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States.

While the suits involve debts that are small in relation to Portman's total debt, the legal actions put pressure on the negotiations that have been going on for more than a month between Portman and 22 lenders. The Portman Companies' properties include seven hotels, 17 office buildingsand five other commercial buildings.

Portman is a privately held company that does not release detailed information about its financial dealings. The Atlanta Journal- Constitution reported that Portman's total debt has soared to nearly $2 billion and that he is renegoiating millions of dollars in loans with his lenders, some of the nation's largest real estate financiers.

At the end of 1989, Portman started a record amount of construction in downtown Atlanta - a $378 million, 60-story tower, One Peachtree Center, which will be his most imposing yet in downtown, and the $145 million Atlanta Gift Mart.

#90264u1671 09/21/1990 ~United Press International
NEW YORK (SEPT. 21) UPI - The dollar ended mixed Friday in New York but gained heavily on the British pound, which got bashed by comments from Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher indicating that closer European currency ties probably were not going to be forged any time soon.

Currency analysts said dealings focused on the pound sterling after Thatcher, traveling in Switzerland, was quoted as saying British inflation was too high to allow the pound to join a European rate mechanism now.

Coming after remarks earlier in the week by Bundesbank President Karl Otto Poehl to the effect that sterling was not ready to join the European Monetary System's exchange rate mechanism, Thatcher's comments blitzed the pound.

The pound "took a big hit" on Thatcher's remarks, said analyst Earl Johnson of Harris Trust & Savings Bank in Chicago. Late in the New York session,sterling had plunged to $1.8435 from $1.8730.

At the same time in New York, the dollar was quoted at 1.5775 German marks, up from 1.5770 Thursday, and at 136.65 Japanese yen, off from 137.65.

Johnson said the dollar also benefited from end-of-week buying by players covering short, or selling, positions before a Group of Seven monetary policy meeting Saturday in Washington. But "nobody expects anything significant" to emerge from the gathering of the world's seven largest economies' finance ministers, he said.

Still supporting the U.S. currency were Federal Reserve chairman Alan Greenspan's Wednesday comments, in which he told a congressional panel of his concern about the current high rate of U.S. inflation, which could be worsened by a weak dollar. That has led the market to restrain expectations of lower domestic interest rates.

"Weak (U.S. economic) fundamentals don't justify a strong dollar, but in the wake of Greenspan's comments it has a firmer tone," Johnson said.

Other New York dollar rates: 1.32 Swiss francs, off from 1.3205; 5.2820 French francs, up from 5.2800; and 1,174 Italian lire, off from 1,180.

In Europe, the dollar finished mixed as financial markets were indecisive on what direction the Persian Gulf conflict might take.

In London, the pound kept slipping against the dollar on the question of its linkage to the European exchange rate mechanism. Intervention by the Bank of England and by U.S. and German central banks failed to halt the slide. The British currency ended at $1.8495 vs. $1.8690 Thursday.

Skeptical comments on the pound made earlier this week by the German central bank chief "seem to have pricked a bubble of confidence in sterling," currency analyst David Smith of Williams de Broe said.

The dollar slipped in Frankfurt to 1.5735 German marks vs. 1.5785 Thursday andwas lower in Zurich, at 1.3155 Swiss francs vs. 1.3215.

But the dollar rose in Paris, Brussels and Milan, to, respectively: 5.2880 French francs vs. 5.2630, 32.41 Belgian francs vs. 32.36 and 1, 176.65 lire vs. 1,169.55.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 21) UPI - The federal government filed a lawsuit Friday seeking $200 million in damages against former officers and directors of Silverado Banking, Savings and Loan Association, including Neil Bush, the president's son.

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court in Denver, came just days before Bush is scheduled to appear before an administrative law judge to defend himself against charges he violated conflict-of-interest laws while serving as a Silverado director.

Federal regulators have accused Bush of failing to disclose conflicts involved in business transactions with two of Silverado's large creditors and preferred stockholders.

Bush has denied the charges, which if proven could result in a cease-and-desist order, a relatively mild rebuke that could prove a major embarrassment for Bush and the White House. President Bush has said he will not interfere in the case and has expressed confidence his son had done nothing wrong.

The lawsuit, filed by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. that is responsible for covering the losses of insured depositors, claims the former officers and directors of the failed Denver thrift breached their fiduciary duty and were grossly negligent in their duties.

"This suit was filed after a careful and thorough investigation conducted over several months," said Douglas Jones, the FDIC's senior deputy general counsel.

"Our conclusion is that Silverado was the victim of sophisticated schemes and abuses by insiders and of gross negligence by its directors and outside professionals," Jones said. The lawsuit alleges that former Silverado officers made improper loans and investments that were approved by the directors.

Jones said the lawsuit is seeking to recover "every available dollar" for the federal deposit insurance fund and taxpayers. Bailing out the failed thrift is expected to cost taxpayers $1.6 billion.

Silverado collapsed in 1988 and was taken over by government regulators in December of that year, four months after Bush stepped down as a director. Bush who lives in Denver and is in the oil industry there, joined Silverado's board in 1985.

In addition to Bush, others named as defendants in the suit include Michael Wise, Silverado's former chairman and chief executive officer; Robert Lewis, the thrift's former chief financial officer, Richard Vandapool, former chief operating officer and Russell Murray, former executive vice president.

W. James Metz, who owned 88 percent of Silverado's stock, also was named, along with former board members Florian Barth, Richard Bunchman, Diane Ingels, Marjorie Page and Richard Vitkus.

The Denver law firm of Sherman & Howard, which served as general counsel to Silverado, also was named as a defendant, as was Ronald Jacobs, a partner in the firm who also served on the board of Silverado's holding company.

The FDIC said it included the law firm in its lawsuit because it allegedly placed "the interests of a few insiders over those of the institution they were retained to protect."

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 21) UPI - President Bush said Friday that if the United Nations votes to bolster the naval blockade of Iraq with air interdiction, ''the United States would do its part'' to halt Iraqi- bound planes.

Bush rejected suggestions, however, that the United States and Iraq are moving closer toward war, and reiterated that he hopes economic sanctions would eventually lead to a peaceful resolution of the Persian Gulf crisis.

Speaking with reporters outside the White House before leaving for a weekend at Camp David, Md., Bush said he does not believe Saddam Hussein is moving toward an launching an attack on allied forces in the gulf.

''I don't think he's ratcheting up, I think he's hunkering down,'' Bush said. ''And I say that from the way his forces are deployed,'' with hundreds of thousands in Iraqi-occupied Kuwait.

Bush laughed off a demand by Iraqi President Saddam that Saddam be allowed to give an address on American television.

Told that Saddam was preparing to release a more than hour-long tape, Bush said, ''That will finish him off in the United States. ... No one will be able to stay awake through it.''

The president said, however, he has ''no problem'' with Saddam speaking on U.S. television. He noted that the Iraqi president has received plenty of air time since the Aug. 2 takeover of Kuwait.

Bush addressed the Iraqi people Sunday in an eight-minute speech that was broadcast on Iraq's state-owned television. In the taped remarks, the president said Saddam had put Iraq on the ''brink of war.''

Diplomats said Friday that the U.N. Security Council had readied a plan to impose an embargo on air traffic to Iraq, but that enforcement was delayed pending approval of procedure.

Under the plan, they said, aircraft would be permitted to fly to and from Iraq only if they are first inspected to ensure that they are not violating the U.N.-mandated trade embargo that was imposed Aug. 6.

Bush, asked how far he would be willing to go to enforce an air embargo, said: ''We haven't crossed that. I'm listening to the discussion in our own administration and am in close consultation with other countries.''

''But if the sanctions specifically include forcing planes down that could be carrying contraband, carrying cargo that violates the sanctions, obviously the United States would do its part,'' he said.

The president said, ''I want to see a peaceful resolution. Obviously these economic sanctions are going to take some time to work. I don't know who long that is.''

Bush, who met with congressional leaders at the White House earlier Friday to discuss events in the gulf, said, ''I don't intend to be sending a signal that I'm shifting more toward the military (respons).''

Asked specifically, though, if he would promise not to fire the first shot, Bush said, ''I'm not making any commitments. There are so many contigencies. I've spelled them out.''

''The treatment of American citizens ... possible use of terror is another thing that concerns me greatly,'' he said. ''So we'll just have to leave it.''

Bush said he had updated congressmen on the situation earlier in the day and expressed his own ''deep concern for what Iraq is doing to Kuwait,'' which has been plundered and terrorized by Iraqi troops.

Asked if he thought Saddam was ready for war, Bush added, ''I don't know the answer to that. We watch the deployment of their forces.''

Bush said, ''We're going to continue to move forces - others, the British, the French, moving forces. But I wouldn't necessarily view that as a step closer to war. (But) it certainly is putting us in a much stronger position.''

PHILADELPHIA (SEPT. 21) UPI - Philadelphia will run out of cash by Dec. 1 unless state and local politicians take quick action to right the city's floundering finances, Mayor Wilson Goode said Friday.

City officials have been warning for weeks that funds would run dry by the end of the year, but Goode's announcement was the first time a specific date has been set.

The mayor said that with no action at all, city coffers would be empty by Nov. 9. But he has instituted a hiring freeze, deferred pension fund payments and put off paying back illegally-collected real estate transfer taxes to stretch funds three weeks beyond that.

Goode said he rejected cuts in city services as a way to save money, believing that would not buy the city enough time. "We could, at best, if we took the most drastic cuts we could take, buy five or six business days," Goode said. "We don't think that Dec. 1 versus Dec. 7 or 8 is worth that kind of pain to put upon our citizens."

The crisis was precipitated by a $206 million deficit, the downgrading of the city's bonds to junk status, and the collapse of a deal to sell $375 million in short-term loan notes. The note sale is necessary to tide the city over until the spring, when large portions of property and business taxes come due.

Goode said the state government will determine whether the city tries again to sell those notes. "It will be based on my evaluation of whether something positive will occur in Harrisburg, and when," Goode said.

Some observers have suggested that the city can expect no help from the state until after the Nov. 6 gubernatorial and legislative election, but Goode said political considerations played no part in fixing the date the city's purse would be empty.

"We didn't look at the election and say how can we devise a scenario to get us beyond the election," Goode said. Goode said he is not seeking a state bailout.

"We're asking the state to enable us to better solve our problems," he said. Goode said the city needs the ability to enact a local sales tax, to require employers to withhold the city wage tax, and to employ deficit financing.

The mayor said the city is asking the state for $32 million to pay for services for children and youth that the state mandates but does not now pay for.

Goode met Friday with key members of City Council and the city's legislative delegation, and said those sessions will continue as officials decide what to do. The mayor said he is confident that some action will be taken and the crisis averted.

"I can't imagine, faced with this reality we have now, people who have this responsibility not coming together to solve this problem," Goode said. "I don't want to even think about us not being able to solve this problem,"

MILWAUKEE (SEPT. 21) UPI - Four World War II era cargo airplanes modified for use in running drugs have been confiscated by federal agents, the U.S. Attorney's office announced Friday.

The DC-3 aircraft were seized by federal agents at Basler Flight Services of Oshkosh on Thursday. The aircraft were converted by Basler, apparently unwittingly, to carry cocaine shipments.

The agents seized the planes as pilots with Air Colombia, S.A., of Bogota, Colombia, arrived in Oshkosh to ferry the planes to Colombia.

Basler refitted the planes with extended cargo capacity and turboprop engines which have greatly increased the aircraft's range and speed. The modified planes are capable of and well-suited for transporting large quantities of narcotics over long distances.

Authorities said no charges were filed against the pilots and no charges were being contemplated against Basler.

Assistant U.S. Attorney William Lipscomb said the seizures were connected with an international money-laundering case that began with indictments in Phoenix, Ariz. and Atlanta, Ga.

Authorities said the planes were vauled at $10 million and were purchased in Oshkosh from Basler by agents from the Medelline drug cartel, using the proceeds of cocaine trafficking.

Tom Weigt, president of Basler Turbo Conversions, said the transaction for the planes was ''just a business deal. We don't know anything about what the aircraft were going to be used for.''

Agents were apparently convinced Basler was unaware of how the planes would be used.

''As far as we can determine, he was just an unknowing and unwitting vendor,'' said Kelly Snyder, Milwaukee chief of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration.

(SEPT 21) UPI - Thunderstorms pounded the southern Plains, parts of the South and upper Midwest while much of the nation enjoyed dry, clear weather, the National Weather Service said Friday.

Thunderstorms developing along a slow moving cold front produced locally healvy rains in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas Thursday night and Friday morning. Oklahoma City was inundated with 3.43 inches of rain in six hours ending Friday morning.

The town of Graham in north-central Texas recorded 4.6 inches, most of it in about four hours ending at noon. Heavy storms in northwest Arkansas caused street flooding in several communities, with water up to car doors in northern Fort Smith.

Showers and thunderstorms extended from southwestern Texas to Arkansas in early afternoon. Flash flood watches remained in effect in the afternoon for west central Arkansas and southeastern Oklahoma.

Showers and thunderstorms along a warm front were scattered from western Tennessee to eastern Wisconsin and southern lower Michigan.

A few showers and thunderstorms were scattered over the Texas coast and the Florida peninsula and from Alabama to North Carolina. Light rain and drizzle were reported over eastern New Mexico, northwest Texas and central California.

It was dry over the rest of the nation and sunny from South Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas to the Pacific Coast.

Temperatures were in the 80s and 90s in the desert Southwest through south Texas to Florida and Georgia. Brisk north winds prevailed from Oklahoma to the upper Mississippi Valley, ushing in cool, arctic air into the central states. Readings were in the 50s in the central High Plains, the upper 40s and 50s from North Dakota to Michigan, abd 60s and 70s in the Northeast.

WARSAW, Poland (SEPT. 21) UPI - Parliament approved President Wojciech Jaruzelski's offer to step down this fall and agreed Friday to dissolve itself and the Senate as the result of the political changes that swept the country.

The resolution worked out late at night after two days of stormy discussion was approved on a 252-17 vote with 50 abstentions.

''The Sejm (the lower house of parliament) after reviewing political changes which took place in Poland and the disbanding of two major parties decided to shorten Sejm's and Senate's as well as president's terms in office,'' the resolution said.

The Communist and Communist-controlled Farmers' parties disbanded last year but their representatives retained their seats in the Sejm despite the fact they represent parties that are now defunct.

Solidarity founder Lech Walesa's announcement Monday that he will run for Poland's presidency also was instrumental in prompting the Sejm's resolution.

Jaruzelski, seen as the last remnant of the Communist regime, has been under increasing pressure to resign.

In a letter filed Tuesday with the Sejm, Jaruzelski proposed to resign two months after the Sejm approves an amendment to the Constitution that would set rules of the election of a new presdient.

Following the approval of the resolution, the Sejm is expected to pass the amendment during another session scheduled to open next Thursday.

The general was elected to a six-year term 13 months ago as a result of an agreement between Solidarity and Communist authorities that allowed the union to participate in parliamentary elections. Solidarity won and installed its government.

The approved resolution also said the Sejm and the Senate were ready to dissolve themselves in the next three months, and ''the presidential election will take place not later than in December of 1990.''

Some deputies warned a new president will not do much to improve the country's troubled economic situation, and pointed out the cost of an election could be as high as $18 million.

''No new president will change the Polish economic situation,'' said Solidarity deputy Adam Michnik in reference to economic transformations from communism to capitalism that further deteriorated living standards.'' No short cut to prosperity is possible.''

Solidarity Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki favors holding both presidential and parliamentary elections early next spring, and his plan brought about a rift between him and Walesa. A government source said Mazowiecki will soon announce his own plans to run for president.

Gabriel Janowski, an official from the Rural Solidarity, said his party will urge Andrzej Stelmachowski, the chairman of the Senate, to run. Stelmachowski, an expert on agriculture, refused comment on the Rural Solidarity's proposal.

The Union of the Real Policy, the party in favor of the speedy institution of capitalism in Poland, said its leader Janusz Korwin-Mikke will also run, an indication Walesa may have to compete against several presidential candidates.

McLEAN, VA (SEPT. 21) UPI - Primark Corp. said Friday it has sold Health Information International to American Capital and Research Corp. for an undisclosed amount of cash and shares of ACR's Class A unregistered common stock.

Primark said Health Information International, formerly called Hospital Satellite Network, broadcasts closed-circuit medical education television programs to hospitals.

''The sale of HII constitutes another step towards divesting businesses that do not meet our long-term strategic objectives,'' Primark Chairman Joseph Kasputys said in a statement.

''Primark could realize a minimum of $11.6 million in cash proceeds, combining the cash received at the transaction closing, tax benefits and the cash proceeds which could be received from the sale of the ACR shares,'' he said.

''These proceeds will be added to our existing cash to invest in businesses that fit our long-term growth strategy,'' Kasputys said.

Primark, a holding company, is a diversified businesses primarily engaged in financial, ground transport, electronic medical claims processing and aircraft maintenance services.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 21) UPI - The Resolution Trust Corp.'s oversight board announced Friday it has instructed staff to review whether the federal government should provide more financing for buyers of failed savings and loans.

The panel also instructed its staff to ''begin an immediate review'' of the controversial sale of failed thrifts by the defunct Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. in 1988 and 1989.

The RTC has since become the agency charged with selling assets of failed thrifts.

''While the oversignt board has already provided substantial authority for seller financing, it appears that a review of the policy is in order,'' said Peter Monroe, president of the board.

''In creating a policy, seller financing must balance the goals of increased volume and higher sales prices with the risks that inadequate buyer capital may cause seller loans to default with deteriorating assets reverting back to the government,'' Monroe said.

The board said that it decided to ask for further study of the issue after hearing a report at its Thursday meeting by RTC Chairman William Seidman and Philip Searle, a member of an advisory panel.

Both Seidman and Searle said there is substantial interest in financing by the government agency.

Meanwhile, the oversight board said it also asked staff to provide ''ranges of policy alternatives'' regarding the FSLIC's hurried sale of thrifts, mainly in the Southwest, which could cost up to $69 billion.

Seidman said Thursday that the United States could save at least $4 billion on the thrift bailout if an additional $18 billion to $20 billion is spent in fiscal 1991. A large portion would go toward prepayment of $11.3 billion in promissory notes stemming from the FSLIC sale.

The RTC has already asked for $100 billion for fiscal 1991, which begins Oct. 1. Until the agency's budget is approved, however, the RTC has only $13 billion to carry it through the end of the next quarter.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 21) UPI - Three months after declaring the spotted owl a threatened species, the administration proposed Friday curtailing the amount of logging permitted on national forests in the Northwest by nearly 17 percent next year to protect the bird.

The administration presented its plan as an attempt to strike a balance between the interests of environmentalists and those of the timber industry, but it drew quick condemnation from both sides.

The conservation strategy, the product of a task force headed by Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter, allows the U.S. Forest Service to sell 3.2 billion board feet of timber in Oregon and Washington during the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

That figure is 650 million board feet, or 16.8 percent, below the volume allowed for sale last year and represents the smallest quantity of timber the Forest Service has made available for logging in the Northwest in at least a decade.

However, the cutbacks proposed Friday are far less drastic than logging restrictions recommended in April by a panel of government scientists led by Forest Service biologist Jack Ward Thomas.

The Thomas plan, which calls for setting aside large tracts of older forests to protect the owl's habitat, would reduce timber harvests in the national forests of Oregon and Washington to 2.6 billion board feet a year.

It takes about 10,000 board feet of lumber to build a typical single- family wood-frame house.

The government had predicted that logging restrictions under the Thomas plan would cost 28,000 jobs in the Pacific Northwest by the year 2000.

The timber industry, forecasting even higher job losses, has said adoption of the Thomas recommendations would spell disaster for dozens of rural communities in the Northwest whose economies are built around logging.

With those dire predictions, the question of how to protect the owl, listed as a threatened species June 22, with the least possible economic pain has posed one of the greatest environmental challenges facing the Bush administration.

''The (administration) task force sought to balance conservation of the spotted owl and the economic well-being of families who live in the region,'' Yeutter and Interior Secretary Manual Lujan said in a joint statement announcing their plan.

Mark Rey, executive director of the American Forest Resource Alliance, said if harvest levels under the plan are ''projected outward'' over future years, ''we will see tens of thousands of jobs lost.''

''This proposed plan would make workers in the Pacific Northwest and endangered species,'' said Michael Draper, executive secretary of the Western Council of Industrial Workers.

But Syd Butler, a vice president of The Wilderness Society, called the administration plan ''a dismal display of politics over science,'' and predicted it ''will be DOA (dead on arrival) in Congress.''

''This plan not only ensures the decline of spotted owls, but the continued loss of other animal and plant species,'' Butler said.

The three-page statement gave no indication of how the proposed harvest level would be achieved except to say, ''Nothing in the task force's recommendations would require sales of timber from habitat conservation areas'' suggested by the Thomas committee.

Yeutter and Lujan called on Congress to act quickly to adopt their proposal with legislation that provides ''insulation'' from the law governing forest management and the National Environmental Policy Act.

''We do not recommend precluding judicial review,'' the statement said, referring to limits on possible court challenges. ''However, Congress must adopt language that requires implementation of the elements proposed in this plan, notwithstanding the terms of these statutes.''

UNITED NATIONS (SEPT. 21) UPI - Non-aligned members of the U.N. Security Council are considering ways to implement a 1978 resolution that demanded Israel withdraw from Lebanon, and they threatened measures similar to those taken against Iraq if Israel refused, diplomats said Friday.

Non-aligned countries have complained that the United States, and to a certain extent, the council, have imposed a double standard in enforcing U.N. resolutions against Iraq while sparing Israel, which has maintained troops in southern Lebanon since its invasion in 1978.

The diplomats said representatives from non-aligned countries discussed their action Thursday afternoon in an informal meeting of the 15-nation Security Council on the situation in southern Lebanon.

They said the president of the council, Soviet Ambassador Yuliy Vorontsov, will send a letter next week to Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar urging him to demand the implementation of the resolution.

The diplomats said the non-aligned members wanted the council to force Israel to carry out Resolution 425, adopted in March 1978, after Israeli troops invaded Lebanon in retaliation for a raid March 11 by the Palestine Liberation Organization. Israeli authorities said 37 Israelis were killed and 76 others wounded.

Resolution 425 asked that Israel withdraw from Lebanon. The council adopted resolution 426 to set up a peacekeeping force in southern Lebanon to oversee the Israeli withdrawal.

The diplomats said Cuba and Yemen proposed that sanctions be applied against Israel if it refused to pull out. Other non-aligned countries in the Security Council are Ethiopia, Zaire, Cote d'Ivoire, Malaysia and Colombia.

Perez de Cuellar reported to the council in July, when the council renewed the six-month mandate of the peace force, that peacekeepers cannot carry out their duty of maintaining security in the area because of the presence of Israeli troops and the pro-Israel South Lebanon Army.

The Security Council has adopted seven resolutions against Iraq for invading Kuwait Aug. 2. Because Iraq rejected U.N. demands to withdraw, the council imposed severe economic sanctions as a punishment.

The non-aligned members, particularly Arab countries, have voiced strong objection to U.S. support of Israel in the Middle East. But these countries failed so far to enact any resolutions against Israel because of the U.S. veto in the council.

The United States, the Soviet Union, France, China and Britain are the five permanent members of the council with the right to veto over any measures they consider against their national interests.

HONOLULU (SEPT. 22) UPI - Hawaii voters go to the polls Saturday to decide the nominees for three of the state's four seats in Congress, making this a watershed year in island politics.

Voters will pick party nominees for the two House seats vacated by incumbent Democrat Daniel Akaka and Republican Patricia Saiki, who are among those vying for the Senate seat formerly held by the late Spark Matsunaga.

Akaka and Saiki are expected to win their primary races and square- off in a close contest that could change the party leadership of the Senate, which the Democrats now hold by a slim 55-45 margin.

Akaka, 65, was in the House from 1976 until he was appointed earlier this year to fill the Senate seat until the election. Saiki, 60, won election to the House in 1986 and was re-elected handily two years later.

Challenging Akaka for the Democratic nomination is Paul Snider, while Saiki faces Republican Molokai rancher Maria Hustace, writer Robert Zimmerman, and perennial GOP candidate Richard ''Ike'' Sutton in the primary.

Vying to replace Akaka in the 1st House district are Matsunaga's son, Matthew, an attorney, as well as state Sen. Norman Mizuguchi and former Senator, Councilman, and Rep. Neil Abercrombie, have to have a lead in polls.

Abercrombie won a special election four years ago and served for several months as a congressman, but he lost the Democratic primary to Mufi Hannemann. Saiki won the seat in the general election.

Running in the Republican primary are state House leader Michael Liu, John Sabey, and Frank Hutchinson.

Former Rep. Patsy Mink, D-Hawaii, seeking to reclaim her seat in the 2nd House District, is vying with businessman Hannemann and state senators Ron Menor and Michael Crozier.

Polls indicate Mink is in the lead, but she is trying to hold off a growing challenge from Hannemann. The Republican candidates are Andrew Poepoe, Stanley Monsef, and Jose Pillos.

Confusing the issue for some voters will be a special election in the 2nd District to fill the last few months of Akaka's term. All candidates for the regular term, except Crozier, are running for the temporary term and one person - A. Duane Black - is running only for the three-month term.

Democratic Gov. John Waihee is up for re-election and is expected to win the nomination after a challenge from Robert Garner, Ben Hopkins, and Elbert Marshall.

Expected to be the Republican challenger is businessman and state House member Fred Hemmings, a former professional surfer, who is opposed by Leonard Mednick Charles Hirayasu, Ichiro Izuka, Robert Measel Jr., and U'o Herman.

The four candidates for Lieutenant Governor, including incumbent Ben Cayetano, are unopposed in the primary.

The state legislature is certain to remain Democratic, with no Republican candidates in more than half of the legislative races.

CLEVELAND (SEPT. 21) UPI - Forty dentists from around the country have filed a class-action suit against the American Dental Association, charging it with fraud in claiming fluoridated water and silver fillings are safe.

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court Thursday, also claimed the dentists, members of the Safe Water Foundation, have been harassed by the ADA and that their professional reputations have been attacked.

Dr. John Yiamouyiannis of Delaware, Ohio, president of the foundation, said the ADA has deceived the American public with assurances about water fluoridation and mercury amalgam fillings (also called silver fillings) to protect its reputation and to avoid liability suits.

''The American Dental Association has claimed,'' Yiamouyiannis said, ''that artificially fluoridated water does not cause dental fluorosis (the first sign of visible fluoride poisoning, which appears as white, chalky areas on the teeth), despite recent studies showing that more than 20 percent to 30 percent of the children growing up in artificially fluoridated areas suffer from dental fluorosis.''

A spokesman for the ADA said the organization would not comment until it had seen the lawsuit.

Yiamouyiannis also attacked the ADA's claim that fluoride posed no genetic hazard, saying ''virtually all studies directly measuring the ability of fluoride to cause genetic damage have shown that it does cause genetic damage, even at levels ... below those used to fluoridate public water supplies.''

The suit also criticized ADA studies showing reduce tooth decay in children in fluoridated areas, saying ''all recent large scale studies ... have shown there has been no statistically significant reduction in decay rates'' because of fluoridated water.

The ADA, the suit said, also continues to promote the use of mercury amalgam fillings despite evidence showing it increases mercury levels in the body, leading to impaired kidney function.

In addition to fraud, the suit charged the ADA with breach of contract for allegedly failing to provide the public with accurate information. It seeks unspecified damages and an injunction barring the ADA from disseminating the information.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta Thursday issued a report saying the government will not reach its 1990 goal of having fluoridated water available to 95 percent of Americans who use public water supplies.

At least 39 percent of people who use public water supplies do not drink fluoridated water, the CDC reported.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 21) UPI - Treasury bond prices ended modestly lower Friday on concerns the Federal Reserve is unlikely to ease monetary policy and indications federal budget negotiations are stalled, analysts said.

The key 30-year bond, the 8 3/4 of 2020, ended at 96 6/32 to yield 9.12 percent, compared with 97 6/32 and 9.02 percent a week before.

In Congressional testimony this week, Federal Reserve Board chairman Alan Greenspan said the core rate of inflation in consumer prices may have crept higher and chances for a break in the inflationary trend ''would seem to have diminished,'' particularly in light of higher oil prices.

His comments were taken by analysts to indicate the Fed would not be likely to ease credit until Congress passes a budget package.

''Fed Chairman Greenspan's congressional testimony this week echoed the Fed's apparent shift in priorities earlier this summer away from combating inflation and in favor of fending off recession,'' said Salomon Brothers Inc. in ''Comments on Credit.''

''Along with his assessment that we are not in recession, investors interpreted this as a signal that no easing in the funds rate is imminent,'' they wrote.

Signs that deficit reduction talks are stalled further depressed bond prices on the week, analysts said.

''The Federal budget negotiators are at an impasse, leading to market-unsettling proposals to delay the October 1 Gramm-Rudman spending reductions,'' wrote Philip Braverman in DKB Securities Corp.'s ''Weekly Credit Market Report.''

''The budget negotiators remain so far apart on the detailed steps to achieve their $50 billion fiscal 1991 deficit reduction target, that it is beginning to look like only about half their deficit reduction objective will be reached '' he wrote.

Treasury's auction next week of $11.5 billion in two-year notes and $8.25 billion in four-year notes could be supported by the government's GNP report Tuesday, in which a significant downward revision is likely, Braverman added.

''War fears, higher oil prices, the impasse over the budget deficit accord, the Fed hesitancy to ease, and new supply can push bond yields higher,'' he concluded. ''But the developing recession makes a significant cyclical decline in market yields inevitable.''

Ten-year Treasury notes ended at 98 16/32 to yield 8.98 percent, vs. 99 6/32 and 8.87 percent one week earlier. Five-year notes ended at 99 19/32 to yield 8.59 percent, compared with 100 and 8.49 percent.

Three-year Treasury notes closed at 99 9/32 to yield 8.28 percent, compared with 99 16/32 and 8.19 percent. Two-year notes were at 100 1/32 to yield 8.10 percent, vs. 100 6/32 and 8.02 percent.

Six-month Treasury bills were discounted at a rate of 7.34 percent to yield 7.72 percent, vs. a 7.27 percent discount and 7.64 percent yield. Three-month T-bills ended at a discount of 7.36 percent to yield 7.60 percent, vs. the previous week's discount of 7.37 percent and 7.60 percent yield.

Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc.'s index of long-term Treasury bonds fell in the week to 1,224.30, off 08.97 points, vs. 1,234.92 a week earlier.

The Federal funds rate closed at 8 1/8 percent, above its perceived target rate of 8 percent. The key Fed funds rate, the interest rate banks charge each other for overnight loans of reserve funds, is a building block of the U.S. interest rate structure.

RIO DE JANEIRO, BRAZIL (SEPT. 21) UPI - As Brazil's economy minister headed for Washington, three regional banks and five state credit institutions suffering from financial problems were ordered liquidated by the nation's Central Bank Friday.

Ibrahim Eris, president of the Central Bank, said that the move would ''return the financial system to normality'' and that in the future the Central Bank would not grant loans to credit institutions with financial problems.

Eris said the liquidated banks were suffering from ''high debt and unfulfilled obligations.''

He named the regional banks liquidated as the banks of Piaui, Rio Grande do Norte and Paraiba. State banks suffering the same fate were Caja Economica of Goias, Paraiban Credito Inmobilario, Piaui Credito Inmobiliario, Bandern Financiera and Bandern Inmobiliaria.

The banks had a total of 263 branches throughout the country.

Meanwhile, Economy Minister Zelia Cardoso de Mello flew to Washington Friday for the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund.

Brazil, going through an economic austerity plan, is expecting the IMF to approve credit totaling $2 billion that would be issued in installments until the end of 1991.

Last week, Cardoso said that Brazil would seek to negotiate its official debt with the Paris Club, consisting of the Western industrial countries and Japan, pending IMF approval of a letter of intent concerning Brazil's plans for stabilizing the economy.

She said before the end of the year Brazil hopes to renegotiate its debt with international private banks.

Brazil, with total foreign debt of $116 billion, is $10 billion behind in interest payments following a moratorium on such payments ordered in June 1989.

NORFOLK, Va. (SEPT. 21) UPI - Desertion charges are pending against a sailor who claimed he fled the Navy because he feared unsafe conditions aboard the nuclear-powered submarine USS Finback, a Navy spokesman said Friday.

Petty Officer 2nd Class Jason Jensen, 23, was in custody at Norfolk Naval Base said Lt. Cmdr. David Morris, a spokesman for the Atlantic Fleet Submarine Force.

Jensen was arrested Thursday at a local motel by agents of the Naval Investigative Service.

The machinist's mate from Las Vegas went awol in June, saying he was worried about the potential for an accident involving the Finback's reactor or other equipment.

Jensen and several other sailors allege personnel training records and water purity checks related to the Finback's steam plant were falsified.

Navy officials have acknowledged job qualification cards for eight sailors were falsely certified and are investigating the allegations.

Morris said the problems did not jeopardize the safety of the submarine or its crew. The submarine returned to port in Norfolk this week after exercises off the Atlantic Coast.

Jensen told local reporters that he had spent the past few months in the Midwest and Canada, hiding for a time in Vancouver, British Columbia with members of the environmental group Greenpeace.

He said he returned to Norfolk with the intention of turning himself in. But at the time he was arrested, Morris said Jensen had not contacted Navy officials concerning his whereabouts.

''I only regret the decision in that I didn't stay and fight,'' Jensen told The Virginian-Pilot newspaper of Norfolk. ''Beforehand I didn't have the moral strength or the drive to stand up to (the alleged improprieties) when they happened.''

Late Friday, Morris said the Navy had not formally filed charges against Jensen but they were pending. Jensen could face a court martial or a less severe type of punishment, known as a captain's mast, Morris said.

Jensen and other sailors alleged in letters sent to congressmen and environmental groups that senior crew members aboard the Finback falsified personnel training records and chemistry checks on the sub's steam plant during an overhaul at Norfolk Naval Shipyard between July 1987 and December 1989.

The overhaul took nine months longer than normal and cost $114.1 million - about $14 million over budget.

CHICAGO (SEPT. 21) UPI - A federal regulatory agency has approved the sale of Great American Savings branches in the Chicago and Peoria areas.

The Resolution Trust Company said Friday most of Great American's Chicago branches will begin operations Monday as branches of the First National Bank of Chicago. Five of the 21 Chicago-area branches, however, will be closed.

All of Great American's offices in the Peoria area will reopen Monday under the operation of First Financial Bank of Stevens Point, Wis.

The agency said Great American depositors can automatically continue to conduct business at their former branches, except for the five being closed in Chicago and suburbs.

Depositors with accounts at any closed branch can conduct business at any of those remaining open.

The RTC said all checks drawn on Great American will continue to be honored and deposits will continue to be insured under the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Savings Association Insurance Fund.

RTC Executive Director David Cooke said the branch sale was the least costly of 36 proposed sales plans.

PROVO, UT (SEPT. 21) UPI - A dinosaur embryo, believed to be the oldest ever unearthed in North America, was discovered by a Brigham Young University student on a remote southwestern Colorado mountain, BYU officials said Friday.

''The find is significant,'' said geology professor Wade Miller, director of the BYU Earth Science Museum, because no dinosaur eggshell as old as the one found in Colorado and with such an advanced embryo - near the hatching stage - ''has been reported in North America.''

The embryo is a Dryosaurus dinosaur, believed to be 135 million to 150 million years old, Miller said. BYU geology student Rod Scheetz discovered pieces of the embryo and eggshell at a road-construction site near Uravan, Colo., a tiny community of about 800 residents.

''Any dinosaur embryo is rare and important,'' said Miller. ''This discovery helps us study dinosaurs at early stages, a major gap in our knowledge of dinosaur development.''

Dryosaurus, first discovered in 1876, has been compared with the modern gazelle, because of its slender build and long, agile hind legs. The herbivore with teeth was a member of the hypsilophodontids, a family of small- to medium-sized dinosaurs.

The dinosaurs grew to up to 13 feet in length and had long, powerful hind legs for running and strong arms, each ending with five fingers for grasping, Miller said.

They also had sharp-ridged cheek teeth and probably nipped vegetation off with a bony beak and chopped leaves and shoots. Their remains also have been found in East Africa.

Scheetz discovered the embryonic fossils in May, while working with the Museum of Western Colorado in an area west of the BYU Earth Science Museum's Dry Mesa dinosaur quarry, in southwestern Colorado, about 20 miles east of the Utah-Colorado state line.

The discovery included vertebrae and jaw fragments, showing two erupting teeth each a little more than a millimeter - about four- hundredths of an inch - wide.

''The skeletal elements appear to be well-developed in both teeth and vertebrae,'' said Miller, ''which indicates the dinosaur was ready to emerge from its shell. The teeth have not even erupted fully from the jaw and show no wear, an indication to us of its embryonic stage.''

Scheetz said he discovered the embryo among fossils of more mature Dryosaurus remains scattered on a mound. Also included in the pile were eggshells, unidentified plant matter, and other bone fragments.

The area had been damaged by a bulldozer excavating a road, which Scheetz said he initially found upsetting, until he speculated the embryo might not have been found had it not been pushed above ground.

Fragments found at the site also indicated eight sizes of juvenile fossils, said Miller.

''It's also rare to find a juvenile site,'' he said.

Preliminary estimates by Scheetz indicate 80 percent of the bones are from Dryosaurus, with some others being crocodilian and mammalian in appearance.

''The area has the potential of being a nesting site,'' said Scheetz. ''We're excited to do more work in the area.''

RALEIGH, NC (SEPT. 22) BUSINESS WIRE - First Citizens BancShares Inc. has acquired certain assets and assumed the deposits of Charlotte-based North Carolina Savings and Loan Association F.A. (formerly North Carolina Federal) and Monroe-based Heritage Federal Savings & Loan Association from the Resolution Trust Corp. (RTC).

First Citizens Bank assumed the deposits of both thrifts at the close of business on Friday, Sept. 21, according to James B. Hyler Jr., First Citizens' president, who made the announcement Saturday. First Citizens had acquired about $485 million in total deposits and extended its service areas to seven new cities in three new counties. The bank also has strengthened its position in eight existing markets, Hyler said.

Services to the former thrift customers will continue without interruption. ''First Citizens is committed to making the transition as smooth as possible for our new customers,'' Hyler said.

All 27 offices of North Carolina Savings and Heritage Federal will open Monday Sept. 24, as First Citizens Bank offices. Hyler said that First Citizens will elect to consolidate some of the offices located in close proximity to each other or to existing First Citizens branches. No decisions have been made as to which offices will be consolidated.

New markets First Citizens will enter as a result of the acquisition are Archdale, Matthews, Marshville, Mint Hill, Monroe, Raeford and Salisbury.

The bank will strengthen existing markets through acquisitions in Albemarle, Charlotte, Cary, High Point, Madison, Raleigh, Smithfield and Winston-Salem.

Hyler said the decision to purchase the thrift institutions was a strategic one. ''We consider the purchase of these savings and loan institutions as an economic and expedient way for us to build and strengthen our market across North Carolina,'' he said. He added that the former thrift customers would be well-served by First Citizens' position of safety and soundness.

First Citizens has been named number one in safety among the country's 150 largest banks for four years running by an independent bank analysis company.

The RTC is a federally chartered corporation created in 1989 by the Financial Institution Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act. Its purpose is to manage and dispose of failed savings and loan associations.

First Citizens Bank is a $4.4 billion statewide financial institution that serves 76 North Carolina counties with 330 branches in 166 towns and cities.

WASHINGTON, (SEPT 22) - The seven major Western industrial democracies will try here Saturday to give markets a clear signal that they intend to move firmly together to meet economic challenges raised by the Gulf crisis, well-placed monetary officials said.

Finance ministers of the Group of Seven (G7) countries -- Britain, Canada, France, West Germany, Italy, Japan and the United States -- were to meet Saturday morning for daylong talks likely to focus on the macro-economic responses to soaring oil prices.

They were also expected to discuss United States and European plans for mobilizing urgent financial assistance to the "frontline states" -- Egypt, Jordan and Turkey -- and to other countries most immediately hit by the fall-out from the Gulf crisis.

The officials expected the seven countries to try to give a "new spin" to their nearly five-year old economic policy coordination process, and to seek "more convergence" among group members' national economic policies.

They saw this as a "confidence-building effort", as industry and business face a bleaker economic outlook and serious uncertainty stemming from the sharp increase in crude prices since Iraq invaded Kuwait on August 2.

The officials did not expect the G7 ministers to see any need for concerted efforts to steady exchange rates, as they did after the 1987 Louvre agreement.

But they might warn markets the Group would be ready for "massive" concerted interventions if "disorderly" currency movements followed a possible outbreak of hostilities in the Gulf.

Secondly, they would probably seek to ensure an appropriate "mix" of national policies inside the group to make it clear to the market that G7 coordination continues to work.

As for the macro-economic approach, the seven ministers were bound to reaffirm their resolve to contain inflation and to pursue non-accommodating monetary policies, the officials said.

The Group's message would be "steady as you go" with no changes in policies, and no attempt to offset a fall in real incomes caused by dearer oil.

TEHERAN, (SEPT 22) - Syrian President Hafez al-Assad arrived here Saturday for a three-day visit to be dominated by the Gulf crisis and concern that Iran might be moving closer to its former foe Iraq.

Mr. Assad, making his first trip to Teheran since the Islamic revolution in 1979, told reporters on arrival "We have a lot of things to tell one another and will discuss many things". He was met at the airport by Iranian President Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani.

The Syrian leader said the Gulf crisis and the "struggle against the Zionist regime" would be on the agenda. Syria wants to ensure that Iran's improving relations with Iraq will not tempt it to break a trade embargo imposed on Baghhad by the United Nations because of its invasion of Kuwait.

Mr. Rafsanjani said he was extremely pleased at Mr. Assad's visit, which came "at an extremely sensisive moment in the history of the region", adding that "Iran and Syria could play a particularly important role."

He noted that the visit coincided with the 10th anniversary of the outbreak of the Iran-Iraq war and paid tribute to Syria's support for Teheran in the conflict.

Iran and Iraq began exchanging prisoners of the Gulf war on August 17, two days after Iraqi President Saddam Hussein accepted Iranian terms for a formal end to the conflict.

Despite the overture from Iraq, Iran has continued to condemn the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait and has pledged to honor the U.N. embargo.

The Teheran Times newspaper, which reflects the thinking of President Rafsanjani, reported Saturday that the Iranian leader and Mr. Assad could also discuss the situation of 12 Westerners held in Lebanon, many by pro-Iranian Shiite groups.

"In the past Iran has successfully tried and got released a few hostages in the hope that the Western countries, especially the United States, which had influence over Israel will use (their) leverage and get the Lebanese and Palestinian Moslems free from the clutches of the Zionist regime," the paper said.

BONN, (SEPT 22) - East German Interior Minister Peter-Michael Diestel fears the outbreak of "a kind of civil war" on what is currently East German territory, he has told the West German Bild am Sonntag newspaper.

"There's a tendency to anarchy here and not just in the way people drive," Mr. Diestel said in an interview to be published Sunday. "In my view, it's absolutely essential that the police force is not dismantled prematurely."

He added that internal security in East Germany, which is due to unite with West Germany on October 3, could be compromised by the fact that the Laender, or regional states, will not be fully operational until next year.

The minister urged West German officials to show an "adroit" understanding of East Germany's past.

"You should not systematically get rid of all former members of the old East German communist party, all former collaborators with the Stasi political police, or the diplomats and senior officers," he said.

LISBON, (SEPT 22) - The Angolan government has launched a "new kwanza" and will devalue the currency on October 1, the ANGOP news agency said Saturday in a report monitored here.

Angolans have until next Saturday to change their old kwanza, but will initially be paid only five per cent of their holdings in cash, Finance Minister Aguinaldo Jaime said.

The remaining savings will be traded against bonds that cannot be changed for 180 days, he added.

On October 1, the kwanza exchange rate will be set at 60 to the U.S. dollar instead of 30 as at present, Mr. Jaime said.

ANGOP said the measures were aimed at reducing inflation under the government's new economic programme and minimising the effects of having large amounts of money circulating outside the banking system.

SAINTE-MAXIME, FRANCE, (SEPT 22) - Forest fires raging around France's ropez Mediterranean holiday resort were fanned by strong winds Saturday after destroying more than 7,000 hectares (17,500 acres) of woodland, authorities said.

Large numbers of foreign tourists spent the night in their cars after 1,000 people were evacuated from villas and hotels.

No casualties were reported, but several dozen homes were consumed by the flames.

In Corsica, 2,000 hectares (5,000 acres) of scrub and pine forest were burned before fire-fighters brought fires under control Saturday in various parts of the French Mediterranean island.

Investigators said that most of the Corsica fires were deliberately set.

The latest blazes in southern France come after a dry summer in which the region suffered the most destructive forest fires in 25 years.

SEOUL, (SEPT 22) - Some 15,000 riot police were deployed here Saturday to thwart an attempt by dissidents and students to stage an anti-government demonstration calling for the ouster of President Roh Tae-Woo's ruling party.

As the city center was cordoned off by the riot police, some 1,000 students assembled in University Road in eastern Seoul to stage a pitched battle with the riot police.

The students threw stones and Molotov cocktails at the police, who retaliated with teargas and frequent charges, roughly beating the students with truncheons before making arrests, eyewitnesses said.

Similar clashes were reported in different parts of the city. A police minibus was reportedly burned by firebombs thrown by the demonstrating students near the South Korean capital's East Gate.

Local press reports said thousands of farmers also demonstrated in 15 provincial cities Saturday to protest the Uruguay round of talks under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT). The farmers fear the talks will open South Korean markets to foreign agricultural goods.

The National Farmers Federation has demanded that South Korea pull out of the GATT talks altogether.

WASHINGTON, (SEPT 22) - Experts at the U.S. Department of Agriculture expect that, despite the U.N. embargo, Iraq may succeed in importing 1.75 million tonnes of grain by July of next year, press reports said here Saturday.

This estimate was contained in the Department's latest grain market analysis, covering the period from 1 July 1990 to 30 June 1991, the reports added.

But other U.S. experts had expressed doubts that such large quantities of grain shipments could reach Iraq when an international sea blockade was in force.

The Department was said to fear that Iraq would be able to bring in considerable amounts of food across its land borders with Iran, Turkey, Syria and Jordan.

Before the embargo was imposed following its invasion of Kuwait on August 2, Iraq had imported some 3 million tons of grain per year.

MOSCOW, (SEPT 22) - The tough battle over how to reform the Soviet economy is looking much like a nightly television series "starring" President Mikhail Gorbachev and a cast of previously obscure economists.

It shows that the move to a market-based economy is not the only western influence hanging over the debate.

Moscow's former strict censorship has given way to a press corps hungry for details. And the big names in the economy issue have made this passage with apparent ease -- ready and willing to make statements to the dozens of microphones and press cameras lying in wait in the corridors of parliament.

Mr. Gorbachev -- long adept with the press -- is the show's main star as he acts as arbitrator.

He attends nearly every parliamentary session, and has trimmed down trips outside Moscow for the occasion. In parliament, he sits a bit to the side behind a special desk with a huge Soviet flag -- which disappears when he is not there -- draped on the wall behind him.

The Soviet president is now claiming outright responsibility for the radical economic reform program drawn up by his two economic advisors. It was first called the Shatalin plan after economist Stanislav Shatalin, and then the Aganbeguian plan, after the academician Abel Aganbeguian, but in the last few days has become known simply as the "president's plan".

Mr. Gorbachev intervenes often, gives direction to the debates and does not hesitate to state his preferences.

Mr. Shatalin, 56, a member of the presidential Council of advisors, remains the uncontested new "star" of the season. Charged with setting down the economic bases for the new Treaty of the Union, he drew up an audacious program of economic reforms that contrasted sharply with the more conservative proposals of Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov.

A talented orator, this thin, pale man is a frequent visitor to the sessions and on occasion has thrown a cutting challenge to the deputies.

BERLIN, (SEPT 22) - East German Interior Minister Peter-Michael Diestel plans to consider amnesty for prisoners after protests spread to two more jails on Saturday, bringing the number of prison protests to four, police said here.

Six prisoners serving sentences of up to four years climbed on the roofs of the northern Buetzow prison to demand an amnesty and a review of their cases.

Also Saturday, six prisoners began a rooftop protest in Bautzen, the country's most infamous prison where political prisoners are held, prison directors said.

Twenty six prisoners have been occupying the roof of an East Berlin jail since Thursday. Prisoners complained that they stood trial when East Germany was a hardline communist state which granted few if any rights to defendants.

At the East Berlin Rummelsburg prison guards brought rioters hot tea, blankets and newspapers. "There will be no crackdown if they remain peaceful", prison guard Klaus Nisse said.

Rummelsburg prisoners said they would not be transferred to West Berlin for fear of exposure to AIDS, drugs and brutality at the hands of other prisoners.

And at Brandenburg, west of here, about one hundred inmates have gone on a hunger strike to press their demands.

Speaking during a visit to Brandenburg prison, the minister said he would consider an amnesty in compliance with West German law.

Most West German laws will become effective in East Germany on October 3 when the two countries merge after a separation of 41 years.

Cornel Cristoffel, a spokesman for the West Berlin prison administration, said plans existed to transfer the East German prisoners to the West after unification. He accused East Berlin authorities of "complacency" toward rioters.

RIYADH, (SEPT 22) - The sale of Saudi oil to Jordan will be resumed once Amman settles its debts to the Saudi state-owned Arabian American Oil Company (Aramco), Saudi Oil Minister Hisham Nazir said Saturday.

The Saudi pipeline to Jordan was cut at midnight on Wednesday, purportedly because Jordan had not paid a five-year-old 46 million dollar debt to Aramco.

But the Saudi decision was widely seen as a sign of Riyadh's displeasure with Jordan's pro-Iraqi stand in the Gulf crisis.

Saudi authorities have recently used other means to turn up the pressure on Jordan, notably by placing severe limits on commercial exchanges and expelling Jordanian nationals, according to witnesses and oil industry sources.

But Mr. Nazer, quoted by the Saudi Press Agency, said the decision to halt oil sales to Jordan was the "sole responsibility of Aramco".

He denied an earlier statement by Jordanian Energy Minister Thabit al-Tahir that King Fahd of Saudi Arabia had ordered the scrapping of the bulk of the debt -- 40 million dollars for oil supplied in 1985.

WASHINGTON, (SEPT 22) - The last U.S.-chartered flight carrying Americans out of Iraq and Kuwait left Baghdad Saturday, bringing to a temporary halt the month-long evacuation of American citizens out of the two countries, officials said.

U.S. officials said some 2,000 U.S. nationals have been ferried out of the two Gulf nations since Baghdad allowed foreign women, children, the ill and Arab-born men to leave Iraq and Kuwait earlier this month.

In all, some 2,500 Americans are believed to have fled the two countries by a number of methods since Iraq's August 2 invasion of its oil-rich neighbour.

According to official estimates, more than 1,000 mostly male Americans are left in both countries, a few of them having forcibly been taken to key Iraqi installations to serve as human shields in case of attack by international forces opposing the Iraqi invasion.

U.S. President George Bush has repeatedly demanded the release of these Americans he considers hostages, but has also warned Baghdad that their presence did not influence his decisions on the Gulf crisis.

JEDDAH, (SEPT 22) - Saudi Arabia's decision to cut off oil supplies to Jordan was based on the fact that Jordan has run up a more than 40-million-dollar oil bill with Saudi suppliers, Petroleum Minister Hisham Nazer said here Saturday.

Quoted by the Saudi Press Agency, Nazer said shipments could resume when Jordan had paid up.

The Saudis stopped pumping oil through the Trans Arabian Pipeline on Thursday, ending shipments running at a rate of 30,000 barrels a day, about half of Jordan's needs.

Nazer said the decision to cut supplies was made by Saudi oil companies acting independently of the government.

Diplomatic sources in the Gulf belief the cutoff is linked to Saudi anger over Jordan's stand in the Gulf crisis. Jordan is opposed to the U.S.-led military buildup in the Arabian peninsula.

WASHINGTON, (SEPT 22) - King Hussein of Jordan presented a direct television message to the American people Saturday, calling on the United States to pull out of Saudi Arabia to avert a war he said would cause untold death and suffering.

The king, in an unprecedented 30-minute broadcast from Amman carried by Cable News Network, urged the United States to seek a negotiated solution to this "serious and ominous crisis in the region."

The monarch dismissed reports that Saudi Arabia had expelled 20 Jordanian diplomats.

"Right now, as far as I'm concerned, I have no knowledge of any such Saudi action," he said. I'd be very surprised if it took place ... I believe that this is probably a fabricated story."

Officials in Amman later reported that Riyadh had suspended its decision to expel the Jordanian diplomats.

While recognizing Saudi Arabia's right to seek outside help and the United States' right to answer that request, King Hussein said he had misgivings abount the military buildup in a country harboring "the two holiest shrines of Islam (in Mecca and Medina)."

"We strongly feel that the presence of United States and allied forces ... must be terminated within the shortest possible period of time, lest it results in incalculable grave consequences involving Arabs and Moslems the world over for generations to come," said King Hussein.

Saudi Arabia requested U.S. help to avert what it perceived as threat to its territory after Iraq's August 2 invasion of Kuwait.

Responding to Saudi complaints of his seemingly pro-Iraqi stance since the outbreak of the crisis, King Hussein said "Jordan stands by the principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by war."

"We have continued to recognize the state and government of Kuwait and will continue to do so," he added.

King Hussein said that just as he opposed Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, so he opposed the Israeli occupation of Arab territories.

He said that failure to have Israel abide by U.N. resolutions calling for a withdrawal from those territories was part of the reason behind Iraq's venture into Kuwait.

The monarch, however, stressed that any linkage at present between the Gulf crisis and other Middle East problems, such as the Palestinian issue, would "exacerbate rather than facilitate the solution of any one of them."

"We must avert an explosion in this highly inflammable area straddling the world's richest oil reserves that would cause untold death, destruction and misery with disastrous repercussions far beyond this vital region and this period of human life," said King Hussein.

Arab nations which in the past had heeded U.S. advice to accept a compromise solution to the Arab-Israeli problem, said the monarch, now perceived the United States "as unwilling to even consider a negotiated settlemet between Iraq and Kuwait and unwilling to accept a compromise short of an unconditional Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait."

King Hussein said that while priority should be given to the Gulf crisis,

"credible assurances must be given to ensure that other problems of a similar nature (in the Middle East) would definitely and adamantly be addressed thereafter."

BEIJING (SEPT. 22) UPI - There is much more than gold medals and national pride at stake at the 11th Asian Games.

Although Iraq's expulsion from the games has overshadowed the rest of the off-the-field maneuvering, some of the 36 participating nations and territories hope to use the games, which open Saturday, to improve political and economic relations with China.

Some countries that officially have poor relations with Beijing - or none at all - have sent both athletes to compete on the field and diplomats to maneuver with the Chinese leadership.

Pre-games meetings with foreign diplomats have been hailed by China, which is eager to improve its image after the worldwide condemnation of its brutal crushing of the nation's democracy movement in June 1989.

Vietnam's deputy prime minister is in Beijing, the first officially acknowledged high-level Vietnamese visit since 1979, when Vietnam and China fought a border war. Bilateral relations since then have been marred by Vietnam's long occupation of Cambodia.

According to Chinese officials, Vice Prime Minister Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap is in Beijing only to take part in the Asian Games celebrations, but diplomats say there is more to the trip.

''The line that Giap is here to observe the games is hogwash,'' a Western diplomat said. ''He came separately from the Vietnamese sports delegation and he is being treated as a state visitor.''

The diplomat said Giap may meet with Chinese Communist Party leader Jiang Zemin.

In contrast to Beijing's refusal to publicly acknowledge a political dimension to Giap's visit, Vietnam openly hopes it will improve relations between the Communist neighbors.

''We are striving to restore the friendly relations in the interests of the Vietnamese and Chinese people and for the sake of stability in Asia,'' a Vietnamese Foreign Ministry spokeswoman said in Hanoi Thursday. ''We wish (Giap's) trip will contribute to the early normalization of relations between the two countries.''

Diplomats say it is unlikely the countries will make any breakthrough during the games, but that Giap could come away with an agreement to regularize the booming local trade across the partially opened Sino- Vietnamese border.

South Korea is hoping to use its highly visible sponsorship of the games as an opportunity to further build trade relations with Beijing.

Seoul donated more than 200 cars to the games' organizing committee and South Korean companies say they have pledged several million dollars in sponsorship. Huge billboards advertising Korean products are up all over Beijing.

Trade between China and South Korea hit a high of about $3.1 billion in 1989, but analysts say that figure is expected to drop sharply for 1990, largely at the urging of communist North Korea.

It was widely speculated that South Korean President Roh Tae Woo would come to Beijing for the games, but Western sources say China discouraged such a move. China has repeatedly disavowed any intention to establish political ties with South Korea.

Officials from Taiwan, whose athletes are competing in their first Asian Games since 1970, say they hope the games will quicken the pace of gradually improving ties. Taiwan, competing as ''Chinese Taipei,'' has a 380-member delegation accompanied by a large press corps.

''The sporting events will increase people-to-people understanding,'' said Bang Chong-dan, director of Taipei's athletic delegation. ''Except for the political problems, mainland China belongs to all Chinese.''

(SEPT. 22) UPI - The Bush administration Friday proposed a 17-percent cut in logging of national forests in the Pacific Northwest next year to protect the spotted owl. The plan drew quick condemnation from both environmentalists and the timber industry. It calls for the smallest amount of logging in the area in at least a decade... but the cutbacks are far less than recommended by a panel of government scientists.

A jury in Hondo, Texas, Friday convicted a church pastor and two members of his parish accused of trying literally to beat the devil out of a man. Authorities accused the three of attacking a man who was helping with carpentry work at the church last January. The victim claimed the pastor told him his marital problems were caused by the devil. He says his attackers poured olive oil on him and beat him during a three-hour-long ritual.

BEIJING (SEPT. 22) UPI - An earthquake registering 4.0 on the Richter Scale shook the northern suburbs of Beijing Saturday hours before the opening ceremony of the 11th Asian Games, officials said. There were no reports of injuries or damage.

The quake struck the area between Changping and Shahe cities 20 miles north of Beijing at 11:02 a.m., according to a State Seismological Bureau spokesman.

Officials said the quake would have no impact on China's first major international sports meet.

There was no reported damage to the Changping Velodrome where the Asian Games cycling competition was scheduled from Sept. 26-29.

''We felt the earthquake but there was no damage,'' said an official at the sports venue contacted by telephone.

''The earthquake will not influence the games,'' he said.

The tremor defied earlier predictions by the State Seismological Bureau that there was little or no chance of earthquakes during the Asian Games.

But authorities did not report an earthquake that struck the quake- prone northern city of Tangshan several weeks earlier. Earthquakes are regarded by Chinese as a sign of impending disaster or sudden change.

At least a quarter of a million people died in a massive earthquake in Tangshan on August 26, 1976.

The extent of the damage has never been fully reported and was regarded by many Chinese as an omen preceding the death of senior leader Mao Tse-tung less than two months later.

(SEPT. 22) UPI - The Boston Red Sox and the Toronto Blue Jays met their matches Friday night: for the Red Sox it was a team that was just as cold and for the Blue Jays it was one just as hot.

Boston benefitted under the circumstances, winning its third game in its last 11 with a 3-0 victory over the New York Yankees, losers of seven straight, and climbing back into a first-place tie with Toronto in the AL East.

The Blue Jays, bidding for a season-high seventh consecutive victory, dropped a 2-1 decision in 13 innings to the Cleveland Indians, winners of five in a row.

New York managed only two hits off Boston starter Dana Kiecker, 7-9. Kiecker pitched seven innings to become the first Red Sox starter other than Mike Boddicker to win a game since Greg Harris on Sept. 10. In winning for the first time since he beat Cleveland Aug. 29, Kiecker lowered his road ERA to 2.14.

''He's more relaxed on the road than at home,'' pitching coach Bill Fischer said. ''He jumps around like a chicken at home in the bullpen.''

Larry Andersen, who was aquired in a trade from Houston on Aug. 31, allowed one hit over the final two innings to record his first save.

Kiecker was supported by Ellis Burks' two-run homer in the sixth and a solo shot by Mike Greenwell in the eighth. Burks' 20th home run followed Wade Boggs' fifth triple of the season.

''It couldn't have come at a better time,'' Burks said about his first homer at Yankee Stadium. ''We were down in Baltimore. We came out here tough. We got a great pitching performance from Dana Kiecker and that's really what we needed.

''We can't worry about what the Blue Jays do until we play them,'' he added.

Both clubs have 11 games left but Boston plays eight of them at home, and Toronto just two.

In Toronto, Sandy Alomar Jr. slammed Blue Jays reliever Frank Wills' first delivery of the 13th inning into the left field stands for his eighth home run of the season.

''I feel badly,'' said Wills, 6-4, who entered the game to start the 12th. ''I made one pitch, one mistake that's it. I tried to get a fastball in on him, but I left it out over the plate. But it's only one game and one loss.''

''That's easy to say,'' said centerfielder Mookie Wilson. ''But this is September and every loss can come back to haunt you.''

Efrain Valdez, one of five Cleveland pitchers, pitched three hitless innings for his first major league win. He fanned three and walked one in raising his record to 1-1.

''I feel great, I feel happy to get my first win against a first- place team '' said the southpaw, whose contract was purchased from Triple-A Colorado Springs on August 10.

Doug Jones pitched the 13th for his 39th save

In other American League action, Oakland shaded Detroit 6-5, Baltimore dropped Milwaukee 5-3, Texas edged Minnesota 2-1, California pounded Kansas City 12-5 and Chicago clipped Seattle 5-4.

In the National League it was: Chicago 4, New York 3; Philadelphia 5, Montreal 4 in 12 innings; Pittsburgh 1, St. Louis 0; Houston 4, Atlanta 3 in 10 innings; Cincinnati 10, San Diego 1; and Los Angeles 16, San Francisco 3.

Athletics 6, Tigers 5

At Oakland, Calif., Bob Welch became the major leagues' first 25-game winner in 10 seasons and Harold Baines belted a three-run pinch-hit double to power the A's. Welch, 25-6, equalled the win total of the Orioles' Steve Stone in 1980 and tied the Oakland record set by Jim ''Catfish'' Hunter in 1974. Dennis Eckersley pitched the final 1 2-3 for his 44th save.

Orioles 5, Brewers 3

At Baltimore, Bill Ripken scored two runs and drove home another and Pete Harnisch pitched seven solid innings leading the Orioles. Harnisch, 11-11, scattered five hits to pace Baltimore to its third win in a row. Greg Olson pitched the ninth for his 33rd save. Ron Robinson dropped to 11-4 as the Brewers suffered their fourth straight loss.

Rangers 2, Twins 1

At Minneapolis, Bobby Witt hurled a two-hitter, retiring 20 of the last 21 batters he faced, and Jack Daugherty drove in both Rangers runs. Witt, 17-9, threw his seventh complete game of the season. He is 14-1 in his last 17 starts, leading the Rangers to their sixth win in eight games. Juan Berenguer, 8-5, took the loss.

Angels 12, Royals 5

At Kansas City, Mo., Donnie Hill belted a three-run home run and Johnny Ray, Chili Davis and Dave Winfield each drove in a pair of runs to power California. Ray doubled twice and singled and Winfield doubled and singled in support of Kirk McCaskill, 12-10.

White Sox 5, Mariners 4

At Seattle, Sammy Sosa homered and drove in four runs leading Chicago. Eric King, 11-4, worked the first five innings for the victory and Bobby Thigpen hurled the ninth for his 52nd save. Randy Johnson, 13- 10, failed to retire the first four batters he faced in the second inning.

(SEPT. 22) UPI - Iraq has kicked out 21 Western diplomats following Europe's expulsion of Iraqis and the United Nations is considering a plan to tighten up sanctions against Baghdad by imposing an embargo on air traffic.

Iraq said Friday two planes had violated its air space, the third such complaint since the gulf crisis began seven weeks ago when it invaded neighboring Kuwait.

The developments seemed more ominous coming on the heels of a get- tough speech by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, who warned his nation that it was close to war and that any fight would be a fight for Arab honor and the liberation of Jerusalem.

The U.N. Security Council plan calls on all countries to withdraw landing rights to planes flying to and from Iraq or occupied Kuwait. It also would forbid airlines from making scheduled or non-scheduled flights to the two emirates.

Meanwhile, Japan said Friday it had failed to come up with a plan to send soldiers to join the U.S.-led multinational force in the gulf, but Poland reportedly was considering sending a small contingent of troops to the region.

In retaliation for the expulsion Friday of three American diplomats from Baghdad, the State Department ordered the staff of the Iraqi embassy in Washington reduced from 19 to 16. A military attache and two other diplomats have been given a week to leave the United States, the same time limit given American and other foreign diplomats expelled Friday by the Iraqi government.

European officials said Iraq sent three British, 11 French and four Italian diplomats packing, apparently in retaliation for the expulsion from those European countries of Iraqi diplomats earlier this week.

''The expulsion is a reaction to what we did to them,'' said British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd. ''I am keen that the rest of the (embassy) staff in Baghdad should be able to carry on with their job helping the British community.''

London, Paris and Rome had expelled Iraqi diplomats and military students following a weekend raid by Iraqi soldiers on several Western embassy compounds in Kuwait.

Egypt said Friday it was closing the Iraqi military attache office in Cairo and asking its personnel to leave the country within seven days, according to the semi-official Middle East News Agency.

Butros Ghali, minister of state for foreign affairs, said Cairo was closing the office and expelling two other diplomats from the Iraqi embassy in response to the closure by Iraqi authorities of the Egyptian military attache office in Baghdad.

Egypt is currently deploying an extra 15,000 troops to Saudi Arabia to join the Western-led forces in protecting the kingdom against possible aggression from Iraqi troops massed at the Kuwaiti border. Egypt, the Gulf states, Morocco and Syria have all sent Arab troops to join the force.

Japan, however, said Friday that the government and political parties could not agree on a plan to send personnel to the region. Tokyo has pledged $4 billion to help offset the cost of the massive military buildup, but has been under increasing international pressure to provide troops as well.

In a move unimaginable just a few years ago, the Polish government may send a small contingent to join the U.S.-led forces as a gesture of support, the Polish newspaper Zycie Warszawy reported. Never before has a Warsaw Pact nation sent military troops to serve alongside Western forces.

Government sources told the newspaper the United States and Poland had discussed the possiblity, but officials declined comment on the report.

Iranian President Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani said Friday he would be willing to help bring peace to the area, but only on the condition Iraq withdraws its troops from Kuwait, which it invaded Aug. 2.

The last U.S.-chartered flight out of Kuwait was tentatively expected Saturday State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said in Washington.

With that flight, she said, the U.S. embassy in Kuwait believes that every American who is able to leave and wants to leave will have been evacuated.

So far, about 1,700 Americans, mainly women and children, have been airlifted out of Kuwait. Another 1,200 Americans remain in the emirate and there are 120 in Iraq, including diplomatic personnel.

One more American was picked up in Kuwait by Iraqi troops, bring to about 84 the number of American men held by Iraqi authorities. Iraqi authorities have been rounding up Western men and taking them to key economic and military installations, where they are kept to guard against attack by Western forces.

Saddam, wearing a military uniform, appeared on Iraqi television Thursday as a statement broadcast for him blasted Arab efforts to end the gulf crisis.

The statement, described by analysts as the toughest by Saddam since he invaded Kuwait seven weeks ago, warned Iraqis that a battle was looming and that it would be a fight to liberate Jerusalem.

He was shown on television in his capacity as chairman of a joint meeting of the Revolution Command Council and the Ruling Baath Arab Socialist Party.

The Iraqi News Agency INA said in a report Friday that the joint meeting had ''decided that there was no chance for retreat from leading the faithful until the honorable end against the invading enemies.''

Saddam had asked the U.S. government for time on American television to broadcast his rebuttle to a taped message by President Bush that aired on Iraqi television earlier this week.

(SEPT. 22) UPI - The San Diego Padres saw red Friday night - 10 of them in the first inning.

Cincinnati batted around and scored five runs in the first inning en route to a 10-1 rout of the Padres. Eric Davis homered and drove in three runs and Jose Rijo hurled a five-hitter to help Cincinnati retain its 3 1-2 game lead in the National League West.

Rijo, 13-7, won for the fifth time in his last six decisions. The right-hander walked two and struck out six in his sixth complete game of the season. Three of the five hits he allowed were to Padre lead-off hitter Bip Roberts.

Rijo has allowed two earned runs or less in 18 of his 27 starts, and the Reds are 16-2 in those games.

Dennis Rasmussen, 11-14, allowed seven runs, only three of them earned, in the first two innings.

''I pitched as good as I have in the last few starts,'' said Rijo, who is 5-1 in his last six decisions. In his last seven starts, he has allowed only seven earned runs in 57 innings.

In the first inning, Davis had an RBI double and after an error by shortstop Garry Templeton on what could have been the third out, Hal Morris added a two-run single and Joe Oliver cracked a two-run double to give the Reds a 5-0 advantage.

Back-to-back home runs by Barry Larkin, his seventh of the year, and Davis, his 23rd, increased the Reds lead to 7-0 in the second.

''My eyes got way too big. I thought they were going to pop right out of my head,'' said Rijo of his teammates production. ''I just went out and took advantage of it. If we could do that more often, we're going to be in good shape.''

Cincinnati added a single run in the seventh off reliever Calvin Schiraldi on Mariano Duncan's single, Larkin's double and a run-scoring groundout by Davis.

''When you score a few runs it will pump you up right away,'' said San Diego Manager Greg Riddoch. ''The fact that they had Rijo in there didn't hurt either.''

Riddoch did not think his club was affected by the resignation of general manager Jack McKeon.

''I think our club was affected by the opposing pitcher,'' he said.

In other National League games, Chicago edged New York 4-3, Pittsburgh blanked St. Louis 1-0, Houston beat Atlanta 4-3 in 10 innings, Philadelphia nipped Montreal 5-4 in 12 innings, Los Angeles pounded San Francisco 16-3.

In the American League it was: Boston 3, New York 0; Baltimore 5, Milwaukee 3; Cleveland 2, Toronto 1; Texas 2, Minnesota 1; California 12, Kansas City 5; Chicago 5, Seattle 4; and Oakland 6, Detroit 5.

Dodgers 16, Giants 3

At Los Angeles, Hubie Brooks drove in four runs, Kal Daniels went 4 for 4 and Eddie Murray went 3 for 3 to spearhead a season-high 20-hit attack that powered the Dodgers. Mike Morgan, 11-14, earned his first victory in more than five weeks as Los Angeles won for the seventh time in nine games to remain 3 1-2 games behind first-place Cincinnati in the NL West. Don Robinson, 10-7, lasted just three innings and was tagged for nine hits and eight runs.

Pirates 1, Cardinals 0

At Pittsburgh, Sid Bream doubled home Barry Bonds from first base in the seventh inning and Zane Smith tossed a five-hitter to lead the Pirates. Smith, 11-8, won his fifth game in six decisions since being acquired from Montreal on Aug. 8. Former Pirate Jose DeLeon fell to 7- 18.

Cubs 4, Mets 3

At Chicago, Ryne Sandberg hit a sacrifice fly in the eighth to score Jerome Walton with the winning run and Andre Dawson hit an RBI single and a solo homer to carry the Cubs. David Cone fell to 12-10. Paul Assenmacher, 6-2, allowed one run in two innings to get the victory in relief of Steve Wilson.

Phillies 5, Expos 4 (12 innings)

At Philadelphia, Lenny Dykstra singled off the right-field wall with two outs in the 12th to score Dave Hollins and lift the Phillies. Chuck Malone, 1-0, worked one inning and earned his first major-league victory. Bill Sampen fell to 11-7.

Astros 4, Braves 3, 10 innings

At Atlanta, rookie Mike Simms belted his first major league home run with one out in the 10th to lift Houston. Juan Agosto, 9-7, earned the win in relief. Kent Mercker, 4-6, took the loss.

(SEPT. 22) UPI - Showers doused parts of Texas early Saturday and forecasters said a cold front on ther first day of fall could dump 3 inches of wet snow on Minnesota.

Forecasters also were predicting a cool and rainy weekend throughout much of the Northeast as the summer ended, with clouds giving way to mostly cloudy to partly sunny skies.

Rain was expected to develop by early morning in Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusettes, and Connecticut, but was not expected to last through midday, the National Weather Service said.

Nearly 5 inches of rain fell in north-central Texas in the past 24 hours, the NWS said, at Graham, Murray and Bryson.

Showers developing ahead of an upper level weather disturbance moving out of Canada were over eastern North Dakota and northern Minnesota. Up to three inches of wet snow was possible in the Arrowhead of Minnesota Saturday, forecasters said.

Fair skies prevailed from the Mississippi Valley to northern California and the Pacific Northwest.

Columbus, Ga., had a record high of 97 degrees Friday, marking the 21st consecutive day of 90 degree weather.

The high for the nation Friday was 103 degrees at Red Bluff, Calif.

TOKYO (SEPT. 22) UPI - Japan's Justice Minister compared foreign prostitutes to American blacks and said both destroyed good neighborhoods, major Japanese newspapers reported Saturday.

''It is like bad money chasing out good money, or like blacks driving whites out of neighborhoods in America,'' Justice Minister Seiroku Kajiyama was quoted as saying.

He accompanied a late night raid Thursday on a notorious Tokyo red- light district, Kabukicho. Police arrested 45 women - 33 Thais, 10 Colombians, a South Korean and a Brazilian.

A television camera crew also was invited to observe the foreign prostitutes and their footage showed police shoving women into police vans and buses.

Kajiyama, who said he made the remark off the record, later offered a correction and apology, the reports said.

''I did not mean racial discrimination at all and I apologize if my comments led to misunderstanding,'' Kajiyama said. ''I have heard many complaints from the residents in the neighborhood and I intended to mention a degenerated environement.''

(SEPT. 22) UPI - Around the world... around the clock... news from United Press International:

The permanent members of the U-N Security Council have a plan for an embargo on air traffic in and out of Iraq. It calls on all countries to deny landing rights to planes flying to or from Iraq and Kuwait. The plan will be considered at a Security Council meeting Tuesday.

Iraq expelled 21 Western diplomats yesterday in retaliation for expulsions of Iraqis from Europe. Three of those told to leave Baghdad are Americans. Washington responded by expelling three Iraqi diplomats. Western nations expelled Iraqi diplomats after Iraq invaded their diplomatic facilities in Kuwait.

Crude oil prices closed at record highs yesterday. In New York, West Texas Intermediate rose two dollars to close at 35 dollars 43 cents a barrel. The World Bank issued an alarming report that oil could hit 65 dollars a barrel if a shooting war breaks out in the Middle East.

The Soviet parliament postponed to Monday its vote on changing to a free market system. President Mikhail Gorbachev calls the vote the ''most difficult choice'' of the perestroika era. He urged parliament to end the state monopoly on ownership and adopt a system based on private property.

The Canadian Auto Workers and Ford Canada have tentatively settled a strike. They agreed yesterday to a three-year contract including higher wages and a job security program. Workers could return to work as early as tomorrow night. The strike by 13-thousand people began a week ago and shut down nine plants.

SANFORD, FL (SEPT. 22) UPI - An outraged Gov. Bob Martinez is calling for the resignation of a state judge who declined to imprison a rapist and said the victim was partly to blame.

Seminole County Circuit Judge Kenneth Leffler Thursday rejected a plea bargain that included a 4 1/2-year prison term for confessed rapist Mark David McCulloch, 36.

Instead, he placed McCulloch on two years probation, saying he had handled the woman's divorce about two years ago and believed she victimized men who cared for her.

Leffler told The Orlando Sentinel Thursday, ''I think it would have been a miscarriage of justice to sentence that man the way (prosecutors) wanted him to be sentenced. Anyone who could be so stupid to take up with this woman deserves some consideration.''

''It is almost incomprehensible that an experienced jurist could suggest that a rape victim, in essence, had it coming. Where is your sense of justice?'' Martinez wrote Friday in a letter to Leffler.

Martinez has no authority to discipline judges. That falls to the Judicial Qualifications Commission in Tallahassee. Commission Executive Director Brooke Kemmerly said Friday that she was barred from saying whether the board had received complaints about Leffler, who has said he will retire in December.

''It is difficult for me to find the words to adequately express my sense of outrage at your comments and action in sentencing an admitted rapist to probation, based on your personal disregard for the female victim,'' Martinez wrote.

''Since it is apparent you cannnot afford crime victims the respect and consideration they deserve, I suggest you resign immediately,'' he wrote.

State Attorney Norm Wolfinger said the sentence was illegal because it did not fall within the sentencing guidelines set by the state.

Wolfinger said that the state would move on Monday to have Leffler removed from the case and to have the sentence thrown out.

''I feel confident we would win on appeal. This is a case where we have an admitted rapist saying he lost his temper and was dragging the lady to the bedroom and wouldn't let her leave, and he basically admits he raped her,'' he said.

McCulloch, a tenant renting a room in the woman's house, in July pleaded guilty to sexual battery, false imprisonment and battery.

In the plea deal struck in July, he agreed to 4 1/2 years in prison and 10 years probation, but he was released Thursday from the Seminole County Jail.

The victim said McCulloch had lived in her home for about a year and they were friends, but had no sexual relationship. She said he became enraged one night in April because she had gone on a date.

ALLENTOWN, PA (SEPT. 22) UPI - Police seized a DC-3 airliner early Saturday that was loaded with a ton of cocaine when it landed at a small eastern Pennsylvania airport.

Those aboard the two-engine aircraft apparently believed the Allentown-Bethlehem-Easton Airport was closed and hoped to sneak in for fuel at about midnight, authorities said.

Police arrested a Canadian national and searched for two other men aboard the aircraft, authorities said.

Airport manager Jack Yohe said air traffic controllers called police when the plane landed without clearance or landing lights at the airport 50 miles north of Philadelphia.

Airport security and police searched the plane, which had taxied to a remote hangar, and found 20 duffel bags stuffed with cocaine.

''We seized 1,349 kilos of cocaine - that's approximately 2,000 pounds,'' Lehigh County District Attorney Bill Platt said at an early morning news conference.

''We are not able to determine whether it was to land at Allentown or (even) inPennsylvania,'' Platt said. ''We have determined the plane was low on fuel and it may have landed in an effort to get fuel.''

He said the drugs have an estimated street value of $130 million.

Platt said officers had no idea of the cargo when they surrounded it at a refueling hanger.

''That's a lot of cocaine,'' he said. ''We have a lot of experienced narcotics officers here and none of them have seen a quantity of that sort.''

Police arrested Harold Hill of Canada, but were still looking for two other men - William McGoldrich of Florida and another man identified only as Rick. Hill was jailed on $10 million bond.

Platt said police believe the contraband flight originated in Colombia and was on its way to Canada, with some possible drops along the way.

''There were marks on some of the containers that led us to believe some of the drugs were destined for New York and Canada,'' Platt said.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 22) UPI - A Harlem grocery store manager was shot and killed by a customer early Saturday in an argument over $1 worth of ham, police and family members said.

Relatives identified the victim as Delelo Perta, 27, the father of three young children and manager of the Infante Grocery for three years.

According to Theodore Rosa, 23, a nephew of the victim and son of store owner Fransico Infante, his uncle was working with another employee about 3 a.m. when the gunman and a woman came into the store to purchase $1 worth of ham.

''The guy says to him, 'That's not a dollar's worth','' said Rosa. ''And my uncle says 'That's all I can give you for a dollar. It's $3.49 a pound.' Then the guy called him outside.''

Rosa said his uncle armed himself with a bat when he went to confront the irate customer and was shot once in the chest. He said his uncle still struggled to swing the bat against his attacker and managed to hit the woman.

Perta died at St. Luke's Hospital about 45 minutes later, police said.

There were no immediate arrests made in the case.

''He was a nice guy, a hard-working man,'' Rosa said. ''He worked seven days a week to support his wife and kids.''

Rosa said his uncle was a native of the Dominican Republic but had emigrated to the United States at least 10 years ago.

The nephew said his uncle never worried about working late at night in the neighborhood, or about becoming a crime victim.

''He's been there three years now. He wasn't worried,'' Rosa said.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 22) UPI - Expression of concern over possible terrorist attacks against the United States in the Persian Gulf and elsewhere increased dramatically last week, but analysts doubt that Iraq President Saddam Hussein would dare employ terrorist tactics.

The view among experts on terrorism is that Saddam recognizes that a terrorist attack backed by him against U.S. installations in Saudi Arabia, where most of the Americans are concentrated, or anywhere in the gulf region, would be the springboard for a U.S. attack against Iraqi forces in Kuwait and against Iraq itself.

''The Iraqis believe that the Americans are just waiting for such a pretext,'' said Yahya Sadowski, an analyst on Middle Eastern affairs and terrorism at the Brookings Institution, a Washington study group.

A major concern among U.S. forces deployed in Saudi Arabia is an attack similar to the suicide truck bombing of the Marine barracks at Beirut Airport Oct. 23, 1983, in which 241 American servicemen died. The Marines left Lebanon several months later.

Despite its repeated warnings and expressions of concern in the past week about the possibility of terrorist strikes against U.S. or allied interests, the State Department has been careful to note that it has not received terrorist threats ''that are both specific and credible.''

But it is clear that the United States would retaliate for a Saddam- supported terrorist act.

''The United States would view with utmost seriousness any Iraqi- sponsored terrorist attack,'' the State Department has said more than once.

''Utmost seriousness'' is a weighty diplomatic nicety that, translated, means there would be a U.S. counterattack.

President Bush weighed in with his own warning in response to reporters' questions Friday:

''We hold Saddam Hussein responsible if there is any terrorist act against us '' he said.

Bush added that the Iraqi president was to ''blame'' for the meeting of several terrorist leaders in Amman, Jordan, earlier in the week.

George Habash, head of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, and Nayef Hawatmeh, leader of the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine were the headliners among members of terrorist groups that met in the Jordanian capital. Both are backed by Syria and Libya.

Habash warned that his group would strike at the United States. But analysts dismissed the threat and any significance attached to the meeting of the terrorist leaders. They argued that Habash and Hawatmeh are aging Palestinian terrorist leaders who no longer command the following of an Abu Nidal or an Abu Abbas, head of the Palestine Liberation Front.

''When you threaten terrorism, I don't think much is going to happen, '' said Robert Kupperman, a terrorism specialist at the Center for Strategic and International Studies. ''I think that the threats are empty. I don't think Habash amounts to much.''

But, he said, ''Abu Nidal is quite a different matter. An Abu Nidal threatening terrorism, I would take seriously.''

Abu Nidal, whose real name is Sabri Khalil al-Banna, leads an extremely violent Palestinian group whose most notorious attack was the machine gun and grenade strikes in December 1985 against the Rome and Vienna airports in which 16 people died and 60 others were wounded.

''What worries me is not Saddam Hussein,'' Kupperman said. ''Abu Nidal is not completely under Saddam Hussein's control. He's hooked to Libya.''

CIA Director William Webster recently told the Foreign Policy Association of New York that Saddam now ''has both strong ties to Palestinian terrorists and an elaborate network within his own intelligence service capable of planning and carrying out terrorist attacks against a variety of international targets.''

But the CSIS's George Carver Jr., an intelligence, security and terrorism specialist who has his own consulting firm, said he did not think Saddam will try to launch a terrorist strike that will ''provoke something'' from the United States in response.

''I don't think he would like to give the United States any pretext for attacking,'' Carver said. ''We should respond very quickly to any provocation. But before we do, we should make sure we know the cause. We should keep control of the situation, not surrender it to someone else.''

Brookings' Judith Kipper, an expert on the Middle East, agreed with Carver.

''An Iraqi-backed terrorist act would mean instant retaliation,'' she said. ''And if we're going to go (on the offensive), we're going to go big.''

(SEPT. 22) UPI - Here is a roundup of the latest major events in the Persian Gulf crisis stemming from the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of the oil-rich emirate of Kuwait:

Saudi Arabia expelled dozens of Jordanian and Yemeni diplomats Saturday, further straining relations between Arab states embroiled in the Persian Gulf crisis.

Officials said 20 Jordanian diplomats were ordered to leave Saudi Arabia along with 30 Yemeni diplomats and 20 non-diplomatic employees of the Yemen Embassy.

No official statement was issued but diplomats said the action was taken because neither Jordan nor Yemen have condemned Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, although both have called for the withdrawal of Iraqi troops from the emirate.

The move came two days after Saudi Arabia cut off oil supplies to Jordan.

Syria's President Hafez Assad was in Tehran trying to persuade Iran to join Western efforts against onetime archenemy Iraq, diplomats and officials said. Syria and Iran have had close ties but the gulf crisis has created numerous shifts in alliances and Iran indicated it may not be ready to side with its longtime friend against its longtime foe.

The U.N. Security Council delayed the implementation of an air traffic embargo against Iraq, which President Bush said the United States would enforce. Diplomats in the Middle East said the naval blockade has effectively cut off shipments of goods to and from Iraq but that food and supplies are getting through by plane and by land through neighboring countries.

A West German weekly said Saturday that Iraq has obtained an atom bomb-like weapon built by a West German firm. The weekly Spiegel said the weapon, with a blast ''comparable to a small atomic detonation,'' and thousands of anti-tank missiles and rocket launchers reached Iraq through Egypt.

The embargo, the expensive deployment of troops and the skyrocketing price of oil is taking its toll on world economies, analysts said. The International Monetary Fund said the crisis will probably help debtor countries that export oil, but damage the world's powerful industrial economies.

The United Nations said the world economy appears to be sliding into a recession and the events in the Middle East are compounding the matter, posing serious policy questions for oil- importing countries.

LITHIA SPRINGS, GA (SEPT. 22) UPI - Two sisters gave birth to boys 15 minutes apart in a race to see which would get to occupy what they thought was the only deluxe suite in HCA Parkway Medical Center.

With about 25 relatives cheering them on in the waiting room Thursday, Karen Addison was the winner over Carla Strickland.

Addison, 23, gave birth to 7-lb., 8-ounce Jeffrey Scott Addison, at 12:41 p.m. Thursday.

At 12:56 p.m., Strickland, 32, gave birth to 7-lb., 11-ounce Travis Ryan Strickland.

The sisters, both of Douglasville, met by accident in the labor room.

''I saw her when she came in and it seemed kind of strange but I didn't really think much about it,'' said Addison. ''Right then, I was hollering and gripping.''

The two were put in adjoining delivery rooms.

''We kept hollering across to each other,'' said Strickland, who has two other children. ''She kept asking me questions.''

Then the competition began for the deluxe postpartum suite.

''She kept saying, 'I'm going to get that room,''' said Strickland.

The progress of the race was reported by the two expectant fathers, Tony Addison and Don Strickland, who shuttled between the delivery rooms.

Strickland didn't have to be informed she was the loser.

''I heard as their baby was being born,'' she said. ''We heard a lot of shouting and them saying it was a boy. I told my husband not to yell like that.''

Then came Strickland's son and her husband again ignored her request.

''I hollered too,'' he said.

SALT LAKE CITY (SEPT. 22) UPI - Mormon Church President Ezra Taft Benson showed more improvement Saturday in his recovery from brain surgery to remove two blood clots, church officials said.

The 91-year-old spiritual leader to the world's 7.5 million Mormons was in serious but stable condition three days after the surgery and may be taken out of intensive care later Saturday, hospital officials said.

Following the 2 1/2-hour operation Wednesday at LDS Hospital, neurosurgeon Bruce Sorensen had said Benson would probably remain in the intensive care unit for two days and could be sent home ''in seven to eight days.''

Sorensen said doctors found two large blood clots, one on either side of Benson's head, that had been causing his severe headaches and difficulty in swallowing. One was drained off through a small hole drilled in the right side of his skull, but a ''solid clot'' on the left side required doctors to cut ''a fist-sized hole'' in Benson's skull.

Benson, who served as agriculture secretary in the Eisenhower administration, was hospitalized Tuesday. He was the first Mormon to serve in a presidential cabinet and the first clergyman in 100 years to serve in such a post.

FERRARA, ITALY (SEPT. 22) UPI - Pope John Paul II called Saturday on Western nations to reverse their falling birthrates, a phenomenom he described as a "menance."

The Polish pontiff, visiting a north-central Italian city that has lost almost 5 percent of its population in the past quarter-century, described the declining birthrate of the industrialized West as ''worrying.''

John Paul called the decline in births ''a menace for all of the rich West.''

''Faith feeds optimism, a sentiment which is growing scarce in the Western world,'' John Paul said. ''Society is getting older and there are few babies being born.

''How can there be hope for a better future without children?'' he said to a crowd of several thousand. ''We cannot watch with indifference the worrying phenomenon of the constant fall of the population.''

The pope spoke in the main square of Ferrara, a city of 145,000 between Bologna and Venice that boasted 152,000 inhabitants in 1963.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 22) UPI - The administration, bowing to congressional pressure, worked through the weekend to craft a scaled-down, roughly $10 billion arms sales package for Saudi Arabia, an administration official said Saturday.

Having concluded that opposition on Capitol Hill was likely to pare, if not derail entirely, the original package proposed for some $20 billion in arms and equipment, officials consulted over the weekend on a quick presentation for Congress early next week.

The administration bowed to reality late Friday, announcing it would only seek a significantly reduced arms package, one premised on Saudi Arabia's immediate needs.

Although President Bush continued to insist Friday, first to a gathering of congressional leaders at the White House and later to reporters before leaving for Camp David, Md., that the package for the key Persian Gulf ally was imperative, White House deputy press secretary Roman Popadiuk acknowledged the administration shift in a statement.

''Following our consultation with Congress, we will provide this assistance in phases,'' said Popadiuk. ''The specific items to be provided in the first phase are still being determined, and will encompass equipment and training requiring early action. This request will be sent to the Congress early next week.

''Those items that do not require expedited review will be submitted to the Congress early in the next year,'' he said.

An administration official who asked not to be identified said Saturday that the sale would be ''in the ball park'' of $10 billion. He added, however, that ''that is still subject to change'' because of the continuing discussions, being spearheaded by the State Department.

The initial request to Congress would be followed by a second request in January to meet the longer-term needs of the country.

Initial reports that the administration was considering an arms sale of over $20 billion - including highly sophisticated weapons systems - drew opposition from some quarters on Capitol Hill and from Israel.

Prince Bandar bin Sultan, the Saudi Arabian ambassador to the United States, signaled the shift first Friday, indicating that the proposed arms to help Saudi Arabia to bolster its forces against the threat of an invasion by Iraq could be split into two sales - one covering weapons needed immediately, the other for needs farther in the future.

The Saudi ambassador cautioned reporters not to place ''too much emphasis on this package,'' saying that negotiations on the sale of sophisticated arms to Saudi Arabia was an ''unrolling thing.''

Before departing for the weekend, Bush continued to press for congressional backing of the arms package. ''I also informed the congressional leaders that it is essential that we continue to meet Saudi Arabia's legitimate defense requirements,'' he said.

The 54 Kuwaiti team members wore white robes and national headwear and carried pictures of Kuwait's exiled leader. .

A newspaper in Poland says the Warsaw government, in a gesture of support, may send a small contingent of troops to join U-S led forces in the Persian Gulf. Never before has a Warsaw Pact nation sent military troops to serve alongside Western forces. Government sources say the United States and Poland have discussed the possibility. Officials refused to comment on the report.

Residents of Hawaii go to the polls today to decide on nominees for three of the state's four seats in Congress. Voters will choose party nominees for the two House seats vacated by Democrat Daniel Akaka and Republican Patricia Saiki. Those two are among candidates vying for a Senate seat. Showers covered parts of Texas early today. A cool and rainy weekend was forecast for much of the Northeast.

Non-aligned members of the U-N Security Council are considering ways to implement a 1978 resolution demanding Israel withdraw from Lebanon. (SEPT. 22) UPI - Something is rotten in Paris. It's garbage that is piling up because of a trash haulers strike. French garbage workers went on strike Tuesday, leaving sidewalks crowded with filled trash bins and the odor of waste wafting through the air in 14 of the city's 20 districts. The mayor of Paris said yesterday the strike is illegal because trash haulers used their trucks to block access to incinerators.

COLUMBUS, OH (SEPT. 22) UPI - It ws 46 years late and Alexander Lambros has recovered from his wounds, but Saturday he finally received the Purple Heart he earned in World War II.

''Forty-six years of bureaucracy?'' exclaimed an incredulous Vice President Dan Quayle as he presented the decoration to Lambros, 65, of Ashtabula, at Port Columbus International Airport, where he arrived for a speaking engagement at an Ohio Republican rally.

''I'm sorry it took so long but as they say, better late than never. God bless you and thank you for what you have done,'' the vice president told Lambros.

''I'm very happy about it,'' said Lambros, who said he was wounded at age 19 while serving in an infantry rifle company in Italy in July 1944. ''I'm proud to see him (the vice president).''

Lambros, who was accompanied by his wife, Margaret, and his brother, federal Judge Thomas Lambros of Cleveland, said bureaucratic bungling and a fire in the Army Records Center in St. Louis delayed the citation.

SAN DIEGO (SEPT. 22) UPI - Employees of a federal courthouse where a pipe bomb exploded recently were warned to stay away from the building this weekend by the FBI, it was reported Saturday.

The San Diego Tribune said the FBI issued the warning late Friday after a telephone call was placed to the agency's San Diego office.

''As a matter of normal precaution, because of the fact that there was a recent incident, we alerted federal employees in the courthouse building and we took normal precautionary measures,'' said Ron Orrantia, an FBI spokesman.

SAN SALVADOR, EL SALVADOR (SEPT. 22) UPI - The armed forces said Saturday they dismantled four rebel camps in guerrila-controlled areas of the Salvadoran countryside in recent anti-insurgent operations.

''The Belloso battalion dismantled three terrorist camps in Chalatenango, where they (rebels) held big stocks of material for explosives,'' an army spokesman said.

The army has been sweeping for the last month the mountains and towns of Chalatenango province, some 30 miles north of the capital, where the main rebel camps of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, or FMLN, are located.

The military spokesman said the army also discovered and dismantled a rebel camp in the eastern province of Usulutan, siezing arms, food, medicine and rebel documents.

He said each of the camps found had a capacity to house about 50 rebels.

The FMLN said on their clandestine Radio Venceremos station they caused 10 army casualties in an attack Friday on military installations in the town of Jucuaran, 70 miles east of San Salvador.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (SEPT. 23) UPI - Investigators have found a previously unknown painting by the Spanish artist Francisco Goya mistakenly stored as the work of a minor artist in the Buenos Aires Fine Arts Museum, the museum's director said Saturday.

Jorge Lorenzutti, the museum director, said a painting entitled ''Bullfighter Jose Romero,'' measuring about 35 by 30 inches, had been stored among 7,500 other works in a storage room.

He said the previously uncatalogued painting, which he estimated was worth about $6 million, had been donated to the museum by a collector in 1974 and identified as the work of Luis Osorio, a minor painter.

CORUNNA, MI (SEPT. 23) UPI - Wedding guests should have suspected something when the band played the rock and roll song, ''I Fought the Law and the Law Won.''

At the end of the song Friday night, all police officers in the hall were asked to identify themselves. All others were told they were under arrest.

The bogus wedding was part of an elaborate sting that netted about 15 suspected drug dealers from Shiawassee and neighboring counties.

It marked the end of a five-month undercover operation in which a free-lance undercover agent, using the name of Daniel Brown, made more than 100 drug buys from about 50 people.

Then, he let it be known he was engaged to the daughter of a top- level drug dealer and invited most of them to the Friday night wedding. Guests were asked to check their guns and knives at the door, and they complied.

Among the arresting officers was the ''bride,'' actually Flint police officer Debra Williams, who lifted the hem of her white gown and pulled out a .38-caliber handgun from a leg holster.

The ''groom'' - wearing a black tuxedo for the first time in his life - circulated around the hall, helping police identify the suspects.

Williams, who is single, said he was ''excited and nervous,'' adding that the wedding ''felt like it was the real thing.'' There was even a wedding cake - real frosting over polystyrene.

The agent said the fake wedding was not fun, nor was it designed to make the suspects look foolish, although organizers could not risk the tongue-in-cheek touch of announcing that music would be provided by ''Spoc'' - cops spelled backward.

The idea, Williams said, was to avoid making individual arrests which might tip off other suspects.

''There was no intent to humiliate them ... we just didn't want them to be suspicious,'' he said. ''It had to be real lifelike.''

Police said attendance at the fake wedding may have been hurt when five people were arrested in the parking lot Friday afternoon by the groom, who was ''selling'' marijuana at $1,000 per pound. They suspect some of those arrested tipped off invited guests.

Bond for the suspects was set Saturday and formal arraignments were set for Monday.

GUATEMALA CITY (SEPT. 23) UPI - Three Guatemalan soldiers are being held as leading suspects in the June slaying of a 49-year-old American tour guide in northern Peten province, an army spokesman said Saturday.

Armed forces spokesman Col. Carlos Duran said three soldiers, none of whom are officers, are being held as suspects in the murder of Michael Devine, a U.S. citizen originally from Belleville, Ill.

Devine had been living in Guatemala for 18 years and was working as a tour guide at Peten's historic sites when he was kidnapped by five men June 8.

His beaten and decapitated body was found the next day on a roadside in a jungle area of northern Peten province.

Duran said civilian and military authorities were questioning the suspects at an undisclosed location. He would not name the soldiers being questioned, but said preliminary findings might be released next week.

In a Sept. 6 letter to U.S. Ambassador Thomas Stroock, President Vinicio Cerezo acknowledged that members of the Guatemalan security forces might have been responsible for killing Devine.

Duran said there was no evidence to implicate Col. Roberto Garcia, who was recently removed from his post as commander of the local military base in Peten province. In announcing Garcia's removal last week, Cerezo said he wanted to clear the way for a smooth investigation.

U.S. embassy spokesman James Dickmeyer said he could not confirm whether anyone was being held in the case.

Dickmeyer denied reports that the United States was considering a reduction in military and economic assistance to Guatemala if the investigation did not yield satisfactory results. ''My understanding is that this case is not at all related to aid from the United States,'' he said.

Human rights groups have accused Guatemala's army of involvement in many of the almost daily disappearances and killings in the country.

PORT ORFORD, OR (SEPT. 23) UPI - The arrest of two environmental activists who tried to disrupt the work of a minerals research ship by circling it in small boats apparently was working to deter further incursions Saturday, the Coast Guard said.

Three inflatable boats launched Friday from the Greenpeace ship Rainbow Warrior darted into a 500-yard security buffer around the research ship Aloha as it tried to perform undersea mineral tests 3 miles off Port Orford, Coast Guard Lt. Roger Dubuc said.

The Coast Guard dispatched its cutter Citrus from nearby North Bend and used a motor lifeboat and two inflatables to catch two of the protesters from the environmental group after being warned several times to leave the safety zone.

''We had to catch them,'' Dubuc said Saturday. ''They were running around evading them as best as they could.''

As soon as one of the small rubber boats was stopped and boarded, two others scampered out of the zone and back to the Rainbow Warrior, Dubuc said.

Aloha Capt. Bob Sherer reported he wanted to place magnetic and seismic equipment in the water behind his vessel. But such tests were impossible as long as the inflatable boats from the Greenpeace ship shadowed the Aloha.

The joint state-federal Oregon Placer Minerals Task Force chartered the ship to research mineral deposits and biology near Cape Blanco and the mouth of the Rogue River.

The task force maintains it is doing academic research and developing an inventory of mineral resources in the area. Officials said they expect deposits to be marginal at best.

But Greenpeace calls the cruise the first step toward strip mining on the Oregon coast.

''If there's a lot of money to be made, they'll go after it,'' said Carol Alexander, an activist on the Greenpeace ship.

Eleven commercial fishing boats aided the Greenpeace vessel Friday in blocking the Aloha from deploying scientific gear. They returned to shore Friday evening after announcement of the safety zone and as winds picked up and heavy fog moved in.

Coast Guard Capt. Peter Willcox said some of the salmon trollers, crabbers and sea urchin divers had radioed they would return Saturday. But Dubuc said none were on the scene as of Saturday afternoon, only the Aloha, the Rainbow Warrior and the Citrus.

Nicholas Sanders, 25, of Sydney, Australia, and David Thoenn, 26, of Greenwood Lake, N.Y., were being held Saturday at the Curry County Jail in Gold Beach, where they awaited interviews by the Coast Guard and a decision on formal charges, Dubuc said.

(SEPT. 22) UPI - The Persian Gulf crisis continues to heat up on the diplomatic front. Iraq today announced it is closing the military attache offices of 10 countries, including the United States, and restricting the remaining diplomats to Baghdad. And Saudi Arabia today expelled dozens of Jordanian and Yemeni diplomats. Relations between the Saudis and Jordan and Yemen have been strained because the two countries have NOT condemned Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Anti-nuclear activists staged a rally at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida today to protest the scheduled launch of a nuclear-powered solar probe next month aboard the shuttle Discovery. The demonstrators say the Ulysses probe could release dangerous radiation if there's a launch accident. NASA says solar power is NOT feasible for this mission because the Ulysses will be too far from the sun during certain parts of the voyage.

Finance ministers and other officials of the world's seven largest economies gathered in Washington today to discuss the global impact of the Persian Gulf crisis on oil prices. The Group of Seven ministers may endorse a financial package to help those nations hardest hit by the crisis.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 23) UPI - Finance ministers and other managers of the world's seven largest economies said Saturday that oil prices rising on Mideast tensions are not pushing the industrialized world into a recession.

But the Group of Seven finance ministers and central bank chiefs said a tight course must be steered between inflation and an economic slowdown.

In a statement issued after day-long consultations, they cited ''solid growth'' in the main economies despite surging oil costs, predicting that the world's 9-year-old economic expansion would continue in 1991.

''The ministers,'' said the Group of Seven communique, ''noted that the rise in the price of oil associated with the Gulf crisis poses two risks: a risk of inflation and a risk of lower economic growth.''

They recommended ''stability-oriented monetary policies'' to keep inflation in check, coupled with ''sound fiscal policies'' that might ease interest rates by reducing government spending, taxing and borrowing.

U.S. Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady told reporters, ''You've got to steer between these two risks. There is the obvious risk of inflation presented by high oil prices, and there's also risk of lower economic growth.''

''Government's job now is to balance itself so it navigates between those two risks, and we neither put ourselves in the way of runaway inflation, nor do we adopt policies which would slow economic growth.''

Separately, Japanese Finance Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto said, ''The economies of the G-7 countries can likely absorb the effects of oil price increases.'' He said easing credit to cushion the shock could fuel inflation.

The officials, who met last in May, took a steady-as-we-go stance on foreign exchange and interest rates. They noted with satisfaction that the Japanese yen has appreciated from its low levels earlier this year.

The statement left room for the United States to lower its interest rates if Washington politicans can trim the budget deficit.

Alluding to ongoing but unfruitful talks between Congress and the White House on reducing the deficit, the ministers ''encouraged the United States to bring the budget summit to a prompt and successful conclusion.''

The U.S., Japanese, German, French, Italian, British and Canadian officials acknowledged the distress caused to poorer nations by soaring energy costs and other effects of Iraq's invasion and takeover of Kuwait.

They endorsed proposals to financially assist the so-called front-line states of Jordan, Turkey and Egypt whose economies have been severely disrupted. East European economies also are declining under heavier energy costs.

The officials urged the International Monetary Fund and World Bank, which are holding their annual meetings in Washington this week, ''to adopt appropriate measures, on an expedited basis'' to help such nations.

Jordan and Turkey depended heavily on trade with Iraq, which has been cut off to a mere trickle by a U.N.-mandated economic embargo. Egyptian workers by the thousands have fled Iraq and Kuwait, losing essential jobs.

In Eastern Europe and the Third World nations such as Brazil, higher oil prices are threatening to choke off development at a critical time.

But the principal thrust of the G-7 statement was to advocate caution without fear in the face of the 1990 Iraqi oil shock.

''What we were trying to convey here is a sense of stability, which in fact has been the case,'' Brady said. ''Markets ... have been stable, '' he added. ''All in all, there has been no precipitous decline.''

Since Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2, the price of a barrel of oil has gyrated on markets until hitting a record high of just over $35 Friday.

Industrialized nations, more energy efficient, are better equipped than other countries to absorb higher oil prices. But the Iraq oil shock hit just as the U.S. economy was slowing with inflation rising.

Rising oil prices have put U.S. economic officials in a particular quandary, one that the G-7 session did not seem able to answer.

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan - also attending the G-7 meeting, has been under intense administration in this midterm election year to bring down short-term interest rates to revive the economy.

But easing credit right now, with oil prices surging, could set off a wave of 1970s-style roaring inflation and disconcert global bond investors on whom the United States relies to finance its deficits. Paradoxically, lower short-term rates could result in higher long-term and mortgage rates.

KHJC plans to expand stockbroking activities in Thailand, Indonesia, the Philippines, Hong Kong and Europe.

The offer for public subscription will remain open until October 8.

WELLINGTON (SEPT. 24) - New Zealand's biggest company, Fletcher Challenge Ltd. (FCL), said Monday it had become the world's largest crude methanol producer.

FCL chief executive Hugh Fletcher said the company was focusing on resources and had increased methanol production capacity and had acquired oil and gas reserves in Canada.

"With a combined production capacity of over two million tonnes of crude methanol, we are the world's largest methanol producers," Mr. Fletcher said at FCL's annual meeting here, adding that methanol had been their "sole expansion" for the decade in a new resources-to-market chain..

In 1988, FCL purchased the former state-owned Petrocorp which had extensive oil and natural gas interests in New Zealand. It also purchased a synthetic petrol plant which manufactures methanol from natural gas.

He said the purchase of Petrocorp's reserves had been the cheapest oil and gas acquisition in the world in the past past five years.

Every one dollar U.S. rise in the oil price was worth 10.5 million New Zealand dollars (6.5 million dollars U.S) annually to FCL, Mr. Fletcher said.

The pipeline linking Petrocorp's methanol plant to the Synfuel plant allowed Petrocorp to swing 600,000 tonnes of natural gas a year between chemical methanol and synthetic petrol, he said.

In Canada, he said FCL had acquired interests in oil and gas fields in the major Provost field in Alberta.

He said FCL's total oil and gas reserves worldwide -- now the equivalent of 355 million barrels of oil -- had risen by 10 per cent through this acquisition.

FCL is also active in forestry, building materials manufacture, construction and property development, and primary industries.

COLOMBO (SEPT. 23) - A total of 2,006 Sri Lankans were flown home from the Middle East over the weekend, the Sri Lankan foreign ministry said here Sunday.

Four flights despatched under the government's accelerated programme to repatriate Sri Lankan nationals stranded in the Gulf had brought back 1,198 people since Saturday, the ministry said in a statement.

Two flights, financed by the International Organisation for Migration, arrived Saturday with 688 passengers, while a U.S. Air Force flight brought home another 120 people Sunday, the statement said.

An estimated 80,000 Sri Lankans were in Kuwait and another 20,000 in Iraq when Baghdad's troops invaded the emirate on August 2.

Justice Minister A.C.S. Hameed, a member of a ministerial committee appointed by President Ranasinghe Premadasa to help Sri Lankans stranded in the Middle East, said a four-flight shuttle was bringing home some 1,200 Sri Lankans daily.

Some 15,000 people have been flown back so far and the number is expected to reach 25,000 by the end of September, the official Sunday Observer weekly quoted Mr. Hameed as saying.

A Jordanian ship carrying some 1,700 Sri Lankans was due here shortly, he said adding that Colombo had established a mission in Jordan to speed up the repatriation process.

The cabinet has approved a one billion rupee (25 million dollar) package to facilitate evacuation of Sri Lankans from the Gulf, and more funds would be made available if necessary, he said.

EASTERN SAUDI ARABIA (SEPT. 23) - Heat, snakes and scorpions have been keeping things interesting for members of a U.S. Air Force medical evacuation squadron sent to Saudi Arabia as part of "Operation Desert Shield."

Major Carol Darby, the officer in charge of the 1st Air Medical Evacuation Squadron, the 1st AES, said Sunday that the squadron has flown out "around 400" sick or injured U.S. troops.

"You name it, we've had everything; broken bones, a couple of snake bites, one scorpion bite, surgery, appendectomies," said the 34-year-old officer from California.

She declined to specify the number of soldiers flown out afer suffering from heatstroke but said "there haven't been as many of those as you would think."

Staff Sergeant Stephen Torres, a 25-year-old Texan, said the most serious cases have been "a couple of suspected heart attacks."

"A couple of guys were in with compound fractures of lower legs," he added, including one who may face amputation after falling out of a truck while asleep when it hit a bump.

The basic duties of the squadron are to look after the sick or injured, or in time of combat, the wounded, for "two to six hours," Major Darby explained, between the time they arrive and are flown elsewhere.

There are no doctors in the outfit, dubbed the "Desert Express" and usually based in Pope, North Carolina, just nurses and medical technicians.

"We're kind of the in-between sick area," said Major Barbara Martin of another Air Medical Evacuation Squadron, the 31st AES.

SYDNEY (SEPT. 23) - Syringe-wielding thieves are terrorising the Australian public with the criminal threat of the 1990s: "your money or my AIDS".

A renewed spate of robberies with blood-filled syringes has occurred since a 21-year-old prison warden contracted the killer AIDS virus after he was stabbed by a prisoner with the health device turned lethal weapon.

Police said Friday that in one of the latest attacks, a male transvestite demanding money squirted "red liquid" at a five-month pregnant clothing shop assistant. The man, believed to be about 30, fled with the takings.

Police said a man was abducted, robbed and jabbed in the hand twice with a blood-filled syringe on Thursday by two men who told their victim he would contract acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS).

But medical authorities say that victims of such attacks only have a slim chance of catching the disease, which is transmitted through contaminated blood.

Simon Latimer, spokesman for the New South Wales police, said syringe attacks had emerged as a popular way to terrorise and rob the public.

He refused to reveal the number of attacks, saying such statistics were confidential, and partially blamed media publicity for promoting the new form of terror.

"We prefer not to attract publicity because you get an awful lot of copycats.

"A lot of them are drug addicts," he said. "Syringes are an easily obtainable weapon."

Peter Liehne, from Canberra's AIDS Policy and Program Branch, said that no one knew the exact risk of catching AIDS from needle injuries.

But studies of health workers who had been pricked by syringes used on AIDS patients showed the odds of contracting the disease were between one in 200 and one in 300.

"That data is based on accidents," he said, adding that the risk to an individual who suffered a needle stick injury was related to the amount of blood transfered.

"We don't really know how to compare the amount of blood that may be transfered in the event of an attack by a needle," he said.

But he added, "You would have to be extremely unlucky to become infected from a needle stick injury."

The list of syringe attacks however keeps growing. Last month a man waved a blood-filled syringe in a fast food shop, threatening to stab the female cashier if she refused to hand over the money.

Two months ago, a 40-year-old woman terrorised a shoe shop in Sydney's central business district with a syringe.

In January, a man in his 30s stabbed a taxi driver with a syringe and robbed him of 150 dollars (124 U.S.).

Two years ago, the son of a wealthy Melbourne businessman was abducted by kidnappers who threatened to inject him with AIDS-contaminated blood unless a 500,000 dollar (412,100 U.S.) ransom was paid. Three men were charged over the incident.

About the same time, a 23-year-old man held six police at bay with a syringe in Sydney. The man was overcome by a policeman using his baton.

The health department estimated in 1988 that more than 110,000 Australians used intravenous drugs on a regular or irregular basis.

Official statistics say that almost 2,000 Australians have AIDS and 1,207 have already died from the disease, which robs the body of its ability to fight disease and infections.

Nearly 90 per cent of AIDS cases were attributed to homosexual contact between men.

PHNOM PENH (SEPT. 23) - Progress by Cambodia's warring factions towards consolidating an interim authority is welcome here, but some analysts wonder how long they can keep their bickering off the battlefield.

Many diplomats and insiders believe the four warring parties have been doing their best to ensure that the bloodshed continues, just as their powerful sponsors find common ground for seeking peace.

Several analysts reckoned that the latest move towards reconciliation, following an impasse last week, came amid intense outside pressure on the Cambodians.

"It seems only that the Cambodians themselves do not care about peace," said one seasoned observer.

A diplomat from a socialist nation agreed, saying, "My feeling is that the Cambodian parties are not that hot about an immediate solution."

Their remarks followed the failure last week in Bangkok of the first meeting of the Supreme National Council (SNC) -- a body grouping six members of the Phnom Penh government and six representatives of the three-party resistance.

Under a peace plan proposed by the permanent members of the U.N. Security Council -- Britain, France, China, the Soviet Union and the United States -- the SNC would embody Cambodian sovereignty and hold its U.N. seat.

But the rival sides in their meeting could not agree on the chairmanship of the SNC and did not even discuss the U.N. seat.

However they appeared later in the week to be moving towards agreement on expanding the SNC to 14 members to ensure parity between the two sides and allow nominal resistance chief Prince Norodom Sihanouk to join as president.

(In Bangkok, Cambodian sources said the three guerrilla factions were expected to meet Sunday on the proposal by Prince Sihanouk to expand the SNC and put the peace process back on track.)

But despite the signs of progress, many locals here believe peace is a long way off.

"A small minority think peace will come soon," said Som Kim Suor, editor of the Pracheachun newspaper. "The way to peace is long because of obstacles and difficulty caused by the other side."

Some analysts said the failure of the first SNC meeting was the fault of all four sides and, while welcoming the latest rapprochement, wondered when the next falling out will occur.

One diplomat said each side had reasons for maintaining the status quo.

Peace and reconciliation would signify a power realignment in Phnom Penh which would result in several officials losing their influential posts, he said.

The communist Khmer Rouge, the military muscle of the tripartite resistance coalition, would be forced to disband its forces and become just another political party -- and not a popular one at that -- among many.

The diplomat said the two weak non-communist factions had no claim to a significant role in a future government and could retain a high profile and receive overseas assistance only so long as the fighting continued.

"I do believe that some of this assistance clings to some fingers," the diplomat added.

These factors would help to explain why all four sides had no interest in a prompt solution, he said, adding that the squabbling and bloodletting "could go on for quite some time."

Many here reacted with amazement when Prince Norodom Ranarridh, heading his father Prince Sihanouk's delegation, decided to leave last week's SNC meeting early to send his children to school.

"How can Cambodia rely on such people for their own fate?" said one top diplomat.

JERUSALEM (SEPT. 23) - Israel on Sunday warned that it was ready to defend itself against an Iraqi attack, after President Saddam Hussein vowed that Israel and Saudi Arabia would be swept away by any U.S. strike on Iraq.

Government spokesman Avi Pazner said Israel "always takes seriously" threats by President Hussein.

He added: "This is not the first time that Saddam Hussen has threatened us. Since the invasion of Kuwait (on August 2) he has tried to drag Israel into the conflict in order to transform it into an Israeli-Arab confrontation.

"Israel is not involved in the conflict. But if we are attacked we have the means to defend ourselves, as we have demonstrated in the past," Mr. Pazner said.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 23) - U.S. Secretary of State James Baker Sunday said the Gulf crisis could still be resolved through diplomacy, but that the United States was keeping all of its options open.

"I don't think we are running out of non-military options," Mr. Baker told NBC television.

He noted that the U.N. Security Council was scheduled to meet Tuesday to study ways to strengthen the sanctions it had mandated against Iraq and Iraqi-occupied Kuwait in response to Baghdad's August 2 invasion of the small emirate.

U.S. President George Bush -- who has sent more than 150,000 troops to the Gulf to help protect Saudi Arabia from a possible Iraqi attack -- is still seeking a peaceful solution to the crisis, said Mr. Baker.

But Mr. Bush "will not and should not rule out other options," Mr. Baker added.

Mr. Baker refused to comment on reports published Sunday in The Washington Post which said the U.S. military had drafted contingency plans to mount ground assaults against Iraq from at least four directions, including from Jordan and Turkey.

But in case of an Iraqi provocation, the United States would respond appropriately, he said. He indicated that if U.S. officials decided to use force, they would consult with the United Nations to try to maintain the international consensus on the Gulf crisis.

"We cannot begin to walk away from six U.N. resolutions," Mr. Baker said, referring to the Security Council-mandated measures aimed at pressuring Baghdad to withdraw its troops from Kuwait.

He rejected any possibility of reaching a compromise with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein as long as Iraq continued to ignore the U.N. measures by occupying Kuwait.

"It would be a serious mistake to be going down that road," said Mr. Baker, adding that discussions could take place after an Iraqi withdrawal.

Meanwhile, in Freetown, sources close to the interim government of Liberia formed in the Sierra Leone capital said rival Liberian leaders would meet in the city Friday for negotiations to end the civil war.

The sources said the U.S. government was working to bring Mr. Taylor and Mr. Johnson together to the negotiating table. They said Mr. Taylor would "be forced to talk peace or he'll die".

U.S. Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs Herman Cohen met both men during his four-day visit to West Africa last week.

The sources in Freetown said the interim government had offered Mr. Taylor the position of speaker of the national assembly -- the highest position from which a candidate could run in presidential elections.

JERUSALEM (SEPT. 23) - Israeli Health Minister Ehud Olmert on Sunday urged Israeli soldiers and civilians to open fire whenever their lives are threatened by Palestinians in the occupied territories.

Mr. Olmert, a member of the ruling right-wing Likud bloc, told Voice of Israel radio that Israelis on the West Bank and Gaza Strip should "shoot without hesitation" if they came under attack.

"It's better to deal with media criticism than to be lynched by Arabs," he said following a cabinet meeting to discuss the murder last Thursday of an Israeli army reservist in a Palestinian refugee camp on the Gaza Strip.

Another right-wing member of the cabinet, Agriculture Minister Rafael Eytan, said authorities should raze the area of the Bureijh refugee camp where the soldier was killed.

As punishment, he added, Israel should "expel 200 young Palestinians from the camp" to an Arab country.

Tension was reported high Sunday on the Gaza Strip, where 11 Palestinians were shot and wounded in confrontations with soldiers, according to Palestinian sources.

In Tunis Palestine Liberation Organization official Bassam Abu Sharif spoke of an "explosive situation" and said the PLO had been in contact with United Nations Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

More than 30 Palestinians have now been detained in connection with an attack that took place when Amnon Pomerantz, a 46-year-old reservist, drove into the Bureijh camp apparently by mistake.

When his car was stoned, he tried to leave the compound but collided with a donkey-drawn cart and injured two Palestinian teenagers, according to Israeli and Arab sources.

An enraged crowd then attacked Mr. Pomerantz with stones and set his car ablaze. His body was reported to have been burned beyond recognition.

LA PAZ (SEPT. 23) EFE - A month-long trek to the peaks of the Andes and a sacrificed llama have paid dividends for a Bolivian indian tribe.

The government declared Saturday that 1,700 square km of the Chimanes rainforest in northern Bolivia was indian land and ordered logging companies exploiting the timber to get out.

It was a major victory for the environment and the indians who had marched 650 km through steamy jungles 4,600 m up the Andean wall to the capital La Paz to demand the return of ancestral territory.

Seven different logging companies have been felling trees in the forest -- home to 6,000 indians -- over the past four years under government contract. Officials admit that half the wood in Chimanes forest has been cleared by lumberjacks in four years.

The 700 poorly-clad, hungry, cold and exhausted marchers, including pregnant women, children and old men, reached the outskirts of La Paz Monday where they halted to sacrifice a llama before entering the city.

Their spirits were lifted when the heart of the llama was still beating after it had been pulled from the body, a good omen.

After five days of hard bargaining with government officials, including three ministers, it was agreed that logging companies must wrap up their felling operations by October 31 and clear timber stocks within three months.

With victory secure the Indians looked forward to a more comfortable home trip on a Hercules transport aircraft, courtesy of the government.

WARSAW (SEPT. 23) EFE - Poland will insist on entry visas for Germans visiting the country in response to restrictions imposed on Poles wishing to travel to the unified Germany, the Foreign Ministry announced Sunday.

An official communique said the government regretted having to take the measure, effective October 3, the day Germany becomes a single nation, but added it was necessary because of the discriminatory position adopted by German authorities.

Until now Poles had been able to travel to East Germany and continue to West Berlin without entry visas.

The communique pointed out that citizens from other central European countries such as Hungary and Czechoslovakia will not require entry visas to travel to Germany.

BUENOS AIRES (SEPT 23) EFE - Argentine President Carlos Menem has sacked an adviser for shipping 140 tons of beef to Iraq in defiance of a United Nations economic embargo, an official statement said Sunday.

Parliamentary deputy Alberto Samid, also a meat dealer, said he had sent to beef to Iraq for humanitarian reasons.

+There are hungry children, women and old people who have nothing to do with the war in Iraq,+ said Samid.

But the official statement said Samid had openly violated Argentina's adherence to United Nations sanctions against Iraq. The sanctions, which were imposed after Iraq's invasion and annexation of Kuwait in August, permit humanitarian shipments of food and medicine but only through international agencies.

Samid, who admits that he supports the Iraqi invasion, shipped the meat by air to Iraq via Iran.

The statement said an official investigation would be opened to determine how Samid broke the embargo.

Argentina has sent two warships and troops to the Gulf as part of the multinational force deployed against Iraq.

SAN SALVADOR (SEPT. 23) EFE - El Salvador's leftist guerrillas Sunday claimed they caused more than 100 Army casualties, brought down four helicopters and confiscated numerous weapons over the last week.

Radio Farabundo Marti of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN) rebel group said its guerrillas had attacked Army positions in Usulutan department, 110 km east of the capital, and had brought down three helicopters there.

The report said a fourth military helicopter was downed in the eastern Morazan region.

The FMLN said that in the strife-torn region of Chalatenango, some 80 km north of San Salvador, it had inflicted 25 casualties on the elite Ramon Belloso battalion.

The report did not distinguish between deaths and injuries in the casualty figures, nor did it give the FMLN's own losses.

In the last week the FMLN has destroyed 11 electricity pylons, which the rebels said has forced the government to reduce supplies throughout the country.

The guerrillas said they had also confiscated grenade launchers, M-16 rifles, and a radio set.

Also Sunday, the U.S. Embassy in San Salvador denied reports its guards had captured five suspected guerrillas as they were allegedly placing a bomb against an embassy compound wall.

A spokesman said U.S. embassy police had at no time taken part in arresting the five, saying Salvadoran authorities had captured the suspected guerrillas.

The University of El Salvador's General Association of Students charged last Wednesday that U.S. embassy police had seized the five students.

The FMLN said the supposed intervention of U.S. embassy police in seizing the students was +an imperialist intervention, and that the embassy was henceforth a legitimate military target.

The FMLN has been locked in a decade-long insurgency with a series of right-wing, U.S.-backed governments in which around 75,000 people are estimated to have been killed.

TORONTO (SEPT. 24) PR NEWSWIRE -- The more than 12,800 members of the Canadian Auto Workers Union at Ford will be back on the job on Monday morning after one week on strike. Today they overwhemingly endorsed a new collective agreement at all locations with an overall vote of 91 percent for production and 88 percent for skilled trades.

CAW President Bob White in addressing the Windsor meeting called the new agreement ''the best ever negotiated for Ford Canada workers.'' The new three year agreement provides wage increases of 3 percent in the first year and 2 percent in the second and third year, plus cost-of-living payments in each year. The total increases are projected to average 6.4 percent in each year of $3.60 over the life of the agreement. The base rate, including COLA for a production worker will now rise to $19.15 and to $21.41 by the third year of the agreement.

As well the CAW achieved a progressive Worker Security Program to protect workers in the event of layoffs and job loss. White said that Prime Minister Mulroney had promised workers the best adjustment program possible under the Free Trade Agreement but that did not happen. ''The Prime Minister failed to address it in legislation," said White. "He forced us to do it at the bargaining table and this should become a pattern for a legislative framework for dealing with plant closures and job dislocations.''

Under the new agreement Ford workers will get an additional 32 hours paid time off each year. As well each year they will receive a $500 vacation bonus in addition to their regular vacation pay, a breakthrough in the auto industry.

The union has also established a Social Justice Fund funded by Ford at a rate of one cent per hour worked to assist those in need nationally and internationally.

The Ford agreement will set a pattern for the more than 60,000 workers at all the Big 3 in Canada. White said he will be meeting with the G.M. and Chrysler bargaining committees this week to go over the details of the agreement and to establish a timetable for the next target. This time table will be announced within a few days.

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (SEPT. 23) UPI - Urban commandos belonging to El Salvador's insurgency Saturday asked top rebel commanders to make U.S. personnel and installations a target in the country's civil war.

''The urban commandos of the FMLN request of our general command that both personnel and installations of the American government be considered military objectives by our units,'' said a communique published in the afternoon edition of El Latino newspaper.

FMLN are the Spanish initials of the leftist Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, which has fought successive U.S.-backed Salvadoran governments for the past decade.

The communique followed an incident Thursday in which officers of the Salvadoran National Police providing security to the U.S. Embassy participated in the arrest of five urban commandos caught planting a bomb on a light post not far from the embassy.

''It (the communique) is certainly threatening, if not a direct threat,'' said U.S. Embassy spokesman Jefferson Brown. ''We want to clarify that no U.S. personel were involved in the arrest. It was strictly a National Police operation.''

The communinque referred to the incident as ''blatant intervention of Yankee imperialism.''

The police officers were driving a vehicle provided by the embassy when they saw the bomb being planted and followed the suspects to the nearby National University, where all five were arrested and explosives and automatic weapons were confiscated.

For the past several years, the FMLNs policy has been not to target U.S. personnel.

In 1985, however, guerrillas killed four U.S. marines who were dining at a resturant in San Salvadors posh Zona Rosa district. Two U.S. businessmen and seven other people were also killed in the attack.

(SEPT. 23) UPI - Around the world... around the clock... news from United Press International:

South African President de Klerk says he is NOT coming to the United States ''hat in hand.'' Before leaving his country for Washington... de Klerk said he is NOT travelling with the ''particular objective'' of getting U-S sanctions lifted. He said ''that will take care of itself'' as South Africa proves it is ready to share power with blacks.

The trail of Westerners leaving Iraq appears to have ended. The last plane expected to carry Westerners out of Baghdad landed in London Saturday. Some 50 Americans were among those on board. In another development... two more French cargo ships prepared to leave a Mediterranean port with troops and military equipment to join the mulitnational force in the Persian Gulf.

Analysts say the upward drive in oil prices caused by the Persian Gulf confrontation has undermined the already weak economies of southern Africa. Worse yet... the crisis threatens to further depress poverty- stricken nations in east and central Africa. Ironically... many African countries are so poor and consume so little petroleum that they are largely immune to the direct effects of the price hikes.

Officials have charged a suspect with murder in the slayings of two hikers on the Appalachian Trail. Authorities say the man was arrested Friday in Harpers Ferry, West Virginia. He is believed to have been wearing the boots and backpack of one of his victims. The group which oversees the Appalachian Trail had urged hikers to bypass the section of the trail in Pennsylvania.

The final day of summer saw record high temperatures in the 90s through the South and Pacific Northwest. Record highs were set in 14 cities in Florida, South Carolina, Louisiana, Oregon and Washington state. A high of 92 in Seattle marked only the 10th time in the last 45 years that the temperature has reached 90 degrees in September.

BEIJING (SEPT. 23) UPI - Pakistani President Ghulam Ishaq Khan dismissed Sunday the possibility of war with India over Kashmir, and denied reports that Pakistan was inciting religious unrest in western China.

Khan said recent border clashes between India and Pakistan over the long-disputed Kashmir region were ''no cause for concern'' and would not trigger an all-out war. The latest clashes were reported Friday.

''War is an anathema in today's context. We never discussed any possibility of going to war with India,'' Khan told reporters on the last day of an official four-day visit to Beijing.

Khan, who was guest of honor at Saturday's opening ceremony for the 11th Asian Games, met during his visit with Chinese President Yang Shangkun, Premier Li Peng and Communist Party head Jiang Zemin.

New Delhi and Islamabad have locked horns over the divided northern Kashmir region. Both India and Pakistan lay claim to parts of the region and have gone to war three times over the issue.

Pakistan supports the recent nationalistic uprising in Kashmir and has demanded that India withdraw troops deployed along the two nations' disputed border.

Khan emphatically denied that Pakistani nationals had contributed to a surge of unrest among the minority Moslem population of China's remote western Xinjiang region.

The vast Xinjiang area borders Kashmir, Afghanistan and Central Asia and has been the scene of violent clashes between ethnic Moslems and the dominant Han Chinese, the most recent last April.

Chinese authorities recently arrested two Pakistanis in Xinjiang on charges they tried to spread unrest in the region, according to Western press reports.

Khan did not directly address the reports but said he had assured the Chinese leadership that the Islamic nation of Pakistan was not involved in the Xinjiang disturbances.

China is known to be concerned over a rise of nationalism and Islamic fundamentalism in Central Asia and areas bordering Xinjiang.

''It should not be the perception of anyone that Pakistan is trying to encourage this,'' Khan said. ''If the implication is that Pakistan or anyone outside (China) is involved in this move I think it is totally uncorrect.''

On Iraq's conquest of Kuwait, Khan said China and Pakistan are ''in total accord'' in their condemnation of the Aug. 2 invasion and in demanding an unconditional withdrawal of Iraqi troops from its tiny neighbor.

But Khan declined to discuss any possible differences of opinion between Beijing and Islamabad over the use of military force to back up an international embargo against Iraq.

Pakistan has sent troops to Saudi Arabia to protect Moslem shrines against Iraqi attacks, but China has repeatedly objected to the use of force to resolve the gulf conflict.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (SEPT. 23) UPI - Launch of a powerful Air Force Titan 4 rocket carrying a secret military satellite was canceled early Sunday for unknown reasons with the clandestine countdown on hold at the T- minus five-minute mark, sources said.

Possibly carrying a satellite to monitor activities in the Persian Gulf, the Titan 4 was thought to have been scheduled for liftoff from the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station around 12:48 a.m. EDT, according to government radio traffic monitored by reporters near the launch complex.

But a one-hour ''hold'' in the countdown was extended more than an hour and then a second hold began at 1:55 a.m. with the countdown at the T-minus five-minute mark. Finally, at 3:30 a.m., the flight was called off for the day sources said.

But as usual with such military missions, all details about the flight were classified and Air Force officials would neither confirm nor deny reports about an impending launch and it was not known when another attempt might be made.

The rocket's payload is classified as well, but it may be a $180 million Defense Support Program early warning spacecraft built by TRW of Redondo Beach Calif., capable of detecting rocket launches using a large infrared telescope.

Such a satellite could prove useful in the Persian Gulf crisis, giving the military more warning of any Iraqi missile attacks on U.S. troops or those of its allies.

At the nearby Kennedy Space Center, just a few miles from the Titan's launch pad at the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station, engineers worked through the weekend readying the shuttle Discovery for blastoff next month to carry a European-built solar probe into space.

The shuttle's original launch date was Oct. 5, but problems getting the Titan off the pad will delay critical tests, possibly pushing Discovery's launch back a few days to around Oct. 7 or 8.

The goal of the mission, only the fourth shuttle flight this year because of fuel leaks that grounded the shuttles Atlantis and Columbia, is to launch the Ulysses probe on an unprecedented five-year, $750 million voyage over the poles of the sun.

To reach such an orbit, Ulysses, built by the European Space Agency, first must be fired away from the sun to Jupiter, so it can use that planet's titanic gravity for a boost down, out of the plane of the solar system and back toward the sun.

Ulysses is equipped with a single radioisotope thermoelectric generator, or ''RTG,'' to provide electrical power. The RTG works by converting the heat produced by the decay of radioactive plutonium 238 dioxide into electricity.

Anti-nuclear activists staged a demonstration Saturday at the Kennedy Space Center, protesting the Ulysses launch because of the possibility that dangerous radiation could be released in a launch disaster.

A similar effort last year failed to block the launch of the Galileo Jupiter probe, which was equipped with two RTGs.

NASA has long argued that solar power is not feasible for use at Jupiter's great distance from the sun. Further, agency officials claim, the odds of a radiation release are minimal and the potential science return from the Ulysses mission justifies the risk.

But Daniel Hirsch, president of a watchdog group called the Committee to Bridge the Gap, said the agency had misled the public on the possibility of a radiation release and that internal NASA studies show solar power is, in fact, a reasonable alternative for Ulysses' RTG.

''NASA, you are wrong in not designing these missions for solar. I call on you ... to reconsider your reliance on nuclear power, not just for Ulysses but for the next missions that you're intending,'' Hirsch said at a rally attended by about 200 protesters.

''Give the numbers honestly. Behave honorably. Don't cut corners and begin to represent that which this country should represent, where concern for human lives and the world environment are No. 1.''

If Ulysses was equipped with a solar power system, it likely would require the use of a Titan 4, greatly boosting the cost of the mission and delaying it for several years.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (SEPT. 23) UPI - Unidentified gunmen ambushed and killed four prisoners while they were being transferred to a prison in Christian east Beirut, police said Sunday.

Police said the gunmen showered a police vehicle with automatic rifle bullets late Saturday while moving four prisoners to a jail in the village of Roumieh in the Christian part of the capital controlled by defiant Army General Michel Aoun.

The prisoners were instantly killed, police said. Security sources said the four were arrested on charges of bombing Army positions in Aoun's areas.

The general's 15,000-strong Army and the Lebanese Forces militia of Samir Geagea have been engaged in fierce battles for the control of the Christian enclave since Jan. 31.

The militia-run ''Voice of Free Lebanon'' radio station accused Aoun's intelligence service of ''planning the attack.''

(SEPT. 23) UPI - Now is not the time for the Toronto Blue Jays to be playing flat against such spoilers as the Cleveland Indians.

Candy Maldonado and Chris James each slugged home runs and Sandy Alomar Jr. doubled in two runs Saturday to lead Cleveland to a 5-2 victory and its second straight win over the Toronto Blue Jays.

For the second day in a row, Toronto's lack of offense hurt them as they failed to gain ground on the Boston Red Sox. Coupled with Boston's loss to New York, both teams remained in a flat-footed tie for first in the American League East.

''Sometimes the worst thing for you at this particular time is to have a day off, it slows you down,'' Kelly Gruber said.

Toronto had a six-game winning streak before their day off on Thursday. Now they have a two-game losing streak to a team that hasn't seen post-season play since 1954 yet is playing like a playoff caliber team.

Cleveland has won six straight and 12 of its past 16 games and could decide who finishes in first.

After finishing up the three-game set on Sunday, the Indians head to Fenway Park for a pair of games with the Red Sox.

Unlike Toronto, Cleveland, which is 9 1-2 games out of first, is already out of the race and does not have the burden of looking over its shoulders.

''There's no pressure on us. We played relaxed,'' said Ken Shaw, who boosted his record to 3-4 in his first major-league appearance since Aug. 18.

''Today I gave up 12 hits (over 6 2-3 innings). You'd expect them to get more runs, but the defense really came through.''

The Cleveland defense backed Shaw up with three double plays and Toronto stranded nine runners. Doug Jones pitched the ninth for his 40th save.

Todd Stottlemyre, 13-16 took the loss. After allowing home runs by Maldonado and James, Stottlemyre was taken out in the sixth inning with Toronto trailing 5-1. The sellout crowd of 49,883 - the 59th consecutive full house at the SkyDome - booed the right-hander.

''If I'd been up there (in the stands) I'd have been booing, too,'' Stottlemyre said. ''Today I didn't make quality pitches, big pitches when I needed them. I was booing me, too.''

Meanwhile, Boston got some bad news when it was announced ace Roger Clemens would not pitch Sunday. Clemens, who has been sidelined for three weeks with tendinitis in his right shoulder, was scheduled to make his return against the Yankees. But Boston Manager Joe Morgan said Clemens was still suffering pain in the shoulder and would be scratched.

''This is tough enough now with us not hitting,'' Boston Manager Joe Morgan said. ''But it is the right decision.''

At Oakland, Terry Steinbach drove in two runs to back Scott Sanderson's career-high 17th victory. Sanderson, 17-10, allowed three hits over 6 2-3 innings for the victory. Rick Honeycutt finished to earn his seventh save. Steve Searcy, fell to 2-6.

Yankees 5, Red Sox 2

At New York, Steve Sax' two-run triple snapped an eighth inning tie to lift New York past a slumping Boston. The Red Sox have lost 9 of their last 12. Eric Plunk, 6-3, earned the victory. Dave Righetti pitched the ninth for his 33rd save. Jeff Gray, 2-4, took the loss.

Orioles 3, Brewers 2

At Baltimore, Mike Devereaux smacked a three-run home run to power Baltimore. Devereaux, lined his ninth home run off the left field foul pole in the fourth inning to give Dave Johnson, 12-8, his first win since Aug. 2. Kevin Brown, 0-1, got the loss. Kevin Hickey worked the ninth for his first save.

Twins 2, Rangers 0

At Minneapolis, Three Minnesota pitchers combined to hurl a three-hit shutout to lead Minnesota. Allan Anderson went five innings, allowing only two hits. Larry Casian, 1-1, yielded one hit over two innings and Richard Garces hurled two hittless innings for his first major league save. Scott Chiamparino fell to 0-2.

White Sox 14, Mariners 5

At Seattle, Carlton Fisk drove in four runs and Ozzie Guillen three to pace Chicago. Steve Rosenberg, 1-0, allowed two hits, no runs and striking out one. Don Pall pitched three innings for his second save. Brent Knackert, 1-1, went 1 2-3 innings.

(SEPT. 23) UPI - Adrenalin proved a friend to the Mets and a foe to the Pirates.

New York broke out of a five-game slump with a six-run fifth inning Saturday night to post an 11-5 trouncing of the Chicago Cubs.

But energy, which lifted the Mets, wreaked havoc for Pittsburgh pitcher Stan Belinda, who wild-pitched one run home and walked in another in the eighth inning to give the St. Louis Cardinals a 3-2 victory.

''The ball was running and the adrenalin was flowing,'' said Belinda. ''I didn't want to back off. I was giving them my best pitches. I just couldn't find the strike zone.''

New York gained a game in the NL East race and trail first-place Pittsburgh by 2 1-2 games.

In Chicago, the big fifth inning made a winner of Ron Darling, 6-9, who lasted 6 1-3 innings. Jose Nunez, 3-7, was tagged for eight runs in 4 2-3 innings.

''We were playing so poorly, we should pick up some confidence just scoring some runs today,'' Darling said.

The Mets tied the score 2-2 in the second on Darryl Boston's two-run homer, his 10th of the year. Darryl Strawberry contributed a two-run homer in the fifth inning effort, his 36th of the season. His 106 RBI set a career and team record surpassing the 105 achieved by Gary Carter in 1986 and Rusty Staub in 1975.

''We needed to put something together,'' Boston said. ''We haven't been swinging the bat very well, and we haven't been scoring many runs. Hopefully, this will get us some life back. This road trip is important. We can't afford to lose any more ground.''

The only bright note for Chicago was provided by Andre Dawson, who with a stolen base joined Hall of Famer Willie Mays as the only major leaguers to have at least 2,000 career hits, 300 homers and 300 stolen bases.

Belinda made references to former Yankee great Goose Gossage and Orioles reliever Gregg Olson in explaining his lack of control that blew a 2-1 Pirate lead.

''I'm not a location guy,'' Belinda said. ''It's like Goose Gossage, you just rear back and throw. But sometimes you just can't get it over the plate. If you look around both leagues, all the good young relievers struggle. We're not all Gregg Olsons. He just has the tremendous ability to throw two pitches consistently.''

--- AROUND THE NL ---

In other NL games, Philadelphia edged Montreal 3-2, Atlanta cut down Houston 3-1, Cincinnati stopped San Diego 4 in the first game of a double-header and overpowered the Padres 9-5 in the second, and Los Angeles dropped San Francisco 6-3.

At Philadelphia, Lenny Dykstra scored one run and knocked in another to lead the Phillies, the first time since Aug. 24 the Expos dropped two games in a row and left Montreal 5 1-2 games behind first-place Pittsburgh in the East. Tommy Greene, 2-2, gave up four hits and one earned run in six innings. Roger McDowell pitched the ninth for his 20th save. Scott Anderson, 0-1, took the loss.

Braves 3, Astros 1

At Atlanta, Ron Gant drove in two runs and Charlie Leibrandt pitched a six-hitter to lift the Braves. Leibrandt, 9-10, struck out five and walked one in earning his fifth complete game. Danny Darwin fell to 11-4.

Reds 6, Padres 4, 1st game

In the first game, Barry Larkin drove in three runs, including the go-ahead run in the seventh to carry Cincinnati. Rob Dibble, 8-3, pitched two hitless innings and Randy Myers pitched the final two innings for his 30th save. Harris, 8-8, took the loss.

Dodgers 6, Giants 3

At Los Angeles, Kirk Gibson doubled home the first run and Juan Samuel singled in two more to fuel a five-run Dodgers outburst in the sixth inning. Dennis Cook, 9-3, gave up just one run, Matt Williams' 31st homer. Mike LaCoss, 6-4, who had the Dodgers shut out on three singles for the first five innings, took the loss.

HARRISBURG, PA (SEPT. 23) UPI - A suspect in the double murder on the Appalachian Trail has been arrested in West Virginia, officials said Saturday.

A man identified as David Casey Horn, 38, of Loris, S.C., was arrested Friday in Harpers Ferry, W.Va., although his identity could not be immediately confirmed, Pennsylvania state police said.

The man matched the description of a suspect wanted by Pennsylvania authorities in the murders of Geoffrey Hood, 26, of Signal Mountain, Tenn., and Molly LaRue, also 26, of Shaker Heights, Ohio, officials said.

Horn was spotted by a hiker, who notified police, officials said. Horn is believed to be wearing the boots and back pack of one of his victims.

Hood died of multiple shot gun wounds and LaRue was stabbed to death. The couple, who worked as social workers, planned to get married.

The suspect is being held in county jail in Charlestown, W.Va., on charges of murder. Extradition proceedings could begin Monday.

The bodies of Hood and LaRue were found on Sept. 13 in a trailside shelter. The deaths prompted officials to issue warnings on the 230-mile length of the Appalachian Trail in Pennsylvania.

In addition, the Appalachian Trail Conference, which oversees the 2, 140-mile trail which stretches from Maine to Georgia, urged hikers to bypass the entire section of the trail in Pennsylvania.

Police Thursday released a composite drawing of a rough-looking man believed to be in his 20s who was considered a suspect in the crime.

HONG KONG (SEPT. 23) UPI - Mandatory repatriaton of Vietnamese boat people who fail to qualify as genuine refugees is expected to begin before the end of 1990, the Hong Kong governor, Sir David Wilson, said Sunday.

The governor's comments followed the announcement Saturday of agreement between Britain, Hong Kong, Vietnam and the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees for the return of boat people found to be economic migrants rather than genuine refugees.

About 55,000 Vietnamese currently are held in crowded camps in Hong Kong. The great majority have been found to be economic migrants without genuine fear of persecution of arrest in Vietnam and are not eligible for resettlement overseas.

''The objective is to return to Vietnam all those who are found not to be refugees,'' Wilson told reporters. ''It must be the objective. You cannot have people who are non-refugees spending year after year in camps. That is simply not right.''

Asked about the timing for involuntary repatriation of boat people, Wilson said no date had been fixed but officials hope to start as soon as possible.

''I certainly hope it wil go ahead before the end of the year,'' he said. ''We do need to get on with this whole business as quickly as we possibly can.''

Britain and Hong Kong were subject to widespread international criticism when 51 Vietnamese categorized as non-refugees were forcibly sent home in December 1989. The exercise has not been repeated and authorities have purposefuly avoided using the term ''forced repatration.''

More than 3,000 Vietnamese have returned to their homeland Hong Kong on voluntary repatriation flights supervised by the UNHCR in the past 18 months.

''The UNHCR are very closely involved in this process ... '' Wilson said, ''moving from straightforward voluntary repatriation to arrangments for returning to Vietnam people who haven't actively volunteered.''

Agreement on involuntary repatriation followed two days of talks in Hanoi in which Vietnam agreed to accept back boat people ''who, while not volunteering to return, are nevertheless not opposed to going back,'' a joint statement said.

''The important point in this is that it is moving forward the whole process of returning people who are not refugees. That is the key point, '' Wilson said.

(SEPT. 23) UPI - Saudi Arabia said Sunday it expelled dozens of Jordanian, Iraqi and Yemeni diplomats because they were engaging in unspecified activities that undermined the kingdom's security.

Saudi authorities issued a statement saying the 70 diplomats and embassy employees ordered from the kingdom Saturday had violated the ''code of conduct and rules of diplomatic service,'' but did not elaborate.

In Tehran, Iranian President Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani said at a banquet for Syrian President Hafez Assad that Iran is steadfast in its opposition to the U.S.-led multinational military force in the Gulf, calling the deployment to counter Iraqi aggression an ''arrogant scheme, '' according to a report Sunday by the Iranian news agency IRNA.

Diplomats said the expulsions Saturday were part of an increasingly assertive Saudi policy against Iraq and its supporters and underscored the deep rift the Gulf crisis has caused in the Arab world.

Relations between the kingdom and Jordan and Yemen have been strained because the two countries have not condemned Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, although both have called for the withdrawal of Iraqi troops.

The expulsion of the diplomats came two days after Saudi Arabia cut off the 35,000 barrel a day flow of Saudi oil to Jordan.

''The Saudi decision is an attempt to pressure King Hussein to adopt a clear stand, either with Iraq or against,'' a well-connected Arab diplomat said.

Hussein said he had not heard anything about the expulsions, adding, ''I doubt whether we have 20 diplomats in Saudi Arabia in the first place.''

Sources in Saudi Arabia predicted Riyadh would increase its pressure tactics and was likely to cut off all aid to Jordan and Yemen, which have received considerable financing from the oil-rich nation.

The official Iraqi News Agency, INA, said Iraq's foreign ministry announced Saturday it was going to shut down the military attache offices of France, Germany, Spain, the United States, the Netherlands, Greece, Britain and Italy along with the Arab nations of Saudi Arabia and Egypt.

It said Iraq would also ''limit the movement'' of diplomats within the limits of the city of Baghdad or within no more than 19 miles from the city center.

All of the nations involved in the order have supported the U.S.-led military force deployed in the Gulf, and several of the European countries have expelled Iraqi military attaches.

Syrian president Assad arrived in Tehran Saturday in what diplomats said was an effort to convince Iran to align itself behind Western efforts in the Gulf against Iraq, its former enemy in the bitter 1980-88 Gulf war.

Tehran and Damascus have had close ties, but the Gulf crisis has created numerous shifts in alliances, and Iran indicated Saturday it may not be ready to side with its longtime friend against its longtime foe.

IRNA, said in a dispatch monitored in Cairo that the ''hostility between Iran and Iraq (was) the main reason for the alliance between Tehran and Damascus.

''However, under the status quo and in light of the future prospects in the region, Iran would take a more independent attitude toward its old ally.''

Iran has condemned Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, but has been more critical of the U.S.-led multinational military force deployed to the gulf to counter further Iraqi aggression. Syria not only supports the force, but has sent crack soldiers to serve in it.

Regional diplomats said they are concerned about reports Iraq has offered Iran oil in return for shipments of medicine and food, counter to the U.N.-imposed embargo against Iraq. Tehran has indicated it may ship the medicine and food to Iraq, but not in return for oil.

MANILA (SEPT. 23) UPI - Bombs exploded Sunday in two luxurious hotels in the capital's financial district, wounding eight people, as police braced for a strike by mutinous soldiers expected to take advantage of unrest prompted by increases in petroleum prices.

The blasts took place in rooms at the Hotel Nikko Manila Garden and the Mandarin Oriental Hotel, police Col. Remy Macaspac said. Both rooms were registered to Manuel Castillo, apparently an assumed name, he said.

Castillo first checked in at the Hotel Nikko Manila Garden and a blast went off later at 2:55 p.m. at his assigned room, 947, causing considerable damage.

Hotel spokeswoman Nora Saba said the bomb apparently was planted in the bathtub. She said shards of window glass fell on the swimming pool area below, causing minor injuries to eight people, including four children.

Macaspac said an hour later another blast rocked Room 402 in the Mandarin Oriental Hotel, also registered moments earlier under Castillo's name. No injuries were reported but the room was wrecked, hotel spokeswoman Jessica Santos said.

Macaspac said the bombs were C-4 high explosives of the type used by the military and were the 24th and 25th bombings in the capital since Aug. 13.

The previous incidents wounded nine people and were blamed on rebel soldiers who have tried six times to oust President Corazon Aquino.

''This is a cowardly act meant to destabilize the government,'' said Tourism Secretary Peter Garrucho, who inspected the two hotels following the bombings. ''The idea is to try to frighten particularly some of our foreign guests,'' Garrucho said.

The bombings took place on the eve of a planned general strike in the capital called by leftist trade unions and transport drivers to protest a 29 percent increase in the price of petroleum products, generally attributed to the Persian Gulf crisis.

Police and troops were placed on alert. Coup attempts followed protests over petroleum price increases in August 1988 and December 1989.

Earlier Sunday, a security guard chased two men who pitched a Molotov cocktail at a building in the Makati financial district housing the Iranian and Belgian embassies. No one was hurt.

Jejomar Binay, mayor of the financial district, blamed the bombings on rebel soldiers. ''This shows they dont have the capability to overthrow this government so they are resorting to bombings,'' he said.

MANILA (SEPT. 23) UPI - President Corazon Aquino said Sunday she was pleased with the outcome last week's talks on U.S. basing rights and willing to consider the U.S. proposal for phasing down the Subic Bay Naval Base.

In her taped radio talk show, Aquino said she was told the United States was keeping an ''open mind'' to the Philippine call for the immediate turnover of Clark Air Base and four smaller facilities when the leases expire Sept. 16, 1991.

She said during the second round of talks that closed Friday, the Philippine panel served notice Manila would take over Clark, the recreation facility at Camp John Hay, Wallace Air Station, Camp O'Donnel and San Miguel Naval Communication Station.

Aquino said the five facilities ''should revert to the Philippines by Sept. 17 1991, as mandated by the constitution.''

The U.S. panel proposed the phasing down of Subic and the commercialization of some aspects of its operations, Aquino said.

''The Philippine government shall consider this proposal carefully and shall make its response at the proper time,'' Aquino said.

The two sides will meet again in a month while technical level talks continue, officials said.

U.S. spokesman Stanley Schrager has said there have been no agreements and that last week's talks were characterized by ''proposals and counter-proposals '' he said.

''I am pleased with the progress that has been made so far at these talks,'' Aquino said. ''And I feel confident that our two countries shall arrive at an understanding that will be mutually acceptable and mutually beneficial.

''I welcome the acknowledgement of the United States, a long time ally and friend, that it supports our aspirations and is willing to work with us to advance them,'' Aquino said.

The United States provides Manila with $481 million in aid annually for use of the facilities where 40,000 troops, military employees and dependents are assigned.

Clark, home of the 13th Air Force, and Subic, a repair and logistics center for the 7th Fleet, are the oldest and largest overseas U.S. bases. Clark is manned by 9,200 troops, Subic has 6,200 servicemen.

Any new arrangement for U.S. use of the facilities requires approval by the Philippine Senate, where anti-bases sentiment is strong. The bases are regarded as a vestige of U.S. colonial rule and an infringement on Philippine sovereignty.

Philippine officials said they would turn the bases into maritime and aviation complexes and industrial parks.

But senators who favor U.S. retention of the bases say the Philippines, which is strapped with a $26 billion foreign debt, does not have the resources to implement alternative plans for the facilities.

Aquino has stressed she wants an ''orderly withdrawal'' of U.S. troops but did not specify a time frame.

Special U.S. negotiator Richard Armitage said the United States was prepared to reduce its presence in the Philippines and hinted this would take 10 years.

NEW DELHI (SEPT. 23) UPI - Prime Minister V.P. Singh defended Sunday a job quota program that has violently divided the country along caste lines, saying he is committed to the ''aspirations of the people'' even if his National Front government collapses because of it.

''We are in office today because we have struggled for certain causes,'' the prime minister told workers of his Janata Dal Party in an emotional address in the southeastern city of Madras.

''We are committed to fulfill certain aspirations of the people with the support of friendly parties. It is our duty to fulfill them and not to stick to the office. Government is not our goal,'' the Press Trust of India quoted Singh as saying.

Singh's remarks came as unrest simmered across northern India in reaction to the government's decision to reserve 27 percent of all federal jobs for the so-called backward classes.

Authorities clamped a two-day curfew Sunday on the city of Kurukshetra in Haryana state just north of New Delhi after a teenager killed himself by eating poison Saturday to protest the quota scheme, triggering violent protests.

The threat of suicide protests by high-caste students has increased dramatically since last week when two university students in New Delhi poured fuel on their bodies and set themselves afire to protest the quota system.

Police in the western state of Rajasthan intervened in a demonstration Saturday night to prevent 25 protesters from setting themselves on fire, and there have been threats of mass self-immolation elsewhere in the country.

High-caste youths oppose the job plan because it will limit their ability to enter government service. They also claim it will enshrine the caste system in law, increase government inefficiency and fail to improve the social condition of the underprivileged.

Proponents say job resevation will give lower-caste citizens, who represent about 54 percent of India's 830 million people, a better chance at government employment, traditionally the domain of the upper castes.

The prime minister has come under sharp attack for deciding to implement the program, with opposition leader and former Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi charging Saturday that the move was a ''hasty'' and ''politically motivated'' attempt to broaden his support.

The job reservation program, along with several other political issues, appears to be driving a wedge between Singh and the Hindu- chauvinist Bharatiya Janata Party, which has urged the government to open a dialogue with students on the quota scheme.

Singh's minority National Front administration is able to govern because of parliamentary support from the BJP, which is not a member of the government coalition. Withdrawal of BJP support could cause the government to fall.

Singh defended the job reservation plan Sunday, saying, ''There has been discrimination for ages and that has now been corrected.'' And he told the party workers, ''The government may go, but our struggle cannot stop.''

The prime minister pledged Saturday to open a dialogue with protesting students, telling a news conference in Madras ''we are very concerned ... and visibly hurt'' by the recent suicide and self- immolation attempts.

''If they are apprehensive about it, we will have a dialogue and see what best can be done about it,'' the Hindu newspaper quoted him as saying.

''These young boys are ours,'' he said. ''We should try to mollify their feelings.''

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (SEPT. 23) UPI - A young British soldier was killed early Sunday in front of his girlfriend near Lurgan, 25 miles west of Belfast, the Royal Ulster Constabulary said.

The soldier and his teenage girlfriend were sitting in his car at a scenic area when four masked gunmen struck at 1:30 a.m., authorities said.

The solider, a part-time member of the Ulster Defense Regiment, died instantly but the girlfriend was not hurt, authorities said.

The victim's identity was withheld until relatives were notified. He was the seventh member of the UDR to be killed ths year.

Police said the gunmen earlier hijacked a red Renault taxi in Lurgan, 3 miles away, before driving to the spot at Oxford Island, a bird sanctuary on the shore of Lough Neagh.

No organization immediately claimed responsibilty for the killing, although police said it was probably carried out by the Irish Republican Army.

ATHENS, Greece (SEPT. 23) UPI - Syrian President Hafez Assad ''made it clear'' he wants foreign forces to leave the region after the Persian Gulf crisis ends, the official Islamic Republic News Agency said Sunday.

Assad, who began a three-day visit to Iran Saturday, was speaking at a banquet in Tehran. He earlier held a first round of talks with Iranian President Akbar Hashemi-Rafsanjani.

An IRNA dispatch monitored in Athens said Assad ''made it clear that his country would not tolerate the presence of foreign forces in the region after the end of the current crisis'' caused by the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

Assad, a long-time foe of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, also ''urged Iraq to quit Kuwait,'' IRNA said.

Syria has sent 4,000 troops to Saudi Arabia and reportedly plans to send more as part of an Arab League force.

Tehran radio said Assad agreed with the Iranian view that regional disputes should be resolved within the region.

The Syrian chief, accompanied by a high-ranking delegation, met with Rafsanjani hours after his arrival.

The two heads of state held private discussions before beginning formal talks in the presence of other officials.

Assad's visit coincided with the 10th anniversary of the Iraqi invasion of Iran on Sept. 22, 1980.

Syria was Iran's staunchest ally during the gulf war but diplomats said Damascus is concerned about the growing detente between Tehran and Baghdad following Saddam's capitulation last month to Iran's war-time demands.

Tehran radio said Assad laid a wreath at the tomb of Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini at Behesht Zahra, some 10 miles south of Tehran. He made a pilgrimage Sunday to the shrine of Imam Reza, a Shiite saint, in Mashad.

FERRARA, Italy (SEPT. 23) UPI - Pope John Paul II made a fervent appeal Sunday against Mafia violence, two days after the ambush-murder of a Sicilian magistrate by an underworld hit squad.

''Enough innocent bloodshed, enough bloodshed,'' John Paul told a crowd of 10,000 during a two-day visit to Ferrara, northeast Italy. ''Enough mourning and suffering.''

The papal plea came 48 hours after the murder of Magistrate Rosario Livatino, killed in Agrigento, Sicily, by what police believe may have been six gunmen as he drove to work on a lonely highway.

John Paul said that solving the murder, which has shaken the political world in Rome and brought calls for a serious, well-funded offensive against organized crime, requires ''unifying all of the forces of the nation.''

''I cannot do less than deplore the killing of a magistrate, a grave episode of criminality which unfortunately must be added to many other acts of violence committed recently on the beloved soil of Italy,'' the pope said.

''To all all Italians, I ask for determination and courage to stem the growing menace from the culture of death,'' he said.

''All of the forces in the country unite to proclaim in a loud voice the will to live in serenity and to build a civilization which respects man and his personal dignity,'' he said.

Sicily and southern Italy have been plagued in recent weeks by scores of Mafia killings, most of them the settling of accounts for control of lucrative underworld activities.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 23) UPI - South African President Frederik W. de Klerk arrived Sunday for high level talks, quoting civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. and declaring that South Africa is on ''a great journey toward full democracy.''

De Klerk, the first South African leader to visit the United States since 1945 made the remarks upon arrival at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., at 8:15 a.m. EDT. Demonstrators protesting South Africa's racial policies were expected to turn out during his two-day visit to Washington.

De Klerk, recalling the words of King, said, ''Peace and freedom are the goals of all men. South Africa has embarked on a great journey. It is a journey for full democracy at home and abroad full participation in the family of nations.''

De Klerk smiled as he stepped from a helicopter on the grounds of the Washington Monument and was greeted by Secretary of State James Baker.

Posing briefly for photographers, de Klerk was asked what he was seeking from his visit. ''Friendship,'' he replied.

Asked whether he was seeking solutions to his nation's problems of apartheid and political divisions, he said, ''I'm going to be giving information about the solutions we're making.''

As for whether he would make a bid for a lifting of the U.S. economic sanctions against South Africa to prod that country to end its white minority rule, he replied: ''I'm didn't come here with a shopping list.''

De Klerk and Baker rode together to the nearby Blair House, the presdient's guest house across the street from the White House where the South African leader will reside during his stay in the nation's capital.

He planned to attend church services at the National Presbyterian Church and perhaps go sightseeing, making the rounds of the Washington monuments before going to Vice President Dan Quayle's residence for dinner.

De Klerk planned to meet with Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, before going to the White House.

His meeting Monday with Bush has been billed as an ''official visit'' and includes a White House luncheon in his honor.

During his trip to Capitol Hill, de Klerk has meetings scheduled with Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine and Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas. A meetings is also planned with House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash. De Klerk addresses the National Press Club on Tuesday.

De Klerk is the first South African leader to journey to Washington since Gen. Jan Smuts came to the United States in 1945 for the drafting of the United Nations Charter. By inviting de Klerk for an official visit, Bush gave him a vote of confidence that he will transform the racially divided country into a democratic society.

De Klerk has been in office for a year during which promises have been made toward bringing South Africa's black majority into political participation. But de Klerk's efforts have hit a roadblock with an outbreak of tribal violence and allegations of incitement by the white security forces.

De Klerk was invited to visit Washington in February along with South African Congress leader Nelson Mandela after he released Mandela from his 27 years of imprisonment. Mandela came to Washington in June, but de Klerk put off his journey because of the threat of protests.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 23) UPI - Top U.S. Army and Marine officers have drawn up plans for ground assaults against Iraq from as many as four directions, a complex combat operation designed to split Saddam Hussein's forces, it was reported Sunday.

The Washington Post, citing unidentified military sources, said the plans would require American troops to cross the Jordanian desert and Turkish mountains to reach the Iraqi frontier.

The purpose of the multiple assaults would be to prevent the Iraqi president from massing his entire 140,000-man elite Republican Guard against any U.S. invasion force that might be called to attack Iraqi occupation troops in Kuwait, the Post said.

The contingency plans for the multi-front war against Iraq are among the military options being prepared for President Bush in case the U.N. trade embargo against Iraq fails to force the Iraqis from Kuwait and the administration decides to take military action, the newspaper said.

Among the most sensitive facets of the plan is the requirement that the Bush administration secure attack corridors through Turkey and Jordan, which border Iraq on the north and west, to open fronts against the Iraqi army and dilute the combat strength of its ground forces, the Post said.

Opening these fronts would relieve pressure from any landing by U.S. Marines and armored assaults by the Army and multinational combat troops now defending Saudi Arabia.

A strategy for opening multiple fronts against Saddam is also an attempt to exploit the weaknesses of Iraq's military supply system, the newpaper said.

''Their supply system is not geared to mobile operations or to project power '' a military analyst told the Post.

Attacks from four sides would likely overwhelm such a supply system, the newspaper said.

The Post said it could not be learned whether the administration has broached the question of territorial access to either the Turkish or Jordanian governments.

SRINAGAR, India (SEPT. 23) UPI - Moslem rebels fighting for independence from India have banned cigarette smoking in the northern Kashmir Valley - but not for the usual reasons.

The concern is not of public health, cancer, heart disease or the dangers of second-hand smoke, but of India's cigarette industry and how to harm it economically.

The rebel groups - Al Omar Mujahideen, Allah Tigers and Hizb i-Islami - warned cigarette dealers in notices to newspapers to dispose of their stock before the ban takes effect Oct. 20.

It is not the first time Kashmiri rebels have tried to modify the public and private behavior of residents in the predominantly Moslem valley on behalf of their revolution.

Since their 2-year-old secessionist movement gained widespread popular support in mid-January, the various militant groups have banned a wide array of items.

Alcohol was one of the first to go, banned as un-Islamic. Bars in Srinagar, the summer capital of Jammu and Kashmir state, have closed.

Video movies were banned. Militants were concerned about pornograpic content of foreign films and unhappy about the Kashmiri appetite for films produced by India's huge movie industry. Video rental shops closed but films still circulate on the sly.

Militants banned beauty shops as un-Islamic and the hair-dressers closed down, but they overstretched when they ordered all women to wear veils. Only about 20 percent of the women do so.

The bannings continued Sunday. The Hizb ul-Mujahideen, an Islamic fundamentalist group and one of the main secessionist organizations, orderred residents to stop reading two English-language daily newspapers.

''These two papers have all along been propagating policies against the interests of the Kashmiri freedom fighters,'' the group said in a letter published by the Al Safa newspaper. ''We therefore appeal to the people to stop reading these anti-Kashmiri newspapers.''

The two newspapers, The Kashmir Times and The Excelsior, are published in the southern city of Jammu, a largely Hindu area and the state's winter capital.

The Kashmir Times, the state's largest English-language daily, has supported New Delhi editorially but also has been critical of some government moves in the Kashmir Valley and of human rights abuses by security forces.

The Hizb ul-Mujahideen, in its letter to Al Safa, warned that anyone caught with a copy of The Kashmir Times or The Excelsior would be treated as a traitor and punished according to Islamic law.

The organization also complained about the treatment of rebel activities in the columns of Al Safa and said, ''This is our first and last warning to you. You should always carry our statements and press releases. Otherwise we will deal with you sternly.''

UNITED NATIONS (SEPT. 23) UPI - The U.N. General Assembly's 45th session will open Monday with a lengthy agenda overshadowed by the explosive Persian Gulf crisis as its Security Council debates an air embargo of Iraq to go along with the naval blockade.

Presidents Fernando Collor de Mello of Brazil and Francois Mitterrand of France will address the world body, whose 150-item agenda also ranges from South Africa's apartheid policies to cessation of nuclear explosions and the international debt of developing countries.

The occupation of Kuwait by Iraq will be debated in the General Assembly while the Security Council resolutions are being enforced to compel Iraq to withdraw from the small oil-rich emirate.

The General Assembly is a forum attended by all 160 member states of the United Nations but it does not have the political power of the 15- nation Security Council, which is charged with maintaining peace and security in the world and whose decisions are binding.

Mitterrand will make a special trip to New York to address the assembly on the gulf crisis and plans to return to Paris the same day.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze is to speak Tuesday morning.

France has spoken strongly against the Iraqi Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait and has assigned more than 13,000 French troops to the U.S.-led multinational force in the gulf to thwart any Iraqi advance toward oil fields in Saudi Arabia.

Mitterrand has appeared before the General Assembly twice since he gained the presidency in 1981.

Collor and Mitterrand will be followed to the podium by 10 foreign ministers Monday, among them Iranian Ali Akbar Velayati, whose country has called for a holy war against the United States for sending troops to Saudi Arabia.

Some of those officials are expected to present national economic difficulties which have worsened with the loss of export earnings because of the U.N. trade and arms embargo on Iraq.

Brazil exported $342 million worth of goods to Iraq in 1989 and at least six of its ships with goods to Iraq are stranded in the Indian Ocean because of the embargo.

The Security Council plans to adopt an embargo on air traffic against Iraq Tuesday to tighten the sanctions drawn up four days after Iraqi invaded Kuwait in a lightning military operation.

The president of the assembly, Malta's Foreign Minister Guido de Marco, said after his election last week he will give a ''priority of treatment'' for Middle EAst issues.

''The question of Kuwait is bound to be a primary issue for the assembly,'' he said.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (SEPT. 23) UPI - Black leader Nelson Mandela charged Sunday that South Africa Pretoria flexed its military muscle to curb black factional fighting during President Frederik de Klerk's visit to the United States.

The African National Congress leader said forces within the government ''pretend de Klerk has put an end to the violence. That is not true.''

Mandela said the timing of the measures - codenamed ''Iron Fist'' and introduced last weekend - was ''mainly to smooth de Klerk's way'' on his U.S. trip, which began Sunday.

De Klerk said last week police and the army implemented the steps ''to bring an end to the gruesome violence'' that in seven weeks killed up to 750 people in war-torn townships around Johannesburg. After a tense calm returned, he denied ''any other intentions on the government's part.''

De Klerk's U.S. visit was enabled by sweeping racial reforms launched February and he will spend two days in Washington and meet with President Bush Monday. He is the first South African head of state to visit the United States since 1945.

White House sources have indicated De Klerk can expect a sympathetic reception from Bush, who is reportedly convinced the South African is sincere in his expressed aim of ending 42 years of white minority rule and the country's protracted racial conflict.

But Mandela speculated Sunday the fighting between supporters of the exclusively Zulu Inkatha movement and the mixed tribal base of the ANC that flared around Johannesburg Aug. 5 was not over ''despite the apparent calm'' that followed Iron Fist.

Mandela was speaking at the opening of an ANC branch in KwaThema, east of Johannesburg, and repeated the movement's criticism of the crackdown.

''We hope the government will come to its senses to solve the violence not through Iron Fist, but by putting their arms away,'' he said.

The ANC Friday condemned the most controversial of the measures - the 9 p.m. until 4 a.m. curfews starting Tuesday in five of the worst-hit townships. More than 2,000 people marched through the nation's largest black city of Soweto, south of Johannesburg, Saturday to gather support for a campaign to defy curfew rules.

Other steps to quell the savage, tribal-style battles include roadblocks, police patrolling with machineguns and cordoning off the flashpoint Zulu migrant-worker hostels with barbed wire.

DALLAS (SEPT. 23) UPI - A man whose car had broken down was shot and killed when he refused to pay a drunken man 25 cents for the use of a telephone, authorities said.

Melvin Miller, 24, of Dallas was shot once in the chest late Friday by James Cooks, 61, during a dispute that arose after Miller used Cook's phone to call for assistance, police said.

Cook, who was described by police as extremely intoxicated, was charged in Miller's death and jailed without bail at Lew Sterrett Justice Center.

Homicide detective W.L. Carmack said the two men did not know each other.Miller and a friend, Calvin Thomas, 24, walked to Cook's house when their 1978 Pontiac broke down about 10:30 p.m. Friday.

When they asked to use Cook's phone, he allegedly told them he wanted 25 cents for each call. Carmack said the men made a call, but would not give Cook the money.

Cook then took Miller's car keys and told him he would not give them back until he was paid. Police said that, after Miller and Thomas walked outside, Miller returned to retrieve the keys.

Thomas told police he heard a gunshot a moment later.

Miller was taken to Methodist Medical Center, where he was pronounced dead at 8:36 a.m. Saturday.

One of Cook's neighbors, who asked not to be identified, said Cook had lived in the area for years and had never harmed anyone before. But she said Cook often sat outside his house and sometimes made unfriendly comments to passersby.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 23) UPI - Police and FBI agents searched Sunday for a woman who may have stashed pipe bombs and automatic weapons in an apartment a little more than a mile from the United Nations, where more than 60 heads of state are to gather Saturday.

Reports said the woman spoke with an Irish or English accent, giving rise to suspicions that she may have been linked to an Irish terrorist organization. British Prime Minister Magaret Thatcher is expected to attend the U.N.-sponsored summit on the world's children Saturday and Sunday.

The explosives were discovered Friday in two steamer trunks left by an evicted subtenant, whose name has not been released, in a hallway of a Manhattan apartment house. The street was closed off and nearby apartments evacuated while a bomb squad opened the trunks.

According to police spokeswoman Tina Mohrmann, the squad removed seven pipe bombs, 20 automatic weapons, two shotguns, 17 silencers, three walkie-talkies, three large bags of ammunition, a bulletproof vest, and four electronic devices.

Police Sunday were disposing of the explosives at a Bronx detonation range, said Sgt. Nick Vreeland, another police spokesman.

A tenant in the building, identified by police as Frances Masson, said she had sublet her apartment for several months to an attractive dark-haired woman in her early 20s but had evicted her when she failed to pay the rent.

Masson said that, when she went to the apartment, she found the trunks in the hall with a note saying they would be picked up later.

An FBI spokesman refused comment on the investigation Sunday.

TYRE, Lebanon (SEPT. 23) UPI - A ranking Shiite cleric Sunday said Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite would be set free very soon as part of Iran's efforts to improve its image in the world.

''The British hostage would be released very soon,'' Allamah Seyyed Ali Al Amin said during a rally that was held in the village of Bedyas near the port city of Tyre, 46 miles south of Beirut.

The gathering was arranged by the pro-Syrian Shiite Amal militia in homage to three senior aides to Amal chief Nabih Berri who were killed two years ago.

Daoud Daoud, Hassan Sbeiteh and Mahmoud Al Fakih were assassinated near Beirut by gunmen believed affiliated with Amal's Shiite rival, the Iranian-backed Hezbollah group.

Al Amin, who has the power to issue religious decrees to members of the country's estimated 1.5 million Shiites, did not specify whether his speculation was based on information or intuition.

There have been a series of reports in the country indicating that Waite or two other British captives, John McCarthy and Jack Mann, could be freed in the near future.

The expected release was seen as a result of conciliatory gestures by Britain to Tehran over author Salman Rushdie's controversial novel ''the Satanic Verses,'' deemed blasphemous by the late Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Khomeini, Iran's former spiritual leader, ordered the execution of Rushdie Feb. 14, 1989.

Britain has said revoking the threat against Rushdie was a precondition to resume Iranian-British ties, but Tehran has welcomed recent gestures by London reiterating its respect for Islam.

''Mr. Terry Waite was a faithful man who came to Beirut on a humanitarian mission,'' Al Amin said in his speech to the rally's crowd, adding ''the Islamic shariaa (law) prohibits the abduction of a of messenger or a mediator.''

Al Amin confirmed that Iran has been involved in hostage-taking, saying: ''Iran has sought to improve its image in the world after its embroilment in the kidnapping of citizens for political purposes and certain transactions that have become well known in the world.''

The remarks by Al Amin were one of the strongest attacks by Shiite figures against Iran over the Western hostages' plight.

There are more than 100 Lebanese Shiite clerics who have not proclaimed loyalty to Iran since Tehran's intervention in Lebanon in 1982.

Waite, the assistant to the archbishop of Canterbury, disappeared in west Beirut January 1987 while negotiating for the release of some U.S. hostages.

WASINGTON (SEPT. 23) UPI - Secretary of State James Baker, scoffing at ''twenty-twenty hindsight,'' Sunday denounced as ''absolutely ludicrous'' suggestions that U.S. policy contributed to Iraqi aggression against Kuwait by failing to forewarn Saddam Hussein not to cross the border.

Baker responded to the release of a transcript by the Iraqi Embassy to the ABC network on a July 25 meeting in Baghdad between Saddam and U.S. Ambassador April Glaspie that centered on Iraq's military buildup on the Kuwaiti border.

The transcript, published Sunday in The New York Times and not confirmed by Baker, showed Glaspie telling Saddam the United States was concerned by the buildup but was not taking sides in the dispute.

Two days before that meeting, State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler was asked whether the United States had a commitment to defend Kuwait. She said, ''We do not have any defense treaties with Kuwait, and there is no special defense or security commitments to Kuwait.''

Glaspie told Saddam ''we have no opinion on Arab-Arab conflicts and on your border disagreement with Kuwait.''

Appearing Sunday on NBC's ''Meet the Press,'' Baker branded as ''restrospective scapegoating'' and ''twenty-twenty hindsight'' speculative news stories that Saddam believed the United States would not resist his Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

In the transcript, Saddam also made it clear that he had it in for the United Arab Emirates, charging it and Kuwait with unfairly raising oil prices and pumping more oil than allowed under a cartel agreement.

Baker noted that before the invasion the United States slapped Iraq with foreign policy controls, suspended commodity credits and halted shipments that would contribute to Iraq's nuclear advancement.

''Now we have some twenty-twenty hindsight going on,'' Baker said. But he added that the moves that were made had not been highlighted in the press.

He stressed that the message Glaspie conveyed had to do with ''a border dispute, not aggression'' and explained ''there are border disputes going on all over the world,'' where America takes a hands-off position.

''The suggestion that somehow the United States contributed to Saddam Hussein's aggression is ludicrous, absolutely ludicrous,'' Baker said.

He also denied a statement by an anonymous State Department official that the United States probably could have lived with a ''limited invasion'' in which Iraq seized bits of Kuwaiti territory to achieve concessions. Pressed for a reply, he said: ''You can take it as a denial.''

During the Saddam-Glaspie conversation, the transcript clearly highlights the Iraqi leader's lack of understanding of the U.S. media.

''The media campaign against Saddam was started by the official American media '' the Iraqi president charged. ''We were disturbed by this campaign, but we were not too disturbed because we had hoped that, in a few months, those who are the decision-makers in America would have a chance to find the facts and see whether this media campaign had any effect on the lives of the Iraqis.''

Glaspie was quoted as saying that ''what happened'' in Saddam's interview on ABC's ''Prime Time'' program was ''cheap and unjust.''

Sawyer asked Saddam a question in which he expressed astonishment that American reporters could question the actions and statments of President Bush.

Glaspie told Saddam that he was sujected to interrogation that ''even American politicians themselves'' are faced with: ''These are the methods the Western media employs. I am pleased that you add your voice to the diplomats who stand up to the media. Because your appearance in the media, even for five minutes, would help us make the American people understand Iraq.''

At the July meeting, Hussein appeared to be delivering a message to the United States that it either did not believe or misinterpreted. ''We do not accept threats from anyone because we do not threaten anyone,'' he said. ''But we say clearly that we hope that the United States will not entertain too many illusions and will seek new friends rather than increase the number of its enemies.''

Saddam also indicated that the United States would not fight a desert war and that the American people would be reluctant to fight over the Persian Gulf.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 23) UPI - Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady urged International Monetary Fund leaders Sunday to ''meet the economic challenges'' of the Persian Gulf crisis by mobilizing to support the hardest-hit nations.

Brady's comments to the IMF's policy-setting Interim Committee signaled that the U.S. administration is determined to use IMF and World Bank meetings this week to buttress opposition to Iraq's occupation of Kuwait.

U.S. officials are drumming up greater assistance for the ''front- line'' states hurt by the U.N. economic embargo of Iraq, looking for some $14 billion aid for former Iraqi commercial partners Jordan, Turkey and Egypt.

The Persian Gulf crisis, the treasury secretary said, has presented ''a host of challenges: political, military and economic. Together, we must meet the economic challenges, and I am optimistic we can do so.''

''The front-line states will incur very large economic losses,'' he said. ''The international community has rallied to provide support for them. Thanks to our collective efforts, progress in the mobilization ... is encouraging.''

Brady noted that East European states that depended on Iraq for a supply of cheap oil, often bartered for low-quality consumer goods which cannot be sold on more competitive Western markets, also have been hit.

He urged IMF and World Bank officials to ''adjust their policies (to become) more flexible and responsive to the needs of members seriously affected by the crisis.'' He asked the IMF to loosen and speed up lending mechanisms.

In conclusion, Brady said that ''the worldwide support for a decisive response to aggression in the Persian Gulf is right, and shows what coordinated effort can achieve when the will is there.''

Elsewhere, the Group of 10, a ministerial panel that oversees the use of IMf loan funds, met and issued an optimistic statement echoing the one released on Saturday by the Group of Seven largest industrial nations.

Despite soaring oil prices, the G-10 ministers ''saw prospects for a continued but more moderate expansion'' of the industrial economies. But they said growth would be more vigorous in some countries than in others.

Like the G-7 panel, the Group of 10 called for firm interest rates to counter the inflationary effects of record high oil prices, balanced by attention to any signs that high energy costs are slowing the world economy.

On Saturday, G-7 officials said oil prices surging on Mideast tensions were not pushing the industrialized world into a recession.

But the U.S., Japanese, West German, French, Italian, British and Canadian finance ministers and central bank governors said economic leaders must steer between twin dangers of inflation and economic deceleration.

''Government's job now is to balance itself so it navigates between those two risks, and we neither put ourselves in the way of runaway inflation, nor do we adopt policies which would slow economic growth,'' Brady said Saturday.

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (SEPT. 23) UPI - Deposed Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto was told Sunday to appear before a special disqualification court in Lahore to defend herself against charges of misconduct in a land deal while in office.

The appearance could keep Bhutto out of the Oct. 24 general elections, and she has charged the president with trying to obstruct her re-election plans with trumped-up corruption and incompetence charges.

Bhutto, the first woman elected prime minister of a Muslim country, was sacked Aug. 6 by President Ghulam Ishaq Khan, who said her 20-month- old government was corrupt. He set up special disqualification courts to prosecute her and her cabinet colleagues.

He has referred four cases of corruption against Bhutto to the courts, which are studying the evidence in three of them. The fourth charge, of trying to influence the sale of prime land in the capital at low price to a hotel sponsor, was established Sunday and the court ordered her appearance Oct. 2.

Bhutto has characterized the disqualification courts as ''kangaroo courts'' and one of her former cabinet colleges has challenged their constitutionality.

At the same time, however, the challenger and another former colleague accused of using influence to obtain a plant contract for a private multinational company have started defending themselves in those courts.

Three of Bhutto's other cabinet colleagues also face criminal charges in ordinary courts. And her husband, Asif Zardari, is on bail pending charges of bank fraud.

The caretaker administration appointed by the president after dismissing Bhutto is composed of her staunch political enemies.

Ishaq Kahn has said repeatedly no one would be barred from running in the elections but the accountability process is bound to interfere with active campaigning.

Bhutto's political fortunes have improved since her sacking and she appears able to win a majority in Punjab province, the largest in the country. Some think it could give her enough seats in the next assembly to remake her government.

(SEPT. 23) UPI - TODAY'S PEOPLE:

WELCOME TO TEXASVILLE: The stars of ''Texasville'' showed up in Dallas Saturday night for the premier of the sequel to ''The Last Picture Show.'' Director Peter Bogdanovich and actors Jeff Bridges, Cybill Shepherd, Randy Quaid and Cloris Leachman all are back from the 1971 movie, which was based on a Larry McMurtry novel, as is ''Texasville.'' Bogdanovich was asked at a news conference if making ''Texasville'' was fun. His answer: ''It was difficult, enriching, complicated, life-altering, a big experience, but not fun.'' Shepherd, who frequently campaigns for abortion rights, used the Dallas trip to do some politicking. She appeared at a pro-choice rally with Ann Richards, the Democratic nominee for governor, before attending the premiere with her parents and Richards.

WOMEN'S ROLES: Add Christine Lahti to the list of those who say women don't get a fair deal in Hollywood. Women are not as frequently as they once were portrayed as clinging vines attached to male stars, but Lahti says that's not enough. ''Look at the women's roles this summer,'' she said. ''Julia Roberts played a whore in 'Pretty Woman.' Jennifer Jason Lee played two hookers. Demi Moore had a good part in 'Ghost,' but that was it. At least a clinging vine had something to do. She clung. Today, female roles are limited to 'the girlfriend.' Whether she's a sex object or a career woman, she's two-dimensional in support of the male lead.'' Lahti says she was grateful for the strong role she has in ''Funny About Love'' with Gene Wilder, but that doesn't ease her disenchantment with movies. ''For me, the best way to find good roles is in the theater,'' she says. ''I feed the artistic me on stage and then try to make some money in a movie.''

BEHIND THE SMILE: Marriette Hartley presented a sunny image while doing all those camera commercials with James Garner, but her life has had extended dark periods. Hartley, 50, has written an autobiography that discusses how she was shattered by her father's suicide, her own suicide attempt at 15, her days as a battered wife and her alcoholism. Hartley was 23 when her father killed himself, but she and her mother went through a stretch of denial and ''pretended that nothing had happened.'' Years of drinking and binge-eating followed. ''I'd drunkenly squat in front of an open refrigerator, an open cupboard, drinking vodka and eating everything, including Purina Cat Chow.'' After years of psychotherapy and support groups, Hartley says she's able to face her problems. ''I needed to be reminding all the time to talk, because the old voices said, 'Don't,''' she says. ''Even now, when I talk about the past, my knees shake. I don't think I would be here today if I hadn't learned to talk.''

GLIMPSES: Czechoslovakia's playwright-president, Vaclav Havel, began his first visit to Italy as head of state by accepting a literary prize Sunday on the isle of Capri. Writer Umberto Eco, author of ''The Name of the Rose'' bestseller, film director Lina Wertmuller and Italian Foreign Minister Gianni De Michelis were on hand to see Havel pick up the Curzio Malaparte Prize, named for an Italian writer who lived in Naples. Havel meets with President Francesco Cossiga, Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti and Pope John Paul II on Monday ... Randy Newman wrote five songs for this week's episode of ''Cop Rock '' the innovative musical drama from producer Steven Bochco, and Bochco would love to work with more big name musicians like Paul Simon. ''Are you kidding?'' he told The New York Times. ''I'd kiss him in Macy's window. If Billy Joel was willing to write an episode, or even one song, just tell me where to show up to sign him.''

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 23) UPI - Assistant Senate Democratic leader Alan Cranston of California, citing concerns about the nominee's abortion views, said Sunday he will vote against the confirmation of Judge David Souter to the Supreme Court.

In remarks prepared for delivery in the Senate Monday, Cranston became the first senator to announce he will oppose President Bush's choice to fill the vacancy created by the retirement of William Brennan, one of the court's liberal members.

''I cannot support a nominee who refuses to acknowledge that a woman's right to choose to terminate a pregnancy is a fundamental right or that the right of individuals, married or unmarried, to use contraceptives to prevent pregnancy is a matter of settled law,'' Cranston said.

''I cannot support a nominee who regards these issues as open questions,'' said Cranston, who is the author of an abortion rights bill pending in the Senate. Souter, 51, a federal appeals court judge and former member of the New Hampshire Supreme Court, declined in his confirmation hearings to say how he might vote on cases challenging the landmark 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision, which recognized a constitutional right for women to seek abortions.

Souter, in Senate Judiciary Committee hearings that ended last week, said only that he would come to the court with no preconceived agenda on abortion or on Roe vs. Wade.

He was questioned without the controversy that marked the marked the failed nomination of Judge Robert Bork in 1987, during the Reagan admininstration. Some women's and birth control groups did, however, announce their opposition to Souter, citing grounds similar to Cranston's.

Cranston said he would ''vote no because Judge Souter will not reveal his views on a fundamental constitutional issue, the right of privacy. I will vote no because I do not believe that I can exercise responsibly my constitutional duty to advise and consent to a nomination when the nominee has determined to carve out one special and controversial area of the law in which he refuses to reveal his opinions, for whatever reason.''

The Judiciary Committee must still vote on whether to recommend Souter's confirmation by the full Senate.

Cranston, who is not a member of the committee, said he doubts if Souther ''has an adequate understanding of and commitment to one of the most fundamental and important constitutional rights citizens of this country inherently possess, the right of privacy.''

''The right of privacy - the right of each American to be left alone and to be free from government surveillance, the right of each American to determine the ways in which he or she lives his or her personal life - is one of the most fundamental liberties that each American expects to enjoy,'' Cranston said.

(SEPT. 23) UPI - Iraqi President Saddam Hussein said Sunday he would attack Israel and oil fields in Saudi Arabia if his country is ''suffocated'' by mounting international efforts to force Iraqi troops from Kuwait.

Iraq also charged Sunday that the United States has refused permission for an Iraqi plan to land in New York so that Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz can attend a U.N. General Assembly meeting, and U.S. Secretary of State James Baker scoffed at reports the United States failed to warn Iraq against invading Kuwait.

Saddam's message, broadcast on Baghdad radio, reiterated many of the threats Iraq has made in the past, none of which have yet come to pass.

But it was one of the strongest statements yet by the besieged Iraqi leader and for the first time suggested he was ready to fight over sanctions. Previously he has indicated he would only attack if attacked first by Western forces.

''If we felt the people of Iraq are suffocating and there is somebody dealing to them a bloody blow, we will make all those causing it suffocate,'' the statement said.

Analysts say Western and Australian warships in the Persian Gulf have been effectively enforcing the economic embargo, imposed by the United Nations following Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, and now the U.N. Security Council has devised a plan to enforce the sanctions by air as well.

Saddam's statement, issued after a joint meeting of the ruling Revolution Command Council and Baath Socialist party, said if would make the West suffer by halting the flow of oil from the Middle East.

It reiterated that Israel would be one of Iraq's first targets should fighting erupt and that Iraq had no intention of retreating from Kuwait.

In a move to further consolidate its grip on Kuwait, Iraq announced Sunday it was abolishing the Kuwaiti dinar and replacing it with Iraqi currency with a one-on-one exchange rate. Before the invasion a single Kuwaiti dinar was worth almost 12 Iraqi dinars.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said in a interview with an American television network that the newest statement from Iraq was ''not very helpful to those who want a peaceful solution to the problem.''

Perez de Cuellar also said he was planning to meet with ''many actors in the present drama,'' including Aziz, and that he would support a U.N. peacekeeping force in the region.

The U.N. secretary general said an air embargo against Iraq would probably be approved within a few days.

INA said Aziz sent a letter of protest to Perez de Cuellar because the United States had denied permission for his plane to land in New York. It said Aziz had wanted to participate in the debate over the proposed air embargo.

The State Department said it had ''no information'' on Aziz's charge.

Baker scoffed Sunday at what he called ''twenty-twenty hindsight'' after the Iraqi embassy in Washington released the transcript of a July 25 meeting between Saddam and the U.S. ambassador in which he seemed to warn of the impending invasion.

Ambassador April Glaspie told Saddam during the meeting that Washington was concerned about the buildup of Iraqi troops near the Kuwaiti border but was not taking sides in the dispute.

Some analysts have said the United States appeared to give Iraq the green light to invade, a contention Baker sharply denied.

In Tehran, Iranian President Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani said at a banquet for Syrian President Hafez Assad that Iran is steadfast in its opposition to the U.S.-led multinational military force in the gulf, calling it an ''arrogant scheme,'' according to a report Sunday by the Iranian news agency IRNA.

Assad, who made his first trip as president to Tehran to persuade Iran to modify its stance toward U.S. policy in the gulf, said he also favors withdrawal of Western forces but only after the crisis is over, according to IRNA.

Saudi Arabia said Sunday it expelled dozens of Jordanian, Iraqi and Yemeni diplomats because they were engaging in unspecified activities that undermined the kingdom's security.

Saudi authorities said in a statement the diplomats and embassy employees expelled Saturday had violated the ''code of conduct and rules of diplomatic service,'' but did not elaborate.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 24) UPI - Harshly criticized in the past for supporting Third World projects that harmed the environment, the World Bank in 1989-1990 sharply increased its loans for environmental improvement, the bank said Sunday.

Presenting the World Bank's first annual environmental report, officials said the bank approved 11 loans totaling $404 million in the fiscal year ended June 30 for ''free-standing,'' or purely environmental, projects.

By comparison, only two such loans were approved in fiscal 1989, said Kenneth Piddington, the bank's environmental department director. He said half of all World Bank loans approved in fiscal 1990 had environmental aspects.

He noted that the World Bank has also been involved in ongoing discussions as to the creation of a Global Environmental Facility, a kind of planetary agency to protect against broad threats like ozone layer depletion.

In 1987, World Bank President Barber Conable acknowledged that bank- financed projects such as a Brazilian highway traversing the Amazon Basin had seriously harmed the environment, pledging more environmental impact study.

Piddington said he believed sensitivity to environmental effects had become a permanent component of World Bank projects. He likened the change effected by the institution to a turn made at sea by a supertanker.

''You had to correct when you got to the end of the turn, and I really feel we are at that point in the bank,'' he said.

''Free-standing'' environmental loans made to countries like Brazil and Poland have been designed to help the recipients create their own agencies to assess environmental impact and come up with local solutions.

Thierry Baudon, the World Bank's environmental division chief for Europe, the Mideast and Africa, said East European projects aim to help formerly Communist countries ''get the biggest bang for their zloty or crown.''

Poland is to receive $20 million to finance an environmental policy analysis unit within the country's environmental ministry. Elsewhere, the World Bank is promoting local structures like river basin authorities.

Local authorities are seen as preferable to action at the governmental level, he said. Four decades of totalitarianism have left many East Europeans with a deep-rooted distrust and disdain for bureaucrats.

''The pendulum is swinging back so much towards individual freedom that they don't want to hear about central authority,'' he said. ''We are fighting that, just as in the old days we were fighting the central authorities.''

East European environmental damage is so severe, especially in the coal basin running across Czechoslovakia and southern Poland and East Germany, that ''the cleanup backlog is enormous'' and repairing it will take many years.

Much attention has been paid to air pollution by steel mills and other heavy industries, but Baudon said a longer-term threat is posed by the pollution of underground water supplies which could last for centuries.

He said the sad state of things is ''a blessing and a curse.'' While conditions are often shockingly bad, he said, significant gains may be made soon through the closure of pollution-belching ''dinosaur'' industries.

The World Bank has adopted a ''least-cost'' approach in the region, he said. It has discouraged heavy investment by the region in pollution- control equipment, considering it more important to build environmental agencies.

Western companies, seeing the huge market potential, are aggressively selling their environmental-control equipment. But ''it would be a mistake to throw money at the environment there,'' Baudon said.

The 45th session of the U-N General Assembly opens in New York tomorrow with a full agenda that's certain to be overshadowed by the Persian Gulf crisis. (SEPT. 23) UPI - More hostages arrive in the United States from Kuwait... the U-N opens its General Assembly tomorrow... and the first vote against David Souter's nomination. Those stories and more, next from U-P-I. .

112 people who had been trapped in Baghdad or Kuwait arrived in Raleigh, North Carolina. The former hostages, 41 of them Americans, spent last night in London after leaving Baghdad on the last scheduled evacuation flight.

The State Department says NO additional evacuation flights are planned because it's believed everyone who could get out of Kuwait and Baghdad- and wanted to- has already left.

And Iraqi President Saddam Hussein today issued his toughest statement yet. The Iraqi leader said he will attack oil fields in Saudi Arabia and other Arab nations if his country is- in his words- ''suffocated'' by economic sanctions.

In a separate development, Iraq says the United States is preventing the foreign minister from participating in a U-N General Assembly meeting by NOT allowing an Iraqi plane to land in New York.

The Iraqi News Agency reports that Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz sent a letter of protest to U-N Secretary-General Perez de Cuellar.

The 45th session of the U-N General Assembly opens in New York tomorrow, faced with a lengthy agenda that's certain to be overshadowed by events in the Persian Gulf.

All 160 U-N member states are expected to participate in the forum which will discuss Iraq's occupation of Kuwait, South Africa's apartheid policies and the international debt of developing nations.

Presidents Fernando Collor de Mello of Brazil and Francois Mitterrand of France will address the world body.

Brazil exported 342-Million dollars of goods to Iraq last year and at least six of its ships loaded with goods are stranded in the Indian Ocean because of the embargo against Iraq. Mitterrand will make a special trip to New York to address the assembly on the gulf crisis and return to Paris the same day.

The U-N Security Council is expected to adopt an air embargo against Iraq Tuesday in an effort to tighten already-existing sanctions.

(SEPT. 23) UPI - Iraq complained today that the United States will NOT let an Iraqi plane bring Iraq's foreign minister to a U-N meeting in New York. A Bush administration official says Iraq's ambassador to Washington was told last week that the minister would have to come on a commercial flight.

Frederik de Klerk arrived in Washington today, declaring the ''walls of apartheid are coming down.'' The South African president will spend two days in the nation's capital talking with U-S lawmakers and business leaders.

The U-N General Assembly's 45th session opens tomorrow with a 150- item agenda overshadowed by the stand-off in the Persian Gulf. The U-N Security Council is considering an air embargo of Iraq to go along with its naval blockade.

Treasury Secretary Brady is asking the International Monetary Fund to help nations hit economically by the gulf crisis. Washington is trying to drum up more than 10-BILLION dollars in aid for nations that include Jordan, Turkey and Egypt.

President Bush is said to be hoping that budget summit negotiators will come up with a deficit-cutting plan before an October 1st deadline. Maryland's governor says Bush was- in his words- ''right optimistic'' when they spoke today.

David Souter's refusal to say how he'd vote on abortion cases has resulted in at least one senator opposing his nomination to the U-S Supreme Court. California Democrat Alan Cranston says he will oppose the nominee.

(SEPT. 23) UPI - A Bush administration official is responding to Iraqi charges that the United States is trying to prevent its foreign minister from attending a U-N General Assembly by NOT allowing an Iraqi plane to land in New York. The official, who asked NOT to be named, says the assistant secretary of state for Near East affairs informed the Iraqi Ambassador to Washington that Tariq Aziz would have to come to the United States on a commercial plane. .

The U-S-S Mercy Hospital ship has been described as a combination of the Loveboat, Mash and General Hospital. But the U-S Navy has decreed that love canNOT blossom in the Persian Gulf waters, despite the long maritime stint in the Middle East. The ship's public affairs officer says- ''Fraternization has been strictly discouraged.'' About one-third of Mercy's 960 occupants are female because nurses are required aboard the floating hospital.

The Coast Guard arrested 13 people today and seized a fishing vessel as Greenpeace protesters and a flotilla of commercial fishermen increased efforts to stop a minerals research cruise off Gold Beach, Oregon. One protester chained herself to the research ship Aloha before being arrested. Residents and several government agencies have expressed concern that mineral mining could harm the area's productive fishery.

Princeton University's all-male Ivy Club broke a 111-year tradition today by accepting membership applications from 21 females. Ivy, the oldest of the university's 12 eating clubs, decided last week to allow women to ''bicker,'' a process similar to rushing for sorority or fraternity membership. The move follows a federal judge's refusal to stay a state Supreme Court order to admit women.

SANTA ANA, CA (SEPT. 24) BUSINESS WIRE - TriCare Inc. (NASDAQ:TRCR), a leading occupational-healthcare-services company, announced record operating results for its fiscal-1991 first quarter ended Aug. 31, 1990.

For the three-month period, the company's net revenue increased 75 percent to $8.4 million from $4.8 million for the same period a year ago. Net income of $548,000 was a 51 percent increase over net income of $362,000 reported in the first quarter of fiscal year 1990.

Earnings per share increased to 14 cents from 13 cents in spite of a 32 percent increase in shares outstanding, which resulted from the company's initial public offering which occurred late in the third quarter of fiscal 1990. These first-quarter results include the operations of the OccuCare acquisition which occurred May 31, 1990.

Announcing the results for the first quarter, Steve Bullock, president and chief executive officer of TriCare, said: ''The foundation for the company's future growth has been established.

''TriCare has broadened its service base with the creation of Veritas, which provides diagnostic and interpreting services, along with the acquisition of OccuCare which is involved in industrial medical treatment. The revenues from these new businesses, combined with the company's existing revenue base, enabled TriCare to have an excellent first quarter.''

Larry Wasserman, chief financial officer of TriCare, said: ''The workers' compensation legislation affecting TriCare's largest subsidiary, First Western was resolved on a more favorable long-term basis than previously expected. In fact, beginning July 1, 1992, reimbursement levels will be determined as they have always been, plus for the first time ever a positive CPI adjustment.''

Bullock added that ''The company will continue to evaluate growth opportunities through geographic expansion, new services and future acquisitions. Each opportunity will further TriCare's progress toward becoming the leader in the occupational-healthcare-services industry.''

HOUSTON (SEPT. 23) BUSINESS WIRE - ENERCAP Corp. (NASDAQ:ENCP) announced Monday that the board of directors has approved a plan to substantially eliminate the company's debt.

The plan involves an exchange of debt for new shares of the company's common stock and if fully accepted by the debt holders, would reduce debt from its current level of $23.8 million to approximately $2.6 million, increase total shareholders' equity from $1.1 million to approximately $13 million, and result in annual interest savings of approximately $2.6 million.

A large majority of the debt holders have already indicated their willingness to accept the exchange, when made.

Under the proposed restructuring, the company will, subject to shareholder approval, carry out a 1 for 25 reverse-split reducing the current number of outstanding shares from approximately 60.3 million to 2.4 million.

Holders of Series B and D debentures, totalling approximately $4.3 million, will be offered post reverse-split common shares at the ratio of one share for every $6.25 of debenture exchanged. Holders of Series C debentures totalling $8.4 million will also be offered post-reverse split shares at the ratio of $6.25 of debenture to one share.

Series C holders will also receive a one year interest-free installment note equal to 15 percent of the face value of debentures exchanged. The holder of a $400,000 note will also be offered the opportunity to convert to common shares at $6.25 per share. If the proposed restructuring if fully accepted by the debt holders, the company's outstanding shares will increase to approximately 4.8 million.

As a part of the overall restructuring plan, the board of directors has approved a proposal to transfer to Paul N. Temple, chairman of the company, the company's interest in a 2-1/2 percent royalty in certain producing oil and gas properties located off the south-eastern coast of Australia in the Bass Strait (''Bass Strait Royalty'').

In return, Temple will assume the company's bank debt and other advances totalling approximately $4.6 million and the company will cancel approximately $3.6 million of the Series C debentures held by Temple.

In addition, Temple has agreed to exchange a commission agreement valued at $873,500 for 139,760 shares of common stock plus an interest-free note in the amount of $131,025. The transactions with Temple have been unanimously approved by the independent directors of the company and are expected to be completed within the next 30 days.

The board believes implementation of the restructuring will allow the company to take full advantage of its existing reserves and growing production. The current debt level has provided funds to get the company to its current level, but is now a major impediment to its future growth.

Elimination of the debt will place ENERCAP in a considerably improved position to acquire the funding needed to accelerate development of its existing properties and acquire additional reserves through customary equity and/or debt financing.

Information regarding the proposed offers of exchange will be sent to debenture holders in the near future. A special meeting of the company's shareholders will be held before year-end to approve the reverse-split. The restructuring will be effective simultaneously with the reverse-split.

ENERCAP Corp., a Delaware corporation, is engaged in the acquisition and development of heavy oil reserves amenable to an enhanced oil recovery technique known as steamflooding.

SAN FRANCISCO (SEPT. 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Two of the world's leading financial institutions -- BankAmerica Corp. and Barclays Bank -- Monday announced a joint venture agreement that will create one of the largest issuers of travelers cheques in the world.

Under terms of the agreement, BankAmerica will combine its travelers cheque activities with Interpayment Services Ltd., the independent travelers cheque company set up by Barclays last year. BankAmerica will also acquire and equity interest in Interpayment.

Interpayment will expand the current marketing of travelers cheques by both financial institutions, with services available in more than 179 countries throughout the world.

Barclays and BankAmerica each have special areas of strength. Barclays has strong presence in the United Kingdom, Canada and the United States. BankAmerica has strong representation in continental Europe, the Middle East, Latin America, the United States and the rapidly expanding Asia Pacific region.

Interpayment was set up by Barclays in 1989 to create an independent organization devoted to providing the best service in marketing and processing of travelers cheques for financial institutions while not competing directly with them.

In the past, many financial institutions sold travelers cheques bearing the name of one of the major cheque issuers, often a rival financial institution. The only bank name that appears on Interpayment travelers cheques is that of the selling agent.

Barclays is currently the world's largest issuer of Visa travelers cheques. BankAmerica issues Visa, MasterCard and its own brand of travelers cheques. These brands will continue to be offered.

Barclays Bank and BankAmerica Corp. are forming a joint venture through Interpayment to engage in the travelers cheque business around the world.

Interpayment Services Limited was originally organized by Barclays Bank in 1989 to market ''neutral name'' travelers cheques. Today Interpayment will be the vehicle to market multiple brands and currencies travelers cheques worldwide.

The consummation of the agreement is subject to regulatory approval.

ANAHEIM, CA (SEPT. 24) BUSINESS WIRE - System Industries (ASE:SYI), the leading independent supplier of data management solutions to the DEC market, and Charles River Data Systems of Framingham, Mass., have announced a strategic marketing agreement under which SI will sell Charles River's Relational Accelerator into the DEC market, here at the International Oracle User Group meeting.

The agreement is valued at more than $35 million over the first three years.

Under the agreement, System Industries will provide direct sales, service and support for the Relational Accelerator in the DEC market worldwide. Charles River will continue to enhance and develop the product, and supply technical training and support.

In addition, System Industries disk and tape drives will be incorporated into Relational Accelerator systems.

The Relational Accelerator is a dedicated database engine that has been exclusively designed to enhance the performance of Oracle applications running on DEC VAX/VMS computers. It can provide significant cost savings compared to VAX-only solutions running the Oracle RDBMS.

For System Industries, the Relational Accelerator represents a new direction, but one that fits well with SI's long standing mission to bring high-performance data management solutions to DEC systems users.

Emery further noted that Oracle has been highly successful in the VAX/VMS market with an installed base of more than 14,000 sites accounting for about 40 percent of the VAX RDMS market.

The Relational Accelerator features a real-time, dedicated database engine and disk storage system that transparently processes the back-end Oracle RDBMS kernal, providing up to 25 transactions per second (TPS) as measured by the TP1 benchmark on a variety of VAX and MicroVAX front-end. Response time increases of 2 to 4 times (or more) are typical.

The Relational Accelerator is also used to increase the number of simultaneous Oracle users on resource-bound VAX hardware, and for freeing expensive VAX resources.

The Relational Accelerator is on display this week at International Oracle Users Week being held at the Anaheim Convention Center in booth 834.

Charles River Data Systems, a privately held company founded in 1973, has provided over 10,000 real-time computer systems worldwide for OEM customers. These systems have earned an excellent reputation for real-time event processing for industrial/scientific control and instrumentation, and on-line transaction processing applications. Charles River's new Relational Accelerator provides the industry's only real-time architecture for Oracle acceleration.

System Industries, founded in 1968, is the leading independent supplier of high-performance data management solutions for the Digital Equipment Corp. marketplace worldwide. The company's storage systems are designed for standalone and cluster environments, and integrate the latest disk, tape and software technologies to provide a total storage solution.

The company services all its products through its dedicated customer service organization which consists of a network of fully staffed domestic and international offices capable of delivering 24-hour, 7-day-a-week rapid on-site support.

IRVINE, CA (SEPT. 23) BUSINESS WIRE - AST Research Inc. has announced a smaller footprint Premium II 386SX/20 personal computer with a new integrated design.

In addition, the company also lowered the price of each of its Premium 386SX/16 models by $300.

''StoreBoard ranks AST third in SX market share and we expect the new smaller footprint's superior performance plus the aggressive product line pricing to build our current SX success,'' said Jim Ashbrook, AST senior vice president of marketing. ''With the introduction of the Premium II 386SX/20, we have adjusted the prices of our Premium 386SX/16 to reflect its position within the AST product line.''

With a Power Meter MIPS of 4.246, the Premium II 386SX/20 system's cache design gives it the highest CPU performance in the SX/20 market.

The system is 25 percent faster in a 20 percent smaller chassis than the company's current Premium 386SX/16. The new design integrates Super VGA (800-by-600 pixel resolution) onto the motherboard, which frees an expansion slot. An IDE (Integrated Drive Electronics) connector on the motherboard is combined with an IDE hard drive saving another slot.

Other standard features of the Premium II include a PS/2-compatible mouse port and front-panel power switch. Users may also combine a 1-MB or 4-MB SIMMs for a maximum of 16MB of memory on the CPU card.

All models include Super VGA adapter on the motherboard. Model 3V contains a 3.5-inch, 1.44-MB diskette drive. It is priced at $2,595. Model 5V with a 5.25-inch, 1.2-MB diskette drive is also listed at $2,595.

Model 43V contains a 40-MB hard drive and a 3.5-inch, 1.44-MB diskette drive and retails at $3,195. Model 113V with a 110-MB hard drive and 3.5-inch, 1.44-MB diskette drive is $3,695. The system is immediately available and comes with a one-year warranty. Premium 386SX/16 Pricing

Since its October 1989 introduction, the cache-based AST Premium 386SX/16 has received several domestic and international computer trade awards for performance. The 16-MHz system has five available expansion slots, five half-height drive bays, 16-bit AST-VGA graphics adapter, one serial and one parallel port and 2MB of memory expandable to a maximum of 16MB.

Model 3V with a 3.5-inch diskette drive and Model 5V containing a 5.25-inch diskette drive are priced at $2,295, down from $2,595. Model 45V, which includes a 5.25-inch diskette drive and 40-MB AT-embedded hard drive, is now listed at $2,895, down from $3,195.

Both the Premium 386SX/16 and Premium II 386SX/20 feature the company's upgradable Cupid-32 (Completely Universal Processor, I/O Design) architecture. Cupid-32 provides an easy-to-install growth path to higher-performing microprocessors.

''We see these systems as ideal entries into windowing and multitasking environments,'' Ashbrook said. ''AST's SX family provides general business application users the maximum processing power for their out-of-pocket cost.''

DENVER (SEPT. 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Gerrity Oil & Gas Corp. (NASDAQ:GOIL) of Denver reported a net loss of $73,000 and cash flow from operations of $1,544,000 for the quarter ended June 30, 1990 on total revenues of $1,981,000.

For the six months ended June 30, 1990, Gerrity reported net income of $6,000 and cash flow from operations of $2,901,000 on total revenues of $4,474,000. The second quarter results compare with a net income of $268,000 and cash flow from operations of $3,401,000 (exclusive of drilling funds received from an outside investor) on revenues of $3,381,000 during the same period in 1989.

The second quarter 1990 results are consistent with the company's projections. Gerrity had postponed its 1990 drilling program pending the completion of its initial public offering and therefore no new wells were completed during the second quarter of 1990, while during the same period in 1989, Gerrity completed 26 new wells.

Gerrity began its new drilling program in August after the successful completion of its $16 million offering. The company has accelerated that drilling program to take advantage of the higher oil prices currently prevailing in the market.

The company presently has six rigs running in the Denver-Julesburg Basin, in Weld County, Colo. Five of the rigs are drilling Codell wells and one rig is recompleting in uphole zones. Each rig can drill a Codell well in approximately one week. The company has successfully drilled 20 Codell wells since it began drilling on Aug. 15.

By the beginning of October the company plans to spud its first shallow Niobrara well in the Raton Basin of Colorado where the company owns 25,147 net acres.

Gerrity has also recently entered into an agreement to participate in its first horizontal Niobrara well in the Silo Field of Wyoming. The company owns 2,350 net acres and with this first well will earn the right to participate in approximately an additional 7,680 acres in the Silo field.

Gerrity Oil & Gas Corp. is primarily engaged in the drilling and operating of low risk development wells in the Front Range of the Rocky Mountains. Gerrity trades on NASDAQ under the symbol GOIL.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, CA (SEPT. 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Newbridge Networks Corp., a leading vendor of T1 networking products, has certified Make Systems Inc.'s Netool decision support system for use with Newbridge network devices.

In May 1990, Newbridge Networks Corp. (NASDAQ:NNCXF) and Make Systems announced an agreement to jointly develop Newbridge device-specific capabilities for Netool. Since then, the two companies have worked together to confirm Netool's complete functionality with Newbridge's MainStreet multiplexers operating under control of the 4602 network management system (Release 2.0).

Because Netool Release 2.3 provides accurate modeling of Newbridge MainStreet multiplexers, it will allow network managers to proactively plan and manage network changes as well as evaluate cost vs. reliability trade-offs.

Netool allows complete simulation of Newbridge networks under failure conditions or demand variations, including call routing and network synchronization. Network managers can now non-intrusively review ''what if'' scenarios as well as test implementation plans.

Use of Netool helps network managers improve network reliability and reduce monthly transmission costs, according to Howard.

Netool assists with routing design of the Newbridge Control Packet Switching System (CPSS). Netool can also model Newbridge's Automatic Network Synchronization (ANS) clocking scheme to insure clocking is provided to all nodes under various failure conditions.

The strategic partnership between Make Systems and Newbridge Networks Corp. includes a cooperative marketing agreement, whereby Newbridge will market Netool with the Newbridge device library under the name Network Architect. A data extraction utility provides communication between Netool and the 4602 network management system.

Newbridge Networks Corp. is an international company which specializes in the design, manufacture and marketing of voice and data communications equipment for global networks. Offices and manufacturing facilities are located in the United States, Canada and the United Kingdom.

Headquartered in Mountain View, Make Systems is the leading software product company creating advanced network management applications for enterprise-wide networks. Make Systems supports other device libraries, including those for Network Equipment Technologies and Timeplex Inc.

SAN JOSE, CA (SEPT. 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Accolade Monday announced the release of the classic Milton Bradley board game ''Stratego'' for the line of color and black-and-white Macintosh computers.

''Stratego: The Computer Game'' joins the company's recently released ''Ishido: The Way of Stones'' to its line-up of strategy games.

''Stratego: The Computer Game'' retains the traditional game board, game pieces and rules from the classic board game, including Tournament Rules, and adds custom game boards and piece sets, a library of game set-ups, multiple levels of difficulty and digitized sound effects.

''Stratego: The Computer Game'' is scheduled for release later this month for IBM PC, Tandy and compatible computers. The game carries a suggested retail price of $49.95.

In ''Stratego: The Computer Game'' one player competes with the computer. As in the traditional game, each opponent is provided with a 40-piece army made up of officers ranked in importance according to their position in addition to one spy, six bombs and one flag. Each opponent secretly sets up one side of the game board or battlefield, planning a defense and an offense.

The objective is simple. Whichever side captures the opponent's flag first wins the game.

Single game play or a 5-game campaign are available in ''Stratego: The Computer Game,'' and each game can be played on five different levels of difficulty, thereby giving the player an opponent best suited to his/her own play skills.

Additionally, strategists can add some variety to the game by choosing one of the graphically stunning and colorful custom battlefields in the game, or one of the custom playing piece sets.

While the number of custom boards available will vary depending on the kind of computer being used, examples include a digitized remake of the original game board, a marble board and a modernized ivory board.

Further, for players who want to save time or gain some advice on how to set up their pieces, they can pick from an inventory of dozens of existing game set-ups or create and save their own for later use. And finally, to create a sense of realism in the game, ''Stratego: The Computer Game'' is accompanied by realistic battlefield sound effects and victorious music.

MENLO PARK, CA (SEPT. 24) BUSINESS WIRE - lnformix Software Inc. (NASDAQ:IFMX) Monday announced that Hyatt Hotels & Resorts used the Informix-OnLine database management system and Informix's 4GL application development tools to build its new worldwide reservation system.

The UNIX-based system is designed to support 1,500 users, provide 24 hour a day/7 day a week access to hotel room information and manage 50,000 room in more than 160 hotels worldwide.

The new reservation system is the result of a collaborative development venture between Informix, AT&T Computer Systems and Hyatt. Running on AT&T's System 7000 RISC-based symmetric multiprocessor computers, the system is multiple gigabytes in size, contains millions of records and replaces a mainframe-based application Hyatt has been using since 1982.

The new reservation system is designed to provide sub-second local response time for most transactions.

Working with Informix's Professional Services group, Hyatt has developed a number of new database applications.

In addition to the new reservation system, Hyatt has developed a Hotel Management Reporting System implemented in 80 hotels that automatically transfers hotel room point-of-sale information to a central accounting system. Hyatt senior executives use the application to view information about the entire hotel organization for strategic planning.

The application is currently standalone with plans to implement it in a distributed network environment.

Hyatt's Markting System is an application developed to store, track and monitor marketing activity. This application has been in use for more than one year and supports 150 users.

Hyatt's Macintosh-based Executive Information System was developed using HyperScript graphical programming language in Informix's Wingz graphic spreadsheet. The HyperScript application provides Hyatt senior executives with an intuitive framework in which to perform high-level statistical analysis and produce reports.

CAMARILLO, CA (SEPT. 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Vitesse Semiconductor Corp. announced today its new H-GaAs (High-integration Gallium Arsenide) digital IC process that is capable of reaching integration levels of over 1 million high performance GaAs transistors on a single chip.

This third generation process, designated H-GaAs III, will allow high performance system solutions such as telecom switching units and microprocessors to be implemented at integration levels far in excess of next generation ECL and comparable to state of the art CMOS and BiCMOS technologies.

H-GaAs III is a 0.6 micron-scaled version of the successful H-GaAs II process currently in production. The basic transistor structure has been improved to achieve loaded gate delays of less than 100 ps while dissipating less than 200 microwatts at 1 GHz clock rates. At comparable densities, high performance BiCMOS processes achieve gate delays of only 250-400 ps and cannot support clock rates above the 100 to 150 MHz range.

Vitesse's H-GaAs III process achieves these unprecedented speed, power and integration levels by utilizing proven silicon MOS manufacturing techniques to combine high integration with the high performance inherent in Gallium Arsenide. Refractory metal self-aligned gate transistors and four layers of standard aluminum interconnect are the cornerstones of the H-GaAs III process.

Unlike other high performance process technologies in which each new generation is developed from scratch, H-GaAs III is simply a scaled version of H-GaAs II.

Each generation of Vitesse's H-GaAs process technology has utilized refractory metal, self-aligned gate transistors and standard aluminum interconnect to yield high speed, low power, and a high level of integration. This means that Vitesse leverages the outstanding yields of the H-GaAs II process to facilitate reliable volume manufacturing of H-GaAs III.

H-GaAs is far less complex to manufacture than ECL or BiCMOS. It takes only 13 mask levels to process a four layer metal H-GaAs III wafer. This leads to advantages not only in reliable volume manufacturing, but also in the price the customer pays for performance.

Vitesse Semiconductor Corp. is the world's leading supplier of digital gallium arsenide integrated circuits. The company was founded in 1984 to develop, manufacture and market cost effective VLSI GaAs ICs.

MILPITAS, CA (SEPT. 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Plus Development Corp., a wholly owned subsidiary of Quantum Corp. (NASDAQ:QNTM), Monday introduced Hardcard II XL 50 and Hardcard II XL 105 -- the world's fastest 3.5-inch personal computer disk drives.

The new generation of personal disk drives-on-a-card provide users of vintage 286- and 386-based personal computers up to nine times the performance, at the same price, as conventional disk drives installed in most PCs today.

This performance improvement is achieved through sustained transfer rates of as high as 1.4 megabyte (MB) per second. A transfer rate is the rate at which the hard drive sends and receives information from the disk controller.

No other 3.5-inch disk drive with up to 120 MB capacity can match the speed and performance of the new Hardcard II XLs, according to Dataquest, a San Jose Calif., based computer industry market research firm.

Already ranked as the industry's most reliable hard disk manufacturer by the Sept. 25, 1990, PC Magazine reliability and service survey of 20,000 hard disk users, Plus sets a new standard for disk drive performance and value with suggested retail prices for Hardcard II XL 50 and Hardcard II XL 105 of $579 and $999, respectively.

Dealers briefed on Hardcard II XL in advance, project street prices at or below $399 and $699, respectively. Hardcard II XL drives will be available through retail channels on Oct. 15.

The same advanced technology and proven reliability that have established Plus Development as a leader in customer satisfaction are an integral part of Hardcard II XL.

Plus Development is one of the leading suppliers of mass storage solutions for a wide range of personal computer systems. The company's original Hardcard product line was first introduced in 1985 and pioneered the hard-disk-on-a-card technology.

Based in Milpitas, Plus Development is a wholly owned subsidiary of Quantum Corp., a leading manufacturer of hard disk drives for personal computers and workstations for the original equipment manufacturer (OEM) marketplace.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, CA (SEPT. 24) BUSINESS WIRE - SynOptics Communications Inc. (NASDAQ/NMS:SNPX) Monday became the industry's first vendor to integrate multiprotocol routing into the intelligent wiring center, furthering the company's strategy of providing complete connectivity, internetworking and network management solutions on a single platform.

The LattisNet Model 3386 and Model 3384 Local Ethernet Router modules were developed in cooperation with cisco Systems and are the result of a technology agreement signed by the two companies last April. The new modules fit into SynOptics' System 300 intelligent wiring center and are managed by the company's LattisNet Netowrk Management system.

Decentralized routing provides greater flexibility in adding incremental capacity to networks and in making changes to the network. Decentralized routing also gives customers increased ability to segment the network into smaller, secured subnetworks that can be isolated from the main network for security or disaster recovery.

Through LattisNet's Expanded View, network managers anywhere on the network can view the status of the routers' LED displays and monitor routing traffic levels. In addition, the router modules include a Simple Network Management Protocol (SNMP) agent, allowing them to be managed from any SNMP management station or Telnet station.

The two router modules are identical except for their front panel Ethernet port. The Model 3383 offers two Ethernet connections: one through the System 3000 concentrator backplane and one through an attachment unit interface (AUI) on the module's front panel.

The Model 3384 has a fiber optic inter-repeater link (FOIRL) port in place of the AUI connector. Both can filter frames at the Ethernet line speed of 15,000 packets per second and can forward at the rate of 5,000 packets per second.

The modules simultaneously route multiple protocols including IP, DECnet XNS, IPX and Appletalk and are completely compatible with other cisco routers installed on the network. Using routing protocols such as cisco's IGRP, the modules can exchange messages with other SynOptics and cisco routers on the network to dynamically build routing tables that direct packets across the least costly path.

The LattisNet Model 3383 and Model 3384 Local Ethernet Routers join SynOptics' growing family of modular LattisNet products that reside in the System 3000 concentrator and provide customers with a flexible and modular solution to meet their networking needs while providing a path to accommodate future requirements.

The LattisNet Model 3383 Ethernet Local Router with the AUI port is priced at $6,395, plus a $100 right to use license. The LattisNet Model 3384-ST with the FOIRL port is priced at $6,795 plus the right to use license. Both products will be available in December 1990 through SynOptic's direct sales force and authorized resellers worldwide.

SynOptics Communications Inc. designs, manufactures and markets local area networking products based on its Network Utility Architecture, a value-added product strategy that incorporates network connectivity, internetworking and network management solutions into an integrated networking system.

Revenue of $77.3 million was reported for the fiscal year ended Dec. 31, 1989. Earnings for the like period were $9.4 million, or $1.22 per share. The company is headquartered at 501 E. Middlefield Road, Mountain View, Calif., 94043. Telephone 415/960-1100.

SAN JOSE, CALIF. (SEPT. 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Compressions Labs Inc. (CLI), (NASDAQ/NMS:CLIX), Monday announced The Boeing Co. of Seattle has selected the CLI Rembrandt 11/06 codec for its new low-bandwidth videoconferencing network.

In the first phase of the new contract, Boeing will install 10 Rembrandt 11/06 codecs integrated with CLI's Gallery 125 videoconferencing room systems. Boeing will also install an 8-port CLI Multipoint Control Unit. The dollar value of the contract was not announced.

The new videoconferencing equipment will be used by the Boeing Commercial Airplane Group for a variety of applications related to the development of a new generation of aircraft.

Within the company, the CLI equipment will allow the Commercial Airplane Group's engineering and manufacturing teams in the Seattle area to meet with groups at Boeing facilities in Wichita, Kan., and Philadelphia. Boeing will also be able to conference with external organizations such as suppliers, customers and teaming partners.

The low-bandwidth capability of the CLI equipment will make videoconferencing a flexible and cost-effective communications medium for the Commercial Airplane Group. The CLI codecs will compress the video signals to a fraction of their original size so that they can be carried over low bit-rate transmission services such as ISDN networks or switched 56 services, while maintaining very high picture quality.

The modular Gallery Room Systems integrate these codecs into compact, easy-to-use units that also include video monitors, cameras, a graphics display unit and audio system. CLI's Multipoint Control Unit will allow up to eight different sites to be easily connected in the same videoconference.

CLI is the world's largest supplier of full-motion, color videoconferencing systems for use by business, government and education.

CLI provides complete videoconferencing solutions, including room systems, codecs and multipoint units. Considered an effective communications tool for innovative organizations around the world, videoconferencing has emerged as a strategic resource for competing successfully in the 1990s.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, CA (SEPT. 24) BIZWIRE - SynOptics Communiations Inc. (NASDAQ: SNPX) Monday announced that it will demonstrate its Fiber Distributed Data Interface (FDDI) technology at INTEROP 90, Oct. 9-12, in San Jose, Calif.

SynOptics will showcase its FDDI technology in two separate multivendor FDDI interoperability test networks at the show.

At the heart of the SynOptics FDDI demonstration is its LattisNet System 3000 intelligent wiring center, which now supports Ethernet, Token Ring and FDDI on a single platform. Through SynOptics' multiple bus architecture, the System 3000 can implement all three network access methods simultaneously.

Among the FDDI prototypes being demonstrated at the show are SynOptics' FDDI host modules for both fiber and twisted pair as well as FDDI network management modules.

This technology demonstration is a follow up to SynOptics' announcement in June of this year that it had developed technology to run the high speed FDDI networking protocol over IBM Type 1 shielded twisted pair (STP) at distances of at least 100 meters.

SynOptics' twisted pair FDDI solution is expected to be particularly attractive at installations where IBM cable plants (Type 1 STP) have already been installed and can be re-utilized.

''Our technology will allow users to run 100 Mbps FDDI on their existing IBM cable plants. This virtually eliminates the cost of installing new horizontal cable that was necessary to implement FDDI to the desktop,'' said Nick Schommer, FDDI product marketing manager at SynOptics.

The first of the two demonstrations is designed to illustrate twisted pair FDDI interoperability and includes SynOptics and its strategic partners. The vendors, who were also announced today, recently formed an interoperability test group to hasten the delivery of FDDI technology and reduce the cost of bringing FDDI to the desktop.

A second network, the FDDI Solutions Showcase Demonstration Group sponsored by Interop Inc., features 37 vendors including SynOptics in a show-wide display of FDDI interoperability. The network spans the San Jose Convention and Cultural Center and imitates the type of networking environment usually found in a Fortune 500 environment.

SynOptics' FDDI Host modules and backplanes will be available in the first quarter of 1991. FDDI Network Management modules will be available in the second quarter of 1991.

SynOptics Communications Inc. designs, manufactures and markets local area networking products based on its Network Utility Architecture, a value-added product strategy that incorporates network connectivity, internetworking and network management solutions into an integrated networking system.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, CA (SEPT. 24) BUSINESS WIRE - SynOptics Communications Inc. (NASDAQ/NMS:SNPX) Monday announced that it has signed twisted pair FDDI technology agreements with CMC, Interphase, Network Peripherals and Silicon Graphics.

Under the terms of the agreements, the companies will conduct joint twisted pair FDDI interoperability testing using SynOptics' common twisted pair FDDI transceiver circuit. In addition, the companies expect that products will result from the testing process.

This effort will dramatically reduce the overall cost of bringing 100 Megabits per second (Mb/s) FDDI to the desktop by replacing optical connections with lower-cost twisted pair interfaces. Additionally, customers can use existing shielded twisted pair wire -- eliminating the need to recable with fiber.

The first public demonstration of FDDI interoperability in a multivendor environment with shielded twisted pair cabling will be conducted at INTEROP 90 in San Jose, Calif., Oct. 8-12.

The activities of the group complement American National Standards Institute (ANSI) FDDI standards efforts, which are also aimed at ensuring market acceptance through interoperability and in which all companies involved are active participants.

All of the companies are actively working toward developing a standard for the low-cost physical medium dependent (PMD) portion of the ANSI standard and once adopted will support it fully.

Products resulting from these agreements can be expected within the next six to 12 months.

Net income for the first quarter was $91,788, or $.03 per share, compared to net income of $90,098, or $.03 per share last year. However, our level of bid activity remains strong, usually an indicator of future orders. Over the past three months we have intensified our quest for a proper acquisition.

''We have also entered into discussions with potential European joint venture partners. Based on our current backlog and increasing proposal activity, we look forward to profitable operations for the remainder of the fiscal year."

WEST WARICK, RI (SEPT. 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Astro-Med Inc. (NASDAQ:ALOT) announced Monday that a Los Angeles federal judge has granted summary judgement in favor of Astro-Med against Western Graphtec on all eight of Western Graphtec's claims against Astro-Med.

No claims for damages remain pending against the Rhode Island based company. The Court let stand three claims by Western Graphtec, but ruled that Western Graphtec was not entitled to any damages on any of its claims.

The dismissed counterclaims arose from the lawsuit filed in 1988 by Astro-Med against Western Graphtec for violations of the Buy American Act and the Lanham Act. Astro-Med alleges that Western Graphtec, in unlawfully concealing the Japanese origin of its products, gained an unfair advantage over Astro-Med in bidding on government contracts and that these acts by Western Graphtec resulted in monetary damages to Astro-Med.

In commenting on the court's action, Albert W. Ondis, Astro-Med chairman, stated: ''Now that the counterclaims of Western Graphtec, which we have always considered frivolous, have been dismissed and the air has cleared, all that remains for trial are Astro-Med's claims against Western Graphtec. We are confident the jury will find that Astro-Med was severely damaged by Western Graphtec's intentional violations of the Buy American Act and by other unfair competition practices of Western Graphtec. We expect the trial will take place this fall.

SAN DIEGO (SEPT. 23) BUSINESS WIRE - Molecular Biosystems Inc. (NYSE:MB) Monday announced that it has licensed the worldwide exclusive rights to a unique method for analyzing medical ultrasound and magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) signals.

The technology was developed by and licensed from Enelf Inc., a San Diego company formed by joint venture between Enpex Corp. and Elf-Aquitane of France.

The technique licensed by MBI is based on wavelet theory, a method for analyzing transient signals. The current standard of signal analysis is Fourier transformation, which is limited in biomedical applications such as ultrasound and MRI because it cannot analyze short-time signals whose exact shape is unknown.

The wavelet technology developed at Enelf addresses this limitation by using complex mathematical functions concentrated in time and frequency. Enelf has received pioneering U.S. and worldwide patents on its inventions in the field of wavelet signal analysis.

MBI will be focusing its attention on wavelet analysis specifically relating to its work with contrast agents it is developing for ultrasound and MRI. The company's current research in this area is aimed at identifying the specific acoustic ''signature'' of Albunex, MBI's proprietary ultrasound contrast agent.

By understanding this unique property, it may be possible, using wavelet theory, to ''tune'' an imaging system to a specific acoustic ''signature,'' thus enhancing sensitivity of a medical imaging method.

''Our investment in wavelet theory strengthens our long-term commitment to medical imaging,'' said Kenneth J. Widder, M.D., MBI's chairman and chief executive officer. ''This technology is now being widely investigated for defense applications and, we feel, may be a valuable tool in advancing our understanding of the utility of contrast agents in medical imaging.''

Molecular Biosystems Inc., located in San Diego, is a leading biomedical firm developing proprietary medical products that diagnose human disease, including Albunex, an injectable agent for use in ultrasound imaging. In addition, it is a leading developer of direct, non-radioactively labeled genetic probe products.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 24) BUSINESS WIRE - S&P CreditWire 9/24/90--Glaxo Holdings PLC's $750 million U.S. commercial paper program is rated 'A-1'-plus by S&P.

The 'A-1'-plus rating on the company's U.K. sterling commercial paper program is affirmed.

The ratings reflect the company's superior operating and financial performance in recent years, as well as anticipated financial success in the future. Sales for the fiscal year ended June 30 increased 11 pc over the prior year, with pretax profits up by 13.3 pc. Both categories were negatively impacted by exchange rate developments.

U.K.-based Glaxo is a leading international producer of ethical pharmaceuticals, whose principal product, Zantac, is the world's largest selling prescription medicine. An antiulcerant, Zantac has been the primary force behind the company's steep sales growth since its market introduction in 1981.

The drug accounts for about half of consolidated sales, and is patent protected in major markets until at least 1995. The company is heavily dependent on Zantac for earnings.

Glaxo also has a number of other successful drugs, including the antiasthmatic Ventolin and the antibiotic Fortum. Several promising new drugs are in the process of being launched, or are in the development pipeline.

The firm's financial performance has been exceptional, as demonstrated by high profitability and low leverage. The emerging ethical portfolio and the strong financial profile mitigate the risk normally associated with companies that have a large portion of sales derived from a single product, S&P said.

RICHARDSON, TX (SEPT. 24) BUSINESS WIRE - CONVEX Computer Corp. (NYSE: CNX) Monday announced a three-year, $20 million OEM agreement with E-Systems Inc., Dallas, in which CONVEX will supply supercomputer equipment and services to E-Systems for a revolutionary computer data mass storage system.

E-Systems modular automated storage system (EMASS) is a computer data storage and retrieval system that will introduce a new era of technology in the storage of massive amounts of computer data. EMASS is composed of a CONVEX supercomputer server with magnetic disks, a robotically-controlled magnetic tape storage subsystem and an operations console.

Under the terms of the OEM agreement, CONVEX will not only provide hardware and system software, but will also develop special interfaces that will be used with the ER90 storage device.

In addition to the C2 supercomputers that will act as EMASS file servers, the CONVEX Integrated Tape Controller (ITC) will provide the hardware connection to support hierarchical storing and retrieving of data by transferring it between the server's main memory and tape drives.

Users can retrieve a file from EMASS by using standard network protocols such as File Transfer Protocol (FTP) and Network File System (NFS). Transparent to the user, a file can be automatically retrieved through migration software developed by E-Systems and CONVEX.

EMASS magnetic tape storage subsystem uses 19mm D2 digital recorders and cassettes. E-Systems and AMPEX Corp., Redwood City, Calif., are converting a helical scan digital recorder, currently produced by AMPEX for the television broadcast industry, into a computer data storage peripheral/device.

The ER90 storage device will be able to store 75 gigabytes of user data on a single medium-sized cassette. A gigabyte is equal to one billion bytes of computer data.

E-Systems will use the ER90 in its robotically-controlled EMASS which is capable of storing more than 7,000 terabytes of information. One terabyte is equal to one trillion bytes of data or a stack of 9-track tapes as high as the Washington Monument.

The 7,000 terabytes of information can be stored on less than 100,000 D2 helical scan cassettes, or the equivalent of 50 million 9-track computer tapes. The ER90 storage devices and the first two models of EMASS are scheduled for delivery in early 1992.

An example of how EMASS will impact computer data storage is clearly demonstrated in the petroleum industry. According to Fred Sedgwick, CONVEX's petroleum marketing manager, a 3-D seismic survey generates thousands of tapes which are archived. Major energy companies retain this data for many years on millions of tapes stored in climate-controlled warehouses.

E-Systems is a major worldwide developer and producer of electronic and data systems for the government, defense contractors and private industry.

CONVEX Computer Corp., a leading supplier of supercomputers worldwide, was founded in 1982 to design, manufacture, market and service high-performance systems. The company markets its products primarily to scientific engineering and technical users throughout the world for a wide variety of applications in such areas as geophysical research, computational chemistry, computer-aided engineering, image processing, aerospace simulations and molecular biology.

CONVEX, which is listed on the NYSE with the symbol CNX, has sold nearly 700 systems in 33 countries. The installed base now represents nearly half a billion dollars of cumulative revenues from more than 400 customers worldwide. The systems are sold and serviced through direct sales and an extensive distribution network.

HOUSTON (SEPT. 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Tescorp Inc. (NASDAQ:TESCC) Monday announced its acquisition of substantially all of the assets of Electro-Technical Laboratories Inc. (ETL), a Houston-based manufacturer of geophones and geophone cases.

ETL's sales for the most recent 12 months were about $600,000. Customers outside the geophysical industry generated most of these revenues, purchasing equipment for commercial and military applications.

''Although a relatively small factor in the geophysical geophone business, ETL is an important acquisition for Tescorp,'' stated Tescorp President C. Robert Bunch. LONDON (SEPT. 24) BUSINESS WIRE - British Gas (NYSE:BRG) Monday announced it has published, after discussion with Ofgas, new contract gas pricing schedules which remove the incentive for customers to waste gas to qualify for cheaper rates.

Since the new schedules are designed to be financially neutral to British Gas, no general increase in prices has been required - although some customers will pay more and others will pay less.

Firm contract gas customers - those who use more than 25,000 therms a year - will now have the first 25,000 therms a year consumed at each of their premises charged at 40.96 pence per therm.

This effectively solves the tariff/contract gap problem by bringing the cost of the first 25,000 therms of gas into line for all customers. For consumptions over 25,000 therms a year, customers will be charged at the contract rate which applies to their overall annual consumption.

Also, the price table for firm gas in the new Schedules has been simplified. In the past, there were varying prices for each volume band, depending on the number of premises being supplied. Now, there are just two prices for each volume band - one for single premises and one for multiple premises. This has the effect of limiting the financial impact for many multi-premises customers.

Typical increases for those customers paying more will be 5 or 6 percent, while some customers will receive price reductions in the order of 3 to 4 percent.

There is no charge to interruptible gas prices.

The changes to the Schedules will take place from October 1 and will apply as contracts are renewed.

British Gas, headquartered in London, is the largest integrated gas company in the Western world and is primarily involved in the purchase, transmission, and sale of natural gas to domestic, industrial and commercial customers in Great Britain. Important support activities to its marketing efforts include appliance trading and customer service to domestic gas customers. British Gas is also active in the exploration for and production of hydrocarbons both offshore and onshore. Expertise developed in the gas business is offered for sale overseas through the British Gas International Consultancy Service. American Depositary Receipts are traded on the New York Stock Exchange. MUNCIE, IN (SEPT. 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Ball Corp.'s aerospace systems group has been awarded a $24 million contract by NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center to build a helium dewar (a thermally insulated container) to cool the X-Ray Spectrometer (XRS).

XRS is an instrument on the Advanced X-Ray Astrophysics Facility (AXAF) which is scheduled to be launched aboard the shuttle in April, 1997.

The dewar is expected to operate for five years, making it the longest a stored cryogen cooler has ever operated in space. AXAF will be 100 times more sensitive than any other x-ray telescope, over a broader energy range. Data returned by AXAF will have a direct effect on several scientific fields, including plasma physics, atomic and nuclear physics, general relativity, and cosmology.

AXAF is being built by TRW for NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center. Ball also has a contract with TRW to support spacecraft integration on AXAF.

Ball Corp. manufactures and markets packaging, industrial and consumer products, and provides aerospace systems and professional services to the federal sector. The company reported 1989 sales of $1.2 billion.

BEDFORD, MA (SEPT. 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Wellfleet Communications, a leading vendor of high performance internetworking products, Monday announced a major release of its SNMP Network Management Software, SNMP-NMS, available immediately.

Operating on a high performance SUN Microsystems platform, Wellfleet's SNMP-NMS is a standards-based system that offers users an easy-to-use graphics-oriented tool for managing the day-to-day operations of today's rapidly growing internetworks.

SNMP-NMS provides real-time management and control through a graphics map display which is continuously updated as events occur in the network.

The new software, Release 2.0, extends Wellfleet's capabilities by ntegrating the management of independent vendor products, such as the Novell LANtern, Synoptics LattisNet, and multi-vendor routers, within a single Wellfleet management station.

In addition to offering multi-vendor monitoring, Wellfleet has enhanced its graphics map and reporting capabilities by providing such features as software configuration reporting, a central network event window, new point and click configuration tools, and pull-down menu enhancements.

The SNMP standard, which has only been formally defined for TCP/IP environments, has been extended by many vendors to provide access to information not yet specified by the standard.

For example, Wellfleet's own private enterprise extensions for managing its family of multiprotocol router/bridge products include information on its DECnet, XNS, IPX and Appletalk Routers, as well as Spanning Tree Bridges. In addition, Wellfleet continues to be the only vendor who provides integrated SNMP-based access to the T1, E1, Ethernet, Token Ring, FDDI and X.25 circuits in a network.

With today's software release, SNMP-NMS now provides named access to the private enterprise SNMP MIB extensions of multi-vendor products, including:

o ACC, cisco Systems, and Proteon router products;
o Synoptics' LattisNet 1000-series and System 3000 concentrators;
o Novell's LANtern network monitor;
o Novell's FastPath 4 Gateway (formerly marketed by the Kinetics division);
o Xylogic's Annex terminal servers.

Wellfleet Communications is a leading provider of standards-based multiprotocol router/bridges designed for organizations building multi-vendor, mixed media enterprise internetworks.

EXETER, NH (SEPT. 23) BUSINESS WIRE - The board of directors of UNITIL Corp. (AMEX:UTL) Monday declared a quarterly dividend of 56 cents per share on the company's common stock payable Nov. 15, 1990 to shareholders of record Nov. 3, 1990.

This dividend represents an increase of 1 cent over the previously paid quarterly dividend of 55 cents per share and is the second increase in the dividend this year. The current increase follows an increase of 3 cents per quarter which was declared in April.

While the costs incurred as a result of the company's participation in hearings before the New Hampshire Public Utilities Commission (NHPUC) concerning the proposed hostile takeover attempt of UNITIL by Eastern Utilities Associates (EUA) may have some impact on 1990 earnings, Monday's favorable action to increase the dividend reflects the achievement of the company's operating and financial goals to date as well as the belief that it will shortly be returning to a more ''business-as-usual'' climate.

A decision in the NHPUC proceeding is due soon. Based upon the record developed in that case over the last few months, the company believes that EUA has failed to sustain any of its claims of benefits to customers.

$.085	Oct. 12, 1990	Sept. 27, 1990	Sept. 14, 1990

Investment Adviser Commentary:

- The market suffered during August because of political unrest in the Middle East, resulting in skyrocketing oil prices. This increased the threat of both higher inflation and a recession in the United States. - When the stock market declined in mid-August, investors became skeptical of any bond that had even remotely cyclical tendencies. The Fund sold out some of its cyclical credits, including Ampex, Dyersberg, Stone Container and Westwood Group.

- Mutual funds, whose cash inflows sparked the June and July high yield rally became net sellers as investors redeemed shares. Trading was very light. Only the best quality issues changed hands.

NEW BRITAIN, CT (SEPT. 24) BUSINESS WIRE - A settlement agreement has been reached concerning the prudence of Connecticut Light and Power's (CL&P) investment in the Seabrook 1 Nuclear Power Plant.

The proposal has been sent to the Connecticut Department of Public Utility Control (DPUC) for approval.

The settlement was announced by Attorney General Clarine Nardi Riddle, the Office of Consumer Counsel, the Prosecutorial Division of the DPUC, and CL&P. If approved by the DPUC, it will resolve all issues pertaining to the prudence of CL&P's investment in the Seabrook 1 project.

''This settlement finally puts the Seabrook controversy behind us,'' Ms. Nardi Riddle said. ''The 40 percent write-off of NU's Seabrook investment will save ratepayers a significant amount of money over the life of the generating unit.''

Eugene Koss of the Office of Consumer Counsel noted,'' ''CL&P's acceptance of a significant write-down, coupled with clear language ensuring CL&P ratepayers see the benefits of any capacity sales from the facility, are significant benefits for all ratepayers.''

Christopher Blake, director of the Prosecutorial Division of the DPUC stated that he believes ''This settlement represents the most prudent way to resolve the many disagreements surrounding CL&P's investment in the Seabrook project.''

''We feel that this is an equitable settlement for both custmers and shareholders of CL&P,'' said Bernard M. Fox, president and chief operating officer of Northeast Utilities (NU), the parent company of CL&P. ''This eliminates some uncertainty from future rate cases, and should help further stabilize rates for the people we serve.''

Principal terms of the settlement are:

-- $167 million of CL&P's $276.5 million investment will be placed into rate base, effective June 30, 1990 (the date that the plant began commercial operation);

-- CL&P will not seek to recover its remaining investment in the plant in the future; and

-- All proceedings concerning prudence at the project are terminated.

Under the terms of the settlement, incorporation of CL&P's 4.05985 percent ownership of Seabrook 1 into rate base is expected to result in a one-time increase of approximately 1.5 to 2 percent in CL&P customers' rates. This increase, which would take effect following the next rate case, is expected to be offset by an undetermined amount due to the lower fuel costs of nuclear-generated electricity.

MEMPHIS, TN (SEPT. 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Insituform of North America, Inc.

(''INA'') (NASDAQ:INSUA) announced Monday that it had been advised by George and Robert Erikson that they presently have no further intention of pursuing the proposed sale of their controlling interest in CERBCO Inc. (''CERBCO'') (NASDAQ:CERB) to INA.

CERBCO is a parent holding company owning, among other assets, a controlling interest in Insituform East Inc. (''INEI'') (NASDAQ:INEI), one of INA's sublicensees of the Insituform (R) Process for the repair and reconstruction of underground sewers and pipelines.

In commenting on the notification, INA reiterated its belief that INEI is one of INA's most successful licensees and that the strategic goals which INA had sought to achieve in the proposed transaction were in the interests of all shareholders of the companies concerned. Recognizing the collective disappointment which it believed had resulted from the termination of the discussions, INA expressed its hope that the parties would continue to work together to expand their mutual business objectives.

INA stated that the Delaware litigation previously commenced by two CERBCO shareholders against CERBCO, certain present and former directors of CERBCO (including the Eriksons) and INA remained outstanding, and that INA would respond in due course to the allegations raised.

The suit claims that the proposal of the Eriksons to sell to INA their controlling interest in CERBCO is contrary to their fiduciary obligation to the stockholders of CERBCO, and that INA purportedly aided and abetted any such breach of fiduciary duty.

INA also stated that, as a result of the discontinuance of negotiations and failure to consummate the proposed transaction, it expected a charge against earnings in the third quarter resulting from expenses incurred in connection with the transaction and INA's legal and financial review to date of CERBCO and its subsidiaries.

INA provides state-of-the-art techniques for the reconstruction of deteriorated pipelines utilizing the Insituform (R) Process. In addition, INA furnishes its present network of thirteen United States licensees (including INEI) with the Insitutube (R), resins and other related products used by them in the rehabilitation of pipeline systems throughout the country, and is a center of research and development for trenchless pipeline rehabilitation processes.

Through a wholly-owned subsidiary, NU-PIPE Inc., INA plans to introduce the NuPipe (R) Process later this year.

INA serves the needs of America's infrastructure.

By MICHAEL STRAUSS - Comtex Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 24) COMTEX - With the deadline fast approaching for nations to put their cards on the table declaring trade positions in the current Uruguay Round negotiations in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, Congress is concerned the U.S. is playing from a stacked deck.

"With so little agreement achieved to date and so little time remaining in the round, the chair fears that any agreement made in Brussels will involve only vague and unenforceable promises from the rest of the world to liberalize trade while the United States will agree to forego, or to limit, our unilateral and bilateral remedies to unfair foreign trade practices," Rep. John Dingell (D-Mich.), chairman of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on oversight and investigations, said in his opening remarks today on the status of the ongoing trade talks.

U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills, while echoing President Bush's assertion last spring that "no agreement is better than a bad agreement in the Uruguay Round," said a successful conclusion to the trade negotiations is critical to ensure continued economic growth.

"Our objective in these talks is to ensure continued economic growth by opening markets so that trade can expand, and by establishing rules of fair play in areas vital to U.S. competitiveness -- services, investment, agriculture and industries such as high technology and entertainment that depend on the protection of intellectual property," Hills said.

The Uruguay Round encompasses a variety of issues including tariffs, textiles, agriculture, intellectual property, services, and rules which govern market access such as subsidies and antidumping measures.

By October 15, 1990, all "offers" for all sectors must be laid out by the individual nations engaged in the negotiations. Talks are scheduled to conclude by November 23 followed by a closing ministerial meeting in Brussels during the first week of December.

According to Hills, agriculture is the key to concluding successful negotiations.

"That is because agriculture is the top -- and, in some instances, the only -- priority for many agricultural exporting nations negotiating in the round," Hills said. "Without fundamental agricultural reform, they will simply walk out."

Rep. Edward Markey (D-Mass) said members of the telecommunications industry, including MCI, Sprint and AT&T, have opposed telecommunications services in the agreement because they fear it will sanction the existence of telephone monopolies of members of the European Community and Japan.

"Would we be sanctioning monopolies if we signed this agreement?" Markey asked.

"Not at all," Hills replied. "We need a framework for negotiations. We need a multilateral framework to negotiate access around the globe."

Baghdad (SEPT. 24) - The office of the People's Mujahedin of Iran, based in Baghdad, issued a statement Monday saying that 49 alleged drug dealers, including two women, were hanged last week in Iran, according to reports published in Teheran September 22.

The statement said this brought to 122 the number of executions officially announced by the Iranian regime in September.

''Despite extensive executions on ordinary charges, the Khomeini regime delays reporting them. They are only published in its domestic press in order to escalate the atmosphere of terror and intimidation,'' said the mujahedin.

The opposition group also repeated its rejection of a report by the official Iranian news agency Irna saying that the People's Mujahedin organisation had ordered its members and supporters to leave Iraq.

TEHERAN (SEPT. 24) - Iran, which has taken delivery of a first batch of Soviet-made MiG-29 jet fighters, wants to diversify its arms purchases and is currently studying offers from Europe and China, the Teheran Times said Monday.

The newspaper, considered close to President Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani, said the delivery on Saturday of the MiGs, whose number has not been specified, was evidence of the "more than excellent ties" between Moscow and Teheran.

"Iran's military purchases will not be limited to this newly received batch of air fighters. Moscow has announced its agreement to sell more arms to the Islamic republic," the English-language daily said.

"But there is a rather tough rivalry going on as far as arms sales to Iran are concerned," the newspaper added.

"A number of European countries too have informed Teheran of their preparedness to meet Iran's military needs. And it is said Iran is considering these offers as well."

The newspaper said "the Chinese has also come up with good prices for their arms. But Teheran seems to opt for sophisticated and advanced weaponry for its air force in particular."

Iranian officials were studying the various arms offers because "the country should not rely on any one single country as its source for weaponry.

"This Iran has learned as a precious lesson in the course of the war" against Iraq in 1980-1988, the paper added.

The Teheran Times called on Iran to maintain "high military efficiency" in the face of "plots after plots hatched against the Middle East by the imperialist powers."

The report came amid a massive Western military build-up in the Gulf sparked by Iraq's invasion of Kuwait. Iran has denounced the Iraqi occupation as well as the presence of the Western forces in the region.

But Iran has also begun a rapprochement with Iraq, following Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's acceptance on August 15 of Iranian terms for a final settlement to the Gulf war.

LONDON (SEPT. 24) - The board of the British-based Turkish trading company Polly Peck, asked the government Monday to launch an enquiry into stock market turbulence which has led to suspension of Polly Peck shares.

Last week the shares were suspended after they had lost more than half their value in a single trading session. Capitalization of the company fell from about 1.05 billion pounds (about 1.9 billion dollars) to 468 million pounds.

Group chairman, Asil Nadir, who had earlier announced and then withdrawn his own bid for the company, asked Trade Secretary John Redwood on Monday to appoint independent inspectors in the face of what he termed intense and severe attacks by the press.

On Friday an emergency meeting of the board confirmed its confidence in Mr. Nadir. On Thursday officers of the serious fraud office had interviewed Mr. Nadir.

Mr. Nadir has also begun libel actions against the Sunday Times and Observer newspapers in connection with allegations of financial irregularities and support for the share price.

TAIPEI (SEPT. 24) - Wealthy but diplomatically isolated Taiwan on Monday pledged 30 million U.S. dollars to Jordan, Turkey and Egypt to help the three countries address refugee problems arising from Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Foreign Minister Fredrick Chien told reporters that the cabinet and MPs had given their blessing to the humanitarian aid package, one of the largest Taiwan has ever extended.

"As a constructive member of the international community, we have duties and responsibilities to fulfill," he said.

Mr. Chien acknowledged that Taiwan was making the contribution because Jordan helped evacuate some 180 Taiwanese stranded in Kuwait following the August 2 invasion.

But he said the aid would be stopped if Jordan violated a U.N. embargo against Iraq.

Mr. Chien denied a newspaper report that Taiwan would contribute 100 million dollars toward the cost of the U.S. military build-up in the Gulf. "We will provide humanitarian but not military aid," he said.

The United States, which switched diplomatic recognition to Beijing in 1979, has never asked Taiwan to share the cost of the buildup, the minister said.

Taiwan also does not have any official links with the Gulf countries.

BEIJING (SEPT. 24) - A major Chinese construction company has won a contract to build a 285 million dollar copper and gold mining project in Pakistan, China Daily said Monday.

The contract was signed Sunday by China Metallurgical Construction Corporation (MCC) and Pakistan's Resource Development Corporation (PVT) Ltd at a ceremony attended by Pakistan's President Ghulam Ishaq Khan and Chinese President Yang Shangkun, the official English-language newspaper said.

Under the terms of the contract, the MCC would be in charge of building a mine a separation plant and a processing plant in Baluchistan province in Pakistan's southwest, it said.

MCC will provide the Pakistan company with 84 million dollars in credits to buy Chinese machinery and equipment, the newspaper said, quoting an MCC official as saying the loan would be repaid through copper shipments.

Construction is expected to start in two months and is scheduled to be completed in four years, it said.

China Daily said the project was designed to produce 15,000 to 16,000 tons of raw copper and 1,500 to 1,600 kilograms (3,300 to 3,520 pounds) of gold annually.

It said seven other Chinese companies were also involved in the project.

Beijing and Islamabad also agreed to set up joint energy projects Sunday, the last day of Mr. Ishaq Khan's five-day visit, sources here said.

SEOUL (SEPT. 24) - A delegation of Vietnamese government officials and academics is on a week-long visit here to seek South Korean investment in Vietnam, officials said Monday.

The nine-member delegation arrived here Sunday at the invitation of Seoul's Yonsei University, a foreign ministry official said.

The group will explain Hanoi's economic reform programmes and seek investments by South Korean firms in Vietnam, they said.

Hanoi has been isolated since the Vietnam War ended in 1975, but two-way trade with South Korea has been increasing and last year totalled 80 million dollars.

South Korea sent tens of thousand troops to fight alongside those of the United States and South Vietnam during the Vietnam War.

WELLINGTON (SEPT. 24) - One of New Zealand's richest men, property developer Sir Robert Jones, claimed Monday he was the victim of sharebroker rumour mongering.

His comments came as the share price of Robt Jones Investments (RJI) tumbled from a mid-July high of 100 New Zealand cents (62 U.S) to 66 cents (40 U.S.) Monday.

Speaking on Radio New Zealand, Sir Robert said small retail sharebrokers were desperate because they had no business, so they were trying to induce people to sell shares.

One way to do that was to spread rumours about companies going broke.

Sir Robert said he had complained to the New Zealand Stock Exchange in May about one broking house, which subsequently denied spreading any rumour about RJI.

He said a former partner of the broking house had since called and told him that they had been spreading rumours.

"In fact (the former partner) had a stand-up row about the ethics of it, what it was doing to the market, what it was doing to those shareholders and what it was it was doing to our company and what it was doing to New Zealand..... and (he) resigned on the spot."

Sir Robert said if the "nonsense" over the RJI share price continued, privatisation would be a consideration, thought at the moment he was not thinking of it.

"Firstly we would be flooded with letters from shareholders saying 'Don't do it' and secondly the brokers tell us we might pick up 20 million shares at the most -- there's 800 million of them -- but we'd never succeed. We have a very loyal shareholding," he said.

Sir Robert said he had met the company's large American shareholders, "the Rockefellers and others", who knew the company's financial state.

"All they said was 'If New Zealanders want to give them away we'll buy 'em'," he said.

Earlier this year National Business Review named Sir Robert New Zealand's second richest man with a personal worth of 260 million dollars (161 million U.S.).

LONDON (SEPT. 24) - The Kuwait Investment Office (KIO) has sold its 10.1 percent stake in Mount Charlotte Investments to New Zealand entrepreneur Sir Ron Brierley, triggering a bid for the British hotel-operating company from his Brierley Investments Limited.

BIL's British advisor Samuel Montagu and Co. Ltd. announced the 73-pence-per-share offer here, which valued Mount Charlotte at 644 million pounds (1.12 billion dollars).

The takeover offer became mandatory under British takeover rules as BIL's stake rose above 30 percent to 39.9 percent.

No-one was available for comment on the reason for the stake sale at the KIO, the London-based investment arm of the exiled Kuwaiti government.

The sale is the first known significant stake sale undertaken by the KIO since Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on August 2.

Shares in Mount Charlotte Investments were up 7.5 pence at 67 pence after the news Monday morning.

A Mount Charlotte Investments spokeswoman said that the company's board was meeting "to discuss the implications of the bid", and would be making a statement "in due course".

Mount Charlotte Investments became Britain's second biggest hotel operator after buying most of the Thistle Hotels chain from brewer Scottish and Newcastle in September last year for 645 million pounds (1.2 billion dollars).

The company, which owns and operates more than 100 hotels with approximately 14,000 rooms, turned in 47.6 million pounds (88.5 million dollars) pre-tax profit last year.

BIL, a Mount Charlotte shareholder since 1988, served as a sub-underwriter to the rights issue which financed the September 1989 acquisition, and emerged from the deal with an enhanced stake.

BIL Group is an investment holding company listed in New Zealand, Australia and London. It made 665.8 million New Zealand dollars (412 million U.S. dollars) pre-tax profit in the year to the end of June 1989.

BUCHAREST (SEPT. 24) - An explosion at a chemical plant in central Romania Monday killed five people and injured 10, some critically, in the second such incident in less than a month, Romanian radio said.

Quoting the Tarnaveni chemical factory's technical manager, Emanoil Madroiu, the radio said a furnace exploded due to "worn-out mechanical and electrical equipment" which had prevented "normal emanations of gas".

The furnace had been shut down for repairs but exploded two hours after being re-started.

All victims were working near the furnace when it blew up. Five workers suffered serious burns.

Mr. Madroiu said the hospital at Tarnaveni, near Tirgu Mures, lacked the drugs to treat the burns.

Government officials were expected at the stricken plant that employs 5,000 people later in the day.

On September 7 two people were killed and 29 injured in an explosion at installations manufacturing the explosive TNT at the Fagaras chemical plant in the same region.

SYDNEY (SEPT. 24) - Food giant Goodman Fielder Wattie Ltd. (GFW) announced Monday it had suffered a 6.2 percent fall in net annual profit to 117.1 million Australian dollars (97 million U.S.) in the year to June 30.

After abnormal losses of 203 million dollars (168 million U.S.) from investments, the Australian and New Zealand food processor posted a 85.6 million dollar (71 million U.S.) loss compared to a 317 million dollar (263 million U.S.) profit the previous year.

Gross operating profit jumped 21.6 percent to 200 million dollars (166 million U.S.) during the period.

The fall in net profit from 125 million dollars (103 million U.S.) previously was blamed on losses on the sale of non-current assets and was despite revenue surging 16.8 percent to 3.5 billion dollars (2.9 billion U.S.).

Last reporting year the group made 46 million dollars (38 million U.S.) selling plant and equipment assets whereas this financial year it lost four million dollars (3.3 million U.S.) on similar transactions.

Following the abnormal losses on investments such as its 19.9 percent Industrial Equity stake, the directors "re-affirmed their commitment to the group's core food business strategy.

"The directors are therefore able to assure shareholders that these provisions have removed the burden these investment have placed upon the group in recent years.

"Since core food assets now represent the vast majority of the group's total assets, future profits will more fully reflect the results from food operations.

"Restructuring currently under way in Australia will provide further substantial improvements."

The group's Asian operations boosted sales by 83.8 percent to 44.3 million dollars (37 million U.S.) but they recorded an overall loss of 3.5 million dollars (2.9 million U.S.) due to establishment costs and restaurant closures.

BANGKOK (SEPT. 24) - The Thai Navy is shopping around for a helicopter carrier ship for use in patrolling its territorial waters, a senior Thai military officer said here on Monday.

Thai Supreme Command spokesman Lieutenant-General Naruedol Dejpradiyuth said navy commander Admiral Prapat Krisanachan has disclosed plans to buy such a vessel but has not decided from which country.

But, according to diplomatic sources, contacts have been made with West Germany and Italy as possible suppliers of the ship.

Lak Thai, a Thai-language political weekly magazine, said the ship which is to be Thailand's first "flat-top" has been estimated to cost around 7.7 billion baht (3.08 million dollars).

The Thai navy has already ordered four frigates from Italy.

BEIRUT (SEPT. 24) - Britain is negotiating with a senior pro-Iranian religious figure on the three British hostages in Lebanon, who could all be released soon, a Lebanese source close to Teheran said here Monday.

The source said the release of the Britons was being negotiated by the British ambassador here, David Tatham, and the spiritual leader of Lebanon's pro-Iranian Shiite fundamentalists, Sheikh Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah.

He said freedom for the hostages would herald the restoration of diplomatic ties between Iran and Britain as the two sides, represented by Sheikh Fadlallah and Mr. Tatham, were also close to an agreement on the Salman Rushdie affair.

The British ambassador held a first round of talks with Sheikh Fadlallah on September 12 and the two men are to meet again "very soon," the source told Agence France-Presse.

This meeting could begin "the countdown" to the release of the Britons - Terry Waite, 51, the archbishop of Canterbury's special envoy kidnapped in January 1987, John McCarthy, a 33-year old cameraman who disappeared in April 1986 and Jack Mann, a 75-year old former pilot abducted in May 1989.

All three are believed to be held by pro-Iranian Shiite fundamentalist groups, but only Mr. Mann's kidnapping has been claimed - by a group calling itself the Cells of the Armed Struggle.

Sheikh Fadlallah's office has denied that the hostage issue was brought up at the September 12 meeting.

The Foreign Office in London said after the talks that the meeting was part of regular contacts with political and religious leaders in Lebanon.

But it added that Mr. Tatham wanted to "ask them to do everything possible to secure the release of all hostages, not only British hostages."

(In London Monday, the Foreign Office again confirmed the September 12 meeting but would not comment on a possible release.

("The whole question of the hostages by its very nature is sensitive. The position of the U.K. government remains unchanged - that is, we do not do deals," a Foreign Office spokesman said.)

LONDON (SEPT. 24) - Pressure on rates for grain movements out of the U.S. Gulf maintained the decline in shipping freight indices over the past week.

The Baltic International Freight Futures Exchange (BIFFEX)'s Baltic Freight Index (BFI) ended down 15 points from the previous Friday at 1,182 points.

The per ton value of the U.S. Gulf to Japan index fell heavily to 19.910 dollars from 20.708 at the end of the previous week. The decline was justified late in the week when two 52,000-tonners accepted 19.90 dollars per tonne on the route.

Nevertheless rates on the U.S. Gulf to Europe grain route showed some signs of firming.

The index value on the route firmed from 10.758 dollars per tonne to 11.35 in midweek after a number of fixings at better rates.

But the lack of further business at these levels had reduced the index value to 11.25 dollars per tonne by Friday.

Timecharter business was also depressed. The transatlantic round trip index value fell heavily to 7,130 dollars per day from 7,616.667 at the end of the previous week.

PARIS (SEPT. 24) - Wine drinkers in the United States should be permitted to drink French wine from vines treated with a Japanese fungicide which is accepted around the world, and the EEC should take action to accelerate approval, French wine exporters said on Monday.

They demanded action in response to a delay by U.S. officials in ruling whether a grape fungicide is acceptable to American consumers. The product is believed to cause cancer in animals if administered in high doses under laboratory conditions.

Restrictions imposed since the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) had detected minute traces of the fungicide procymidone in samples of Italian and French wines, had cost the EEC wine industry 50 million dollars until July and would cost 150 million dollars by the end of the year, they said.

On Friday the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) said that wines containing the fungicide, which have been banned from sale since February, would continue to be withheld until the summer of 1991 at least, even though they did not pose a threat to health

The Federation of French wine and spirits exporters (FEVS) said that the decision to delay a ruling on use of the fungicide, used to treat vines, was a "serious blow" to European exporters.

The delay ignored approvals given by 26 countries in the European Economic Community (EEC), elsewhere in Europe, South America, Central America, Australia and in East Europe.

"The U.S. administration confirmed in its preliminary examination that the product is innocuous," the FEVS said, and it urged French and EEC authorities to take "the measures which are required".

French viticulteurs were advised not to use the product this year, and consequently the 1990 harvest has been adversely affected.

Procymidone is normally used in the production of 20 percent of wines exported from France, in six percent of wines exported from Italy and two percent of wines exported from Spain.

LONDON (SEPT. 24) - Greenpeace blasted Britain's ecological record on Monday, calling it the "dirty man of Europe" whose government failed to take sufficient measures to protect its environment.

The ecological organization also said Britain might face possible legal action from European Economic Communuity officials for what it said was the worst water and air quality in the whole EEC, in a press conference here.

Greenpeace spokesmen criticised British authorities for continuing to authorize the dumping of radioactive waste into the North Sea, and for failing to give full backing to campaigns to reduce carbon dioxide emissions.

The report, entitled "Why Britain remains the Dirty Man of Europe?", said more "action not words" was needed to rectify the trend.

The Greenpeace conference came one day before British Environment Minister Chris Patten was to present a new bill on environmental protection Tuesday.

He accused Greenpeace of practicing "the worst sort of political pollution".

"Whatever their past record, they have become increasingly shrill and partisan and their latest publications are the worst sort of political pollution replete with distortions, exaggerations and worse," he said.

JAMMU, India (SEPT. 24) - Indian troops shot dead 17 Moslem rebels in India's Kashmir state, where two paramilitary troopers and three civilians also died in unabated Moslem separatist violence, officials said Monday.

Army troops shot and killed the 17 in gunbattles late Sunday and Monday on Kashmir's border when they crossed into India from neighbouring Pakistan, a defence ministry spokesman said here.

A member of the paramilitary Border Security Force (BSF) was also killed in one of the gunbattles, the spokesman said.

India charges Pakistan, which disputes Kashmir's 1947 accession to India, with arming and training Kashmiri Moslem militants battling for secession in India's only Moslem majority state.

Pakistan denies the charges but gives strong moral support to the militants.

The spokesman said 13 AK-47 assault rifles, three light machine guns, three rocket launchers and a quantity of ammunition were seized from the infiltrators.

Meanwhile the Al-Umer Mujahedeen, one of the militant groups spearheading the separatist movement, Monday warned the drivers of light vehicles that they would open fire on any car found on the roads in the Kashnmir Valley for an indefinite period starting Wednesday.

The group's action follows the lifting on September 16 of a similar ban imposed by the Jammu and Kashmir Students Liberation Front.

A statement issued in Srinagar said the Al-Umer Mujahedeen any private or government vehicle, other than taxis or heavy trucks, found plying the roads would be shot at, the Press Trust of India reported.

SINGAPORE (SEPT. 24) - The price of fuel oil rose sharply while Dubai crude managed a smaller increase, the Singapore International Monetary Exchange (SIMEX) said Monday.

Dealers at SIMEX said that October fuel oil jumped to 162.50 U.S. dollars per metric ton at the close, a sharp rise from Friday's closing level of 149.30 dollars.

The 162.50 dollar level was reached at the midday break, and dealers said that news of an increase in tension in the Gulf situation kept the price at that level until the close of business.

They were fearful that the exchange of words between Iraq and the United States could further dampen the oil market, and another round of oil price increases could not be ruled out.

Fuel oil for November delivery, meanwhile, rose 10 dollars from Friday's close of 144.50 dollars per metric ton to close Monday at 154.50 dollars.

In the Dubai crude market, the price for November deliveries closed at 31.80 dollars a barrel, up from Friday's level of 29.55 dollars while December was unquoted.

SIMEX, which trades in gold and foreign currency futures, began trading in oil early this year.

ATHENS (SEPT. 24) - Power cuts, piles of rubbish and silent railway stations were just three aspects of disruption of the Greek economy which seemed set to worsen for a third week on Monday when two leading unions called for another 48-hour strike.

They urged their two million members to join the standstill on Wednesday and Thursday to protest against austerity measures by the conservative government.

Union members went on strike for 48 hours last week, and the government has threatened to respond by requisitioning staff to man banks, public services and electrical supply, while legal action has been launched against electricity unions.

Labor unrest began at the beginning of September when the government announced plans to reform the social security system and pension payments.

Industrial action has affected particularly banks, supplies of electricity, telecommunications, postal services, public transport, local administration and health services.

The banking sector, of which the state controls 90 percent, has been paralyzed since Sept. 6, and no financial transaction is possible. The union of bank employees, which has 50,000 members has decided to extend the strike until Thursday.

Electricity supplies are interrupted continually for hours at a time.

Leaders of the DEI electricity union were to meet Economy Minister Georges Suflias later on Monday, and were due to decide later whether to extend their strike which had been set to end on Monday.

Union president Nocos Bakulis said that the strike did not affect hospitals, airports, military units and schools, but Deputy Health Minister Georges Surlas said that many hospitals services including cold stores for vaccines and oxygen bottles, could not be operated.

Emergency hospital services do not respond to emergency calls because staff are on strike.

Mail has not been delivered, and rubbish has not been collected because dustbin services have been hit by strikes for a week.

Domestic and international rail services are at a standstill.

Munich (SEPT. 24) - Deutsche Aerospace (Dasa), the aerospace unit of the Daimler-Benz concern, said here Monday it sees several new areas of technological cooperation with the Soviet Union, and a first project will focus on cryogen-powered jet planes.

Dasa said talks are being held in Moscow at the international aviation industry exhibition now going on in the Soviet capital.

The first project ready for signing is to be between Deutsche Airbus, which belongs to Dasa subsidiary Messerschmitt-Boelkow-Blohm, and Tupolev for initial development studies for a plane to be powered by cryogen fuel, a mixture of hydrogen and methane.

Erich Riedle, the Bonn government's coordinator for aviation and aerospace affairs, and Soviet Aerospace Minister Appollon Syszov issued a joint statement in Moscow saying that the conditions were in place for the project.

At the Hanover air show four months ago, the Soviet-German ''cryoplane'' project was envisaged for the Airbus plane. Deutsche Airbus had already been studying the concept of hydrogen-powered jet engines, while the Soviets flew a hydrogen-powered Tupolev plane to the Hanover air show.

Other areas of possible cooperation with the Soviets could be in conventional jet engine development and in satellite communications, Dasa said.

A preliminary agreement could be concluded by the end of the year for a joint venture in the field of aviation and aerospace materials, the German company added.

LOS ANGELES (SEPT. 24) - Iraq staged secret military exercises for at least two years in preparation for its invasion of Kuwait, The Los Angeles Times reported Monday.

The newspaper quoted unidentified U.S. officials as saying the August 2 invasion was part of a war plan drafted as many as five years ago by President Saddam Hussein with an eye to seizing eastern Saudi Arabian oil fields, the newspaper added.

As recently as mid-July, Iraq conducted exercises for forces used in the invasion of the oil-rich emirate, the Times reported.

"The United States was so ill-prepared for the invasion that U.S. warships sent to the Gulf region after the lightning attack had to wait days for maps of Iraq and Kuwait to be loaded into computers for use in guiding weapons," the Times quoted the officials as saying.

Washington says U.S. intelligence agencies provided ample warning that Iraq was capable of attack after Baghdad massed forces along the border with Kuwait weeks before the invasion.

But U.S. policy-makers discounted that build-up as a show of force, administration officials say.

Rome (SEPT. 24) - The United Nations' Food and Agricultural Organisation (Fao) proposed an international convention to save the world's rapidly disappearing forests Monday.

At the start of a four-day conference here, Fao general-Secretary Edouard Saouma told the 87-nation Fao committee on Forestry that the annual rate of tropical deforestation is now about 80 per cent higher that it was 10 years ago.

''We are now talking about 17 million hectares per year, and not 10 or 11 as before,'' he said.

In addition to measures aimed at protecting the rain forests, conference participants plan to discuss forest damage in industrialised countries, particularly in Eastern Europe.

The Fao puts the loss of European production due to forest depletion - caused by emissions of sulphur dioxide, ozone and other industrial wastes - at 30 billion dollars.

Saouma warned of the serious environmental consequences of deforestation, including soil degradation and climate change.

Establishment of an international convention on forests was also endorsed by the leaders of the seven leading industrial democracies at their Houston summit meeting in July.

CAPE TOWN (SEPT. 24) - The personal aide to the retired Roman Catholic archbishop of Cape Town was found murdered here on Monday, police said.

A search was launched on Sunday for Father Noel Stanton, 46, when his parents found the door of his presbytery in the Manenberg parish of Cape Town open and the house ransacked.

His body was discovered Monday in a shallow grave between the Philippi black industrial estate and the Mitchell's Plain mixed-race township, police said,

Fr. Stanton had remained personal helper to Archbishop Owen McCann after the latter retired as archbishop of Cape Town in 1984, a church spokesman said.

GENEVA (SEPT. 24) - A new language called "Edifact" for computer treatment of invoices was introduced here on Monday at the Palais des Nations, one that is compatible with all computers for electronic exchanges between government agencies and businesses.

The chairman of a United Nations committee that helped develop Edifact, Etienne Dreyfus, said the invoicing language was the fruit of 10 years of work aimed at "ending paperwork" and at simplifying exchanges among data processing systems worldwide.

Three hundred experts from 30 countries took part in developing the language, which has already been adopted by the French social security system, the Australians customs agency, and others.

Edifact contains all information needed for drawing up business invoices, in a given order, such as identification of the seller and the buyer, designation of the goods, and prices.

Hamburg (SEPT. 24) - Oil prices surged forward on European markets Monday despite assurances by producers that supplies are plentiful.

In London, North Sea Brent crude rose by more than two dollars to reach 36.05 dollars per barrel.

In Rotterdam, October contracts for Brent reached 38.90 dollars per barrel, up 1.50 dollars from last Friday.

Other petroleum product prices also rose in Rotterdam. Light heating oil increased 9.5 percent to 334 dollars per ton, super-grade petrol rose two percent to 430 dollars, and normal grade petrol went up almost three percent to 380 dollars per ton.

Saudi Arabia meanwhile denied having said at the World Bank conference in Washington that a 65 dollar per barrel price would result if war broke out in the Gulf.

Riyadh said that Saudi Finance Minister Mohammad Abalkhail spoke of a much lower price than that in the event of a war, and that Abalkhail told West German Finance Minister Theo Waigel that current oil supplies did not justify the high prices on the market.

With oil prices rising, stock values were falling in Europe. In Frankfurt, the Dax index dropped 30.52 poins, or 2.1 percent, to hit its 1990 low of 1,416.05 points.

Tunis (SEPT. 24) - Foreign ministers of the Arab League will again discuss moving league headquarters back to Cairo during their regular meeting on Thursday, it was announced Monday.

The controversial move is the only item on the agenda.

Tunisia insists on a timetable for the move, while Egypt considers the matter settled.

During the meeting, the organisation's chairmanship for the next half-year will be passed from the Palestine Liberation Organisation to Qatar.

KABUL (SEPT. 24) - At least 10 civilians were injured when mujahedeen gunners fired rockets at the Afghan capital on Sunday night apparently trying to hit a government silo housing Soviet-made surface-to-surface missiles, a foreign ministry spokesman said Monday.

The spokesman said the mujahedeen fired at least six rockets into neighbourhoods surrounding a military area used for housing and launching Scud missiles, wounding 10 civilians.

Mujahedeen shelling of Kabul has lessened in recent weeks following anti-rebel operations in the nearby hills but the resistance have targetted two Scud bases within the city limits.

The Soviet-backed government fires a daily average of two Scuds, which experts say kill or maim anything within half a kilometer (500 yards) on impact.

Hamburg (SEPT. 24) - Heinrich Bauer Verlag, one of Germany's top publishers, said Monday it achieved 2.14 billion marks (1.36 billion dollars) turnover in 1989, up 6.7 percent from the year before.

The company said the growth came almost solely from increased copy sales of its publications, since advertising revenues were virtually stagnant.

Bauer said its foreign business turnover reached 395 million marks, a 28.5 percent gain over 1988 results. The biggest success was its new women's magazine ''First for Women'' in the United States where per-issue sales now reach nearly three million copies.

Bauer said that it was now in the process of buying several regional newspapers in East Germany. Investments of some 60 million marks had already been made in East Germany.

Beirut (SEPT. 24) - At least three people were killed in heavy clashes between rival Shiite groups in southern Lebanon Monday, police said.

The battles between the Syrian-backed Amal militia and the pro-Iranian Hezbollah flared up as Syrian President Hafez Assad conducted talks with Iranian leaders on regional issues - including the inter-Shiite feud.

The battles, waged with artillery and rockets, took place in the Iqlim Toufah region, about 43 kilometres southeast of Beirut.

The two sides have been locked in combat in this strategic region bordering Israel since December. Over 3,000 people have been killed in two years of fighting between Lebanon's Shiite groups.

Hezbollah radio charged that Amal was trying to overshadow the Syrian-Iranian summit in Teheran by igniting the battles.

LONDON (SEPT. 24) - Brent North Sea crude prices breached the 37 dollars a barrel level in London on Monday as fears of a war in the Gulf intensified.

Brent for November delivery was quoted at 37.25 dollars a barrel in early afternoon trading against 34.80 dollars at the opening and 34.60 dollars at Friday's close.

The rise was due to an "increased view that a military conflict is in the offing" in the Gulf, said Nick Clayton, an analyst with Smith New Court, adding that the price could go as high as 50 dollars if Gulf oil installations were damaged.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein threatened at the weekend to destroy Gulf oil installations and to attack Israel if the United States started a war in the Gulf.

HELSINKI (SEPT. 24) - The Soviet Union has accepted the Nordic countries' offer to update two large nickel smelters in the Kola Peninsula, it was announced here Monday.

An agreement in principle was reached at talks here between Finnish Prime Minister Harri Holkeri and Soviet Vice-Prime Minister V.H. Doguzhiev, who is responsible for environmental affairs in the Soviet government, a Finnish government spokesman said.

Updating of the Kola smelters would cost between 2.5 and 3.5 billion Finnish marks (660 million and 920 million dollars).

Low-interest loans for the purpose will be available from credit establishments of Finland, Norway and Sweden as well as from the Nordic Investment Bank.

The technology offered to the Soviet Union has been developed by Finland's state-run mining and processing company Outokumpu, and the Norwegian Elkem company will deliver part of the smelters.

Finland and other Nordic countries have during the past few years expressed concern about the pollution caused to the forests in Northern Scandinavia by Soviet industry in the Kola Peninsula.

The two smelters, built some 50 years ago in Petsamo near the Finnish border and in Montchgorsk, 200 kilometers (125 miles) east of the border, emit annually some 470,000 tons of sulphur -- twice that of Finland's total emission.

The Finns say that with the Outokumpu technology 90 to 95 percent of the sulphur emission could be cleaned.

PRETORIA (SEPT. 24) - South Africa's official inflation rate, as measured by the Consumer Price Index (CPI), showed an increase in August for the first time this year, rising to 13.6 percent, according to figures released here Monday.

The year-on-year inflation rate was 13.6 percent in August, up from 13.3 percent in July and the same as June's 13.6 percent, the government's Central Statistical Services (CSS) said.

Before May, South Africa's inflation rate had topped 14 percent for more than a year.

Food prices remained the main contributor to the inflation rate. In the year to August these prices rose by a far greater percentage than the inflation rate at 17.6 percent.

HANOVER, West Germany (SEPT. 24) - West German tyremaker Continental said Monday it had rejected a proposal from Italian group Pirelli to merge their tyre-making operations but agreed to continue negotiations.

Continental considered the Italian group's proposal "in its current form" as a hostile takeover bid, but "the door remains open for other negotiations," Continental board chairman Horst Urban told reporters.

"Not like this, Mr. Pirelli," he said.

Pirelli had proposed that the two groups combine their tyre activities worldwide, with Pirelli taking a stake in the Continental parent company and possibly acquiring a majority stake.

Continental is the world's fourth-largest tyre group with an eight-per-cent market share, followed by Pirelli in fifth place with a 5.9 percent share.

A merger would not affect the current rankings since the three market leaders have much larger shares: Michelin of France has 24 percent, Goodyear of the United States 19 percent and Bridgestone-Firestone of Japan 17 per- cent, according to Continental.

However, Mr. Urban said cooperation between Pirelli and Continental could strengthen their position in a highly competitive market.

He refused to indicate what form this cooperation might take.

A merger of their tyre activities would create an operation with annual sales totalling 13 billion Deutsche marks (8.1 billion dollars).

Mr. Urban also released details of the complex Pirelli proposal put forward September 17.

Continental would buy Pirelli's tyre activities for between 1.8 billion and 2.2 billion marks (1.1 billion and 1.3 billion dollars), a price which Mr. Urban said was too high, given that the stock market capitalisation of Pirelli Tyre Holding was currently only about 800 million marks.

HAVANA (SEPT. 24) - The communist party newspaper Granma said it would be Cuba's only nationwide daily starting October 1, as the government plans to close or scale down other publications due to a shortage of Soviet-supplied paper.

The Cuban press, totally dependent on Soviet-made newsprint, thus becomes the second major victim of a reduction in Soviet aid to Cuba, which has vehemently rejected market-oriented economic reforms adopted by former socialist nations.

In August, the orthodox communist government of Cuban President Fidel Castro unveiled energy conservation measures prompted by cuts in deliveries of Soviet oil.

Granma said it would be available nationwide Monday through Friday but only in Havana on Saturdays.

It said two daily newspapers -- that of the youth communist league and the newspaper of Cuba's labor unions -- will become weekly's. Another daily, the army newspaper, will be closed down "so long as current conditions continue."

The weekly newspaper Bohemia and 15 provincial newspapers will continue operations so long as paper supplies permit it and the national press is not affected by their publication, Granma said.

The rest of Cuba's newspapers, magazines and publications will close down, and journalists working for them are urged to seek jobs at broadcast media, it added.

Cuba's two paper mills have closed due to a lack of paper pulp, Granma noted.

MARSEILLES, FRANCE (SEPT. 24) - A pilot was killed Monday when a gust of wind sent his fire-fighting Tracker plane crashing into a mountainside in Corsica, the fire department said.

The accident happened near Galeria, about 50 kilometers (30 miles) south of Calvi, the capital of the French Mediterranean island.

Fires in Corsica and the south of France have been rekindled since the Mistral a northerly wind gusting to 140 kilometers-per-hour (90 miles-an-hour), started blowing Monday morning.

In Cannes, several buildings were evacuated when fires reached the seaside resort city. Several elderly persons were taken to hospitals and treated for smoke inhalation.

PARIS (SEPT 24) - French industrial group Bollore announced Monday that it has strengthened its stake in Rivaud by buying the shares held in that group by Sasea and Comfinance.

The communique said Bollore and the Rivaud Group want to "develop a joint industrial strategy".

The whole deal is worth 1.7 billion francs (320 million dollars), the announcement said.

Bollore acquired 44.5 percent of Socfin (Financiere des Caoutchoucs) and 36.5 percent of Plantations des Terres Rouges, two Rivaud Group holding companies, from Sasea and Comfinance, for 1.3 billion francs in cash.

At the same time, it acquired 400 million francs' worth of the Rivaud Group's listed shares in exchange for 19.9 percent of Bollore Energie, 20 per cent of Calpam (Netherlands, oil products), and 20 percent of Satram (Switzerland).

The communique said that 700 million francs of the 1.3-billion-franc cost of the first transaction will be financed by Albatros Investissement, which will put through a cash capital increase of a billion francs, "750 million of which are already assured".

The remaining 600 million francs will be financed by CLinvest of the Credit Lyonnais banking group, which will invest 350 million francs directly in the capital of Compagnie des Glenans, a new holding company that is a subsidiary of Albatros Investissement, and 250 million francs in Sofical shares, making a 10 percent stake acquired from Bollore Technologies.

Following the operations, Compagnie des Glenans, grouping all Albatros Investissement holdings in the Rivaud Group, will be 79 percent controlled by Albatros and 21 percent by CLinvest.

Lagos (SEPT. 24) - Some 1,000 angry Nigerian Moslems stormed the U.S. consulate in Kaduna, northern Nigeria, at the weekend protesting the U.S. presence in the Gulf, the mass-circulation Times newspaper reported here Monday, quoting American embassy sources.

Fifteen of the demonstrators, who converged on the consulate on Friday, were said to have climbed the walls of the premises and set the American flag alight. No casualties were reported.

The demonstrators chanted anti-American slogans criticising the U.S. military build-up and accused Washington of ''soiling Islamic holy places'' in the Gulf.

There was no immediate official Nigerian reaction to a reported protest by the U.S. ambassador to Nigeria Lannon Walker over the demonstration. Nigeria is a multi-religious country, with Moslems dominating the northern part of the nation.

The military government, after an initial statement condemning the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, had in the past week received the envoys of Iraq, Kuwait and Iran, using the Iranian envoy's visit on Wednesday to announce the government's support for U.N. sanctions against Iraq.

PARIS (SEPT. 24) - The Paris Bourse was whacked again on Monday, as the CAC-40 stock price index fell by 2.66 percent on the day, after opening with a loss of 1.14 per cent.

Operators said the market had been depressed early in the day, and the mood worsened late in the session when Wall Street opened lower.

"We're just following the other markets down", one annoyed trader commented. "There's no reason to buy" (stocks), said a trader for a major bank.

Operators mentioned the usual reasons for the somber Bourse mood: the Gulf conflict, high oil prices, and a limping U.S. economy. They said that under present circumstances, there could well be a bloodbath on the Tokyo exchange on Tuesday.

Volume was low due to shortage of cash, and only arbitragers were much in evidence on a Bourse abandoned by investors.

Financial issues again suffered, UFB Locabail plunging by 8.9 percent and Compagnie Bancaire, its parent company, more than six per cent. BNP and Credit Lyonnais investment certificates were also manhandled.

Compagnie de Suez ended at 277.90 francs, off 5.2 percent on the day, against the public sale price of 317 francs when the firm was privatized in October 1987.

The biggest drops Monday were suffered by Radiotechnique, off 11.6 percent, and Moulinex, down 9.7 percent.

ROME (SEPT 24) - Director-general Edouard Saouma of the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) proposed Monday the establishment of an international convention to save the world's fast-disappearing forests.

The annual rate of tropical deforestation is now about 80 percent higher than it was 10 years ago, Mr. Saouma told representatives from 87 countries meeting in Rome to discuss the alarming deforestation problem.

"We are now talking about 17 million hectares per year, and not 10 or 11 (million) as before," he said.

"Furthermore it is now clear that forests in industrialized countries, especially but not exclusively those in eastern Europe, have been severely damaged by pollution caused by emissions of sulphur dioxide, ozone and other industrial wastes," the FAO director-general said.

"The annual loss of production from forest depletion is estimated at 30 billion dollars in Europe alone," Mr. Saouma said.

He warned of the serious environmental consequences of deforestation, including soil degradation and climate change. "Environmental protection is essential to the survival of the environment," he said.

The FAO director-general called for the setting up of a tropical forest fund to "provide financial and technical backstopping and planning support for the developing countries".

"At the same time, however not enough thought is given to providing the forestry sector with the indispensable additional resources," he said.

Plans for an international convention on forests was included in the agenda of the last G-7 (seven leading western industrialised states) meeting in July in Houston.

The convention should make the transfer of funds from the North to the South possible under particularly favorable conditions, Mr. Saouma said.

Some 81 developing countries have requested aid for threatened tropical forests.

Africa is the most threatened by deforestation, acording to FAO figures, with a loss of 4.8 million hectares each year between 1981 and 1990, or 1.7 per cent of its entire forest cover.

Asia lost 4.7 million hectares or 1.4 percent per year of its forest cover in the same period, and Latin America lost 7.3 million hectares or 0.9 percent.

Bonn (SEPT. 24) - The West German government plans to spend an extra 7.5 billion marks (4.8 billion dollars) on social security payments for East Germany as part of a supplementary budget to help cover the cost of unification, officials said here Monday.

Finance Minister Theo Waigel, who held talks with ministerial colleagues Monday on unification costs, will present the budget to the cabinet on Friday for a decision expected a week later.

Last month, Waigel said he was seeking approval for extra budget spending of some 20 billion marks (12.7 billion dollars).

But the amount is expected to rise as a result of an interest-free loan of 13 billion marks to the Soviet Union to help cover the cost of troop withdrawals from East Germany and a 3.3-billion-mark payment to countries affected by the Gulf crisis.

LONDON (SEPT. 24) - Growing concerns at recessionary pressure, particularly in the United States, weighed on London Metal Exchange (LME) copper and zinc prices here Monday.

Three-months copper was quoted at 1,462 pounds per ton in after-hours kerb trading, against 1,456 in afternoon ring deals and 1,508 on Friday, while three-months zinc was quoted at 1,380 dollars against 1,367 and 1,418.

Aluminium was also weaker. The metal has firmed strongly in recent weeks on worries over the status of existing and proposed refinery capacity in the Gulf States area.

However, traders said that its failure last week to break conclusively above the 2,100 dollar per ton mark for three-months metal had led to profit-taking at higher levels.

Three-months aluminium was quoted at 1,993 dollars per ton on the kerb against 1,990 on the ring and 2,098 on Friday.

KATHMANDU (SEPT. 24) - Armed dissidents entered the tiny kingdom of Bhutan and clashed with government troops, leaving casualties on both sides, a spokesman for the dissidents and Bhutanese officials said Monday.

Opposition Bhutan Peoples Party (BPP) spokesman D.P. Kafle said more than 200 people were killed and more than 1,500 arrested in the violence between Wednesday and Saturday. He also claimed troops raped women demonstrators.

The dissidents are of Nepalese origin and are now living in the Indian border state of West Bengal, Mr. Kafle said by telephone from Birtamore, 390 kilometers (240 miles) southeast of here.

A spokesman for the Bhutanese Embassy in New Delhi confirmed that there was "some violence" in the south, but dismissed as "absolutely unbelievable" the report that 200 people were killed.

"Some dissidents came up (across the border) to the Samchi area as well as other parts of southern Bhutan with guns, rifles and homemade hand grenades, with no provocation," the spokesman said.

He said there "may be one or two casualties on our side," referring to government troops, and "perhaps some casualties" among the dissidents. The spokesman added that he was "not sure" if anyone had been killed.)

Bhutanese of Nepalese origin are the majority in southern Bhutan and form 30 to 40 per cent of the total Bhutanese population. They charge that King Jigme Singye Wangchuk is trying to achieve the "Bhutanesation" of the country.

They claim government discrimination in employment, and violations of human rights. The king introduced a code of conduct last year banning the Nepalese language and dress.

Mr. Kafle said that between September 19 and 22, a total of 22,000 people joined protest marches in seven areas in southern Bhutan.

He claimed that at Sebroo, 420 people were trapped by army troops and 40 of them were shot dead by the district officer, Lhakpa Dorje. Many others were pushed over a mountain slope, he said, quoting his party's reports.

The BPP spokesman said demonstrators belonging to the Bhutan Students Union and Bhutan Forum for Protection of Human Rights (BFPHR) last Thursday were blocked by bulldozers when they tried to cross a border bridge.

JOHANNESBURG (SEPT. 24) - A landmark agreement Monday established South Africa's first non-racial local government body for its largest commercial city, Johannesburg, and neighbouring Soweto, a government official confirmed.

Known as the Soweto Accord, the agreement brings together the Transvaal Provincial Administration (TPA), a local government body, and four representatives of the country's largest urbanised black township Soweto in a Metropolitan Chamber.

The white-run Johannesburg City Council will be invited to become the sixth signatory of the accord, said TPA official Fanie Ferreira, and is expected to do so Tuesday.

The Chamber will plan a new non-racial city government that eventually could be run off a single budget and thereby address the many disparities between impoverished Soweto and wealthy Johannesurg, TPA official Fanie Ferreira said.

Apartheid policies, which have governed the country for decades, have thusfar seen racially-segregated areas controlled separately.

"This is just the start of trying to solve many important problems which come to the fore in the negotiating process," Mr. Ferreira told AFP.

The development is in line with current government thinking to regionalise the country in attempts to solve regional problems and bring about non-racial democratic government, he added.

ABIDJAN (SEPT 24) - About 200 armed troops ringed Abidjan university campus in Ivory Coast's biggest city on Monday after students rampaged through the grounds to stop lectures resuming.

Using sticks and stones, the undergraduates smashed windows in faculty and administrative buildings, and damaged a score of cars, most of them belonging to staff. Several were overturned.

Some riot police were stationed at the vice-chancellor's office, which was a prime target. Most students eventually went home and by late afternoon about 50 police remained on campus.

Ivory Coast authorities closed the university down in April during student unrest in which a policeman killed a college pupil.

Courses were resumed two weeks ago but have been constantly disrupted because of opposition in the main student union, FESCI, which says it represents two-thirds of the country's 22,000 students in higher education, and SYNARES, a graduate student union.

They want a completely new academic year to make up for the missing months this year, but the authorities are planning final exams at the end of this calendar year.

Students were angered by a televised speech Sunday by University rector Bakary Thio-Toure which was critical of student union demands.

Clashes broke out last Monday between students opposed to the resumption of clashes and administration supporters. The rector announced the following day measures supporting the students and decided to create "vigilante committees" to guarantee safety on campus.

But the formation of vigilante committees raised the ire of the graduate student union which organised a campus demonstration last Friday.

Student agitation for a complete new academic year began when students returned to classes on September 12. Despite some government measures to appease the students, FESCI said it was determined to follow through on its demands for a complete new calendar year.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 24) - The top policy-making body of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) Monday said higher oil prices must be passed on to consumers, and instructed the fund to get ready to assist countries seriously hit by the economic fall-out from the Gulf crisis.

The IMF's 22-country Interim Committee endorsed a strategy aimed at countering inflationary pressures and minimizing the adverse impact of the crisis on economic growth prospects.

In a communique, the panel, consisting of finance ministers of industrial and developing countries, cautioned that any attempt to "insulate domestic energy prices through subsidies or price controls" or to offset dearer oil by wage increases, "would only serve to fuel inflationary expectations."

It said this would in turn require "tighter fiscal and monetary policies" at a later stage.

IMF Managing Director Michel Camdessus said this was the most important policy message conveyed by the text, which also said "credible actions to lower fiscal deficits" remained "urgent" and stressed the "crucial role" of "stability-oriented monetary policy" in preventing a wage-price spiral.

Structural reforms by industrial and developing countries alike formed the third leg of the strategy, the communique indicated.

MOSCOW (SEPT 24) - The nuclear energy program in the Soviet Union shares a common problem with that in Western countries -- everyone wants more energy, but no one wants a nuclear reactor in his own backyard.

A number of industrial enterprises have been informed that their energy supply will be cut by 20 percent this winter, Deputy Minister of Energy and and Atomic Industry Boris Nikipelov told a group of reporters here last week.

More than four years after the Chernobyl disaster the nuclear energy program is confronted with a growing ecology movement hostile to nuclear energy, while central authorities have slipped into a state of paralysis.

Current civilian nuclear capacity has risen to 37.5 (gigawatts) at 15 nuclear facilities, with six more under construction. But that is far short of the 1985 nuclear energy program goal of 190 GW to 200 GW by the year 2000.

Mr. Nikilev admitted that even if all current capacity were utilised, the program could reach 80 GW, and possibly 115 GW by the year 2000. But in August the ministry predicted a more attainable increase of only 22 GW.

The hurdles facing the nuclear energy program are not only technical.

In Rostov, a first reactor is scheduled to go on line this winter, but regional authorities are opposed.

In Bashkirskaya, in the Crimea, in Tartarskaya, the story is the same -- the local people don't want nuclear reactors.

In Armenia, the nuclear power plant that stood up to a severe 1988 earthquake, has not been able to resist public pressure. It has been closed.

Chernobyl's remaining nuclear reactors are to be shut down by 1995.

The power plant in Gorki, expected to be completed soon, has been rejected by local authorities, something all the more regrettable, according to Mr. Nikipelov, because it is equipped with a highly reliable ATS passive safety system.

LUSAKA (SEPT. 24) - Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda proposed here Monday that Zambia's constitution be changed this year to allow a multi-party democracy, and called off a proposed referendum on the issue.

Mr. Kaunda, president of Zambia since it became independent from Britain in 1964, has been a consistent supporter of Zambia's one-party system. But he is facing growing pressure from advocates of a multi-party system.

He also proposed Monday the liberalisation of labour legislation that would dilute the power of his main political opponent, the Zambian Congress of Trade Unions (ZCTU).

Mr. Kaunda was addressing the 600-member national council of his ruling United National Independence Party (UNIP), which is to rule on his proposals by Saturday. UNIP turned Zambia into a one-party state in 1972.

The president said Zambia, as a developing country, could not afford the "luxury" of a political debate on whether to retain its one-party system.

The referendum had been scheduled for August next year but the associated campaign, which began three months ago, would lead to bloodshed if allowed to continue, he said.

"I do not want to split this country into two camps. I do not want to encourage the campaign for or against multi-parties because I see bloodshed at the end of the road and I see disaster for the country," he said.

The decision to abandon the referendum and introduce a multi-party system would deny his political opponents, the supporters of such a system, the chance to divide the country and create anarchy, he said.

Mr. Kaunda also proposed the liberalisation of labour legislation that would allow trade unions to operate independently of the ZCTU, which he accused of "behaving like a political party".

The ZCTU has been at the forefront of campaigns against Mr. Kaunda's leadership and its leader, Fredrick Chiluba, has been the most eloquent campaigner for a multi-party democracy.

The ZCTU has drawn much of its strength as a mass labour movement from a law making it mandatory for all trade union organisations to join the congress.

TEHERAN (SEPT. 24) - Syrian President Hafez al-Assad met here Monday with the leader of an Iraqi Shiite opposition group based in the Iranian capital to discuss the Gulf crisis, the group said.

Mr. Assad said in his meeting with Mohammad Baqir al-Hakim, head of the Supreme Council of the Islamic Revolution of Iraq, that the opposition should "guard their unity in the face of the Baghdad regime".

"Syria will stand by the Iraqi opposition," the group quoted the Syrian president as saying. "Syria is fully prepared to confront the dangers created by the Iraqi aggression against Kuwait."

The opposition group told Agence France-Presse that the meeting lasted more than two-and-a-half hours, during which Mr. Hakim said the Iraqi people had been "taken hostage by the Baghdad regime".

The Shiite leader recently said he could immediately mobilize 50,000 fighters against the government of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

In the Syrian capital, Kurdish guerrilla chief Jellal Talibani said earlier Monday that Iraqi opposition forces were close to agreeing on "common action" against Baghdad.

"Points of view are converging and there will be an announcement soon, during a general congress, of an agreement on the general principles of common action " added the leader of the Patriotic Union of (Iraqi) Kurdistan.

Mr. Talibani said the meetings were taking place in Damascus, while sources close to Islamic opposition parties said the congress itself could take place in Syria or Lebanon.

Syria and Iraq are long-standing rivals.

BUCHAREST (SEPT 24) - The chief of police in Romania, General Corneliu Diamandescu, has been "dismissed" and will be "transfered to other duties", the state news agency Rompres reported on Monday.

Gen. Diamandescu will move from the Interior Ministry, where he was a secretary of state, to the Defence Ministry, Rompres said.

The move came the day after the general punished several police officers for allegedly failing to stop demonstrators "assaulting" members of the ruling party during a ceremony Saturday commemorating the December revolution.

He had said that police on duty at University Square were "unconcerned" when about a dozen people attacked a delegation of the National Salvation Front who had come to lay a wreath in honour of those killed there last December.

Gen. Diamandescu took over as police chief on April 25 after his predecessor, General Jean Moldoveanu, had been sacked for opposing the use of force against anti-government demonstrators.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 24) - The United States Monday termed "outlandish and outrageous" a weekend threat by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to attack Israel and to destroy Arab state oil fields if Iraq were attacked by U.S. forces.

"We're not going to respond to yet another outlandish and outrageous statement " said State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler.

Mr. Hussein vowed Sunday that Gulf oil states and Israel would be swept away in a torrent of violence if Iraq were strangled by a U.N. trade embargo and attacked by the United States.

Miss Tutwiler characterized the Iraqi leader's threats as part of "a series of seven weeks' worth of irresponsible statements."

In Iraq, nine Americans were arrested over the weekend, bringing to at least 93 the number of Americans detained there, the State Department said.

One of the nine Americans arrested was sick and was among 69 people the United States had pressed the Iraqi Government to evacuate immediately because they needed emergency medical care, Miss Tutwiler said.

She added that it was "particularly deplorable" that Iraq had ignored the U.S. demand and instead arrested those who are ailing.

Another American was arrested Saturday as he about to board the last plane to evacuate Americans out of Baghdad, said the spokeswoman.

There were 600 to 700 American men, women and children still in Iraqi-occupied Kuwait and another 300 to 350 in Iraq, she said. She declined to be more specific, saying many of them were in hiding.

Miss Tutwiler said the United States would do nothing to either prevent or facilitate attendance by Iraqi Foreign Minister Tarek Aziz at the U.N. General Assembly which began debate in New York on Monday.

She said no decision had been made on whether Mr. Aziz would be allowed to come to the United States aboard an Iraqi aircraft, or be required to take an airliner of another nationality.

Mr. Hussein's remarks on Sunday, read by his spokesman on Baghdad television, came two days ahead of a ministerial-level meeting of the U.N. Security Council to determine if the U.N. trade embargo against Iraq should be extended to include air traffic.

The sanctions on land and sea trade were approved by the council after the August 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 24) - President George Bush told a group of Arab-Americans

Monday that ethnically-motivated hate crimes in the United States ''have no place in a free society'' and ''must end''.

Bush addressed about 200 Arab-Americans, telling them ''bigotry and hate still do exist in this country'' and that he was aware of the death threats and harassment.
